

Chapter 729

The other one smoked a cigarette and laughed.

Narrowed eyes shone with a familiar glint.

"It's earned!"

Jenny Jing looked at him, knitting his brows slightly.

I don't know if it was her delusion, but she always felt that there was something familiar about the man in front of her.

It was obviously a face that had never been seen before, but the gesture of the cigarette between his hands, the smile when he narrowed his eyes, and....

She shook her head.

No, it can't be!

Why is he here?

Jenny and Mo Nan didn't have a chance to speak, the two men closed the carriage door after a glance at them.

Then, get in the front and start the car.

The car continued to drive up the rough mountain road again, Jenny and Mo Nan didn't speak to them, and those two didn't pay much attention to them either.

Looking at them as well-behaved, they just thought they had been taught a lesson before at Uncle Si's.

Once people fall into this situation, they are usually not willing to accept their fate at the very beginning.

More or less, there will be resistance.

But once it became clear that no matter how much she resisted, she would not be able to escape her fate in the end, it was only natural that she would give up resisting.

It was their idea.

Besides, in their hearts, they don't seek wealth or harm their lives, they just want to marry a wife, you just have to be good and follow me, I won't deliberately mistreat you, what is there that you can't think of?

Because of this, finding that Jenny and Mo Nan did not even have the slightest tendency to resist, the two brothers did not think much of it at all.

Just think of them as having already accepted reality.

The car continued to move slowly down the road.

Jenny and Mo Nan sat up from the hard wooden board, and now that they knew they were awake, they simply didn't pretend.

It's just that I still don't dare say anything until I know what the other side is all about.

The good news was that the two people in front of them, probably because they were in a good mood, and seeing as they were girls, unarmed, and so obedient, they didn't take too many precautions.

After all, it was the middle of nowhere, there was no one outside, and the back of the carriage was locked, so if they didn't come to open the door, it would be a problem for the two of them to even get out, and what could possibly happen.

So, the two people in front of us are not in a hurry.

As we drove down the road, we chatted.

From their chatting conversation, Jenny vaguely heard who and what they were.

These two people should be the ones that Uncle Four said before, not far from that town.

Because to hear what they said, the words contained that town.

Previously, Jenny had heard that man call the other man brother, and thought these were two brothers.

But it was only from their conversation that they realized that they were not brothers, but merely cousins.

But that's enough.

They had heard from an acquaintance yesterday that there were two new girls here who needed a buyer.

It just so happened that they were both also planning to buy a wife each, so they contacted this side.

But they didn't know Uncle Si, and usually contacted from the one in the middle if they needed anything.

And because of that, it was the same man who had gone to Uncle Four's house to pick up the man before.

And they were bought from this man by another person for 30,000.

In other words, Jenny and Mo Nan, were resold twice in this short day.

It's ridiculous enough to think about.

Mo Nan kept the knife pressed against his waist.

Fortunately, these people were not on guard against them, so they didn't think to search them, or else they would have been in trouble if they had searched for the knife.

The road was very bumpy, and I don't know how long it had been driving, but just by the faint glimmer of light coming in through the gap between the car doors, Jenny and Mo Nan knew that it was now estimated to be five or six in the morning, when the sky showed a glimmer of dawn.

They don't know what will happen when they do get to town, there might be a more difficult situation waiting for them.

And now that they've been taken out of that mountain by these two, they don't have to worry about not knowing the way out.

And when you get to town, with electricity and communications, the rest of the story is much easier to deal with.

Therefore, Jenny observed through the gap in the car door for half a moment, then lowered his voice in Mo Nan's ear and said, "After the car stops later, try to escape."

Mo Nan had the same idea, so he nodded.

The two cats were sitting in the car.

After waiting a little longer, the car suddenly stopped.

She heard one of the men in front of her say something in tongues to the other man.

The other one said, "Well, hurry up, I'll wait here."

The man nodded and got out of the car and left.

Jenny Jing listened intently to the movement outside, heard the footsteps fading away, and exchanged a glance with Mo Nan.

She then raised her hand and patted the carriage wall panel.

"Hey!Hello?I have an upset stomach and I need to go to the bathroom."

She shouted.

There were footsteps outside, like the man had jumped out of the car and was coming to the back.

However, the others didn't come right away to open the door for them as they thought they would.

Instead, standing right next to the wall of the car she'd just shot, through a half-thick layer of metal, she asked, "What are you doing?"

Jenny pursed her lips and repeated, "I need to go to the bathroom."

"Now, huh?" The man seemed to frown, his tone somewhat unhappy, "Not now, but don't worry, there's still more than half an hour to go to town, if you really can't hold it in, just pee in the car, it's fine, I'll help you clean up later."

Jenny: "....."

Neither she nor Mo Nan blacked out.

Where did I get the idea that they would answer like that?

The other guy wouldn't open the door, so they couldn't just break the door down and break out.

After all, it's tin, not wood.

Forget about the two of them being bare-handed, even if they were given a knife each, it would be hard to slice through such a thick sheet of metal.

Jenny had no choice but to patiently beg, "No, I, I want to go to the big one!"

She was afraid that the other party would refuse again, and even added, "Don't worry, I won't run away, you can really come with me, or you can take some kind of rope to tie me up, I'm a weak woman, I'm not familiar with this place, I can't run away."

The man hesitated at her words.

Perhaps out of pity, he said, "Well, you'll have to wait a little longer! It's just me now, and I'll take you when my brother gets back."

Jenny heard that there was no other way but to remain silent.

After about two minutes, there was a sound of footsteps from far and near outside.

Jenny and Mo Nan would know that it was his brother who had returned.

They exchanged a glance, and Jenny slapped the car door again.

Chapter 730

"I can't, my stomach really hurts, brother, is your brother back yet?"

There was an impatient voice from the man outside, "Come back here, come back here."

He said, coming to the back.

Soon, the car door zipped open.

The eyes were brightly lit.

It was only then that Jenny and Mo Nan could see that there was still a white wilderness around them, and they didn't know where they were going.

And there, in front of her, stood the man who had just spoken to her.

is looking at her impatiently there, "Who are you guys to use the bathroom?"

Jenny even raised his hand, "It's me, I want to go."

She looked like she was in a hurry, with a clear, pretty little face and a slender figure, and her whole body looked like a flower with dewdrops.

Before, because it was too dark and it was the middle of the night, you could only take a cursory glance with a torch and just know that there was nothing wrong with the person.

Neither of them actually looked at their faces very closely.

By this time, it was dawn outside, though not brightly, but at five or six in the morning, there was a ray of dawn bursting out of the clouds in the sky, shining on Jenny's face, making it more and more magnificent and beautiful.

He couldn't stop looking at it for a moment.

It took a long time to respond.

"Oh, yes, I'll take you."

He said, even taking a step forward and holding out his hand to her.

"Will you get off? I'll hold you."

Jenny smiled at him and nodded, "Thank you then."

She said, holding out her hand.

And with the other hand, just behind his back, he gestured to the still-sitting Mo Nan.

The consciousness was that while she grabbed the man's hand, the two of them immediately went at it.

Their original plan was that she would take the opportunity to grab the man's hand, jump down, and then subdue him quickly.

His brother, however, should now be standing at the front of the car, and after subduing him, the man would surely come running right away.

Mo Nan would be able to quickly slip down the other side, find the front of the car and occupy the driver's seat.

With a hostage in hand, the man will not dare to move easily, Jenny can escort him to the car, after the car, the first person tied up, mouth gagged, the two drive away, the man even if he runs fast, I'm sure he can not catch up.

This way, the two of them could lose the man halfway across the country, then drive to town and try to contact the landing.

Jenny Jing knew that Biden Lu must have already received the news of her accident and, most likely, had rushed over to find her personally.

She never doubted Biden Lu's feelings for her.

A plane accident is such a big deal that he must not feel comfortable leaving it to someone else.

Therefore, he must have come in person, and if he had come, he would have been able to find out where they were.

It's just that the range is so large that there's no way to pinpoint the exact location in a short period of time.

But spare a thought, they must have been around, it would never go wrong.

So, as long as he could contact him and tell him his exact location, Biden Lu would definitely come over in the fastest time possible.

This way, all dangers would be solved by meeting up with him.

Jenny and Mo Nan's calculations were pretty good.

She calculated all the possible and improbable scenarios.

Even the possibility of the two of them encountering the gang that had been hunting them once they arrived in town came to mind.

Although that would end up leading to a very dangerous outcome, they had no second, better option right now, so they would have to take a gamble.

r Besides, there was no way they could, really, allow themselves to be sold like this.

That's why we have this plan.

And that's when the other side appeared to have jumped into the plan, as she had expected.

Jenny Jing smilingly stretched out her hand, and in order to make the other party believe her, she also purposely put her eyes in an incredibly gentle and imploring manner.

If an unsuspecting person saw them, they wouldn't even think that they were kidnapped.

And just assumed that the guy in front of her was really her boyfriend and she was just being petulant to him.

She, too, was prepared to use this method to temporarily paralyze the other party and make them careless.

Seeing that her hands were about to touch each other.

Just at that moment, a sudden change occurred.

Only the outstretched man's hand in front of him was suddenly pushed away, followed by another, relatively more white and slender hand that appeared right in front of him.

I saw the man's big brother suddenly appear.

He stood right in front of the car, squeezing his brother aside, smiling at Jenny, and asked, "Going to the bathroom, are you? I'll take you."

I said, holding my hand out in front of her.

Jenny was stunned.

It stayed all at once.

I never thought that this person would suddenly step in from it.

This way, with two people standing in front of the carriage, with her three-legged kung fu, she wasn't sure she could subdue them within a single move.

And Mo Nan's leg was still injured, so there was no way to move around.

It would have been fine if she had been the one to restrain one first and let Mo Nan slip off with the pain.

But if she had none of them to subdue, Mo Nan's current situation against two strong young men, and the leg injury, would probably not even be able to climb out of the carriage.

In this way, the two of them even completely exposed their strength and purpose.

More than just being caught off guard, Branch is exposing his thoughts completely to the other side's view.

That would make it hard for the two to escape behind them.

So, Jenny's hand stiffened and the smile on his face froze there as well.

It took a long moment before he managed a smile, "It's... no need for that."

However, the other side seems to be very overbearing and brutal.

He said straight to the man next to him, who was just as confused as they were, "I'm taking her to the bathroom, so you wait here and watch the car."

After saying that, he didn't even care if Jenny agreed or not, he went forward and grabbed her hand.

Then, with a short body, Jenny only felt the sky spinning before his eyes, and his feet suddenly lifted off the ground, but he was actually stopped by his waist and carried out of the car.

She was stunned all at once.

Mo Nan was also shocked.

The change in front of them was completely beyond what they had expected or planned.

Because Jenny had given the instructions before, everything was to follow her instructions.

So at this time, Jenny hadn't given any instructions, and she didn't dare to act rashly, fearing that without full confidence that she could escape, she would make the other party doubt her own strength.

So, as she watched Jenny being carried off the car, she could only sit there, dumbfounded.

For a moment, it was complicated and very anxious.

"Jenny."

She shouted, subconsciously trying to get up.

However, it was stopped back by a glance from Jenny.

Jenny Jing barely smiled, "I'm fine, since this big brother is willing to take me, then let him take me, don't worry, I'll be right back."

Chapter 731

She finished and gave a wink to Mo Nan.

The two of them had been together for so long, several years, except when they were at home, usually whenever they went out, Mo Nan would follow her around.

So the two are already very much in sync.

With one look from Jenny, she immediately understood what she meant.

She means that's fine.

Separate the two so they can be ambushed separately.

It's not easy for two women to deal with two men at the same time, because there will be consideration.

But if they were to be separated, with the way they looked like lusty hungry ghosts, plus the fact that Jenny and Mo Nan were at least people who had studied fighting.

Even though Jenny couldn't compare to men in terms of strength, she had one more of her greatest weapons, and that was her beauty.

So, she wasn't afraid.

Instead, the man was willing to take her so she could take advantage of the bathroom break and find a way to restrain him first.

After restraining the person, she will tie them up with something or just knock them out.

Then come back quietly and help Mo Nan restrain the rest of the men together.

This plan was much more convenient and practical than the one they had been thinking of.

So it's not necessarily a bad thing that this man is going to take it upon himself to take her there.

After Mo Nan received Jenny Jing's message, this was the only way to put his mind at ease and sit back down.

She also managed a smile and said, "Then watch out."

"Well."

Jenny nodded, and then, with another man, who hadn't quite reacted to the muddled gaze, followed the man who had been called big brother.

And I don't know if it's because she's afraid she'll run away.

The man had been holding her hand and hadn't let go from the side of the car.

Jenny was pulled by him and walked after him.

Since she was still in view of the other man, she didn't dare to do anything rash and let the man pull her forward.

Only, she was very careful to spot a problem.

Because she had previously observed the hands of her fourth uncle and fourth aunt when they were at her house.

Country hands are rough from always doing farm work and from not taking proper care of them.

But the hands of the man in front of him, although they were also full of calluses, but not at all the kind that grew out of farm work.

Rather more like....holding the steering wheel, or a gun?

It was born out of these.

The thought jumped out at her, startling her.

After all, who would have thought that a man who lived in a frontier town and had to buy a wife if he wanted to marry would have such a thick layer of gun callouses on his hands?

Jenny's heart tensed up.

Her intuition told her that the man before her was not simple.

Maybe the plan was going to be far beyond her expectations again.

However, right now the other side hadn't fully revealed their weaknesses, so she naturally wouldn't take the initiative.

So, it was better to follow him, but his body had been a little tense, ready to strike at any moment.

Keep walking to a more secluded spot.

The spot was well chosen, with a man-hugging tree in front of it and waist-high weeds all around.

If one squats inside, one must not see anything just from the outside.

The man let go of her hand and said, "Well, here it is."

Jenny, however, stood there, not moving.

The man raised an eyebrow and looked at her.

"Why not?"

Jenny couldn't help but blush.

"How am I supposed to get on if you're looking at me?"

She was a little unkind.

Instead of being annoyed at the man's words, he laughed.

He took a sudden step toward her.

"You know that man who sold you to me today?"

Jenny was stunned and looked up at him.

The man in front of her was still dressed like a country farmer, and his hair was a mess, but she saw in those eyes a coldness and sharpness that didn't belong in that outfit.

Her heart shuddered a little.

Subconsciously, I nodded.

"Know, know."

"If you know that, then you should understand that I bought you, and from now on you're my wife, and since you're all my wife, what's wrong with me watching you go to the bathroom?"

Jenny: "....."

Knowing full well that the other party was intentionally humiliating herself, but that light and evil tone was like a wind blowing against her ears, making her blush couldn't help but crawl all the way from her neck to her cheeks.

She couldn't help but take a step back and fidget, "No, no, someone's watching me not come out on top."

If she had only guessed before, she was almost certain at this moment.

This man in front of me was by no means an honest peasant!

It's over, it's over, it's over!

She and Mo Nan are really in a den of thieves this time.

But think so, but there was still a slim chance in front of her, so she couldn't give up.

She knew that if she and Mo Nan didn't resist at this point.

When they do go into town with them, it will be right into their lair.

It would only be harder for her and Mo Nan to escape if they tried to escape then.

As the saying goes, when you break the rules, you suffer the opposite.

There's no other way, so die!

With this thought in mind, Jenny looked up at him with her head held high and righteously said, "Although they sold me to you, but aren't we not really married yet here? You, you can't see it yet! Hurry up and turn around!"

The man narrowed his eyes, and a smile seemed to flicker in the depths of his eyes.

Watching her look so nervous that she stuttered, she quirked her lips lightly.

Then, with a fury, he nodded.

"Well, you're right, even though I don't care how you feel, but marriage is something that only happens once in a lifetime after all, and I'd like to make it official."

He said, suddenly leaning closer to her.

"But I feel reluctant to let you go just like that, so how about you think of a way to compensate me or bribe me first, and I'll let you go for now?"

Jenny stared in astonishment.

Right now, it was the enlarged face of a man.

She just felt her breath almost stop and looked at him with open eyes, completely forgetting how to react.

It took a long while before he fidgeted, a little annoyed, "You're, you're a rogue!"

The man laughed out loud "Heh".

"So you're just now seeing this?"

Jenny: "....."

She was extremely angry, and was really about to be mad at the man in front of her.

But the other party still had that smiling face, and even reached out and pointed to his face, saying, "If you k*ss me, I'll let you go for now."

Jenny held her red eyes in anger and glared at him.

k*ss him?How is that possible?

Forget the fact that she was married and could never k*ss another man, the man in front of her was a trafficker and might as well be her enemy.

They insulted her so much, and now they're asking her to k*ss him?