Chapter 2531

Madam Ames replied, "Mrs. Knowles is already asleep."

Nollace responded with a faint hum and asked, "Has she eaten?"

Madam Ames answered truthfully, "She did eat but vomited after that. Her appetite is still not too good." Nollace frowned and hurried upstairs.

When he came to the bedroom, the lights in the bedroom were off. He only turned on the bedside light because he was afraid that the chandelier would wake her up as it was too bright.

Daisie lay on her side on the bed, sleeping very restlessly. Nollace walked to the edge of the bed, sat down, and reached out to pat her. However, she woke up as soon as she felt his caress.

Nollace smiled. "Haven't you fallen asleep?"

Daisie sat up slowly. "You've come home?"

"Yeah, I was dealing with some affairs."

He threw his coat on the chaise longue. He did not hide the fact that he went out on a dinner appointment on purpose, but he did not think it was necessary to talk to her about the meal.

"You..." Mia pursed her lips and lowered her head. "I've done something really bad to you, and you're still willing to help me out?"

"First of all, you did it for your younger brother, didn't you? Although it's wrong to steal someone else's wallet because you want to heal him, I can see that you're not hopelessly bad." Freyja placed a card on the table and moved toward her. "There is $30,000 here, and I'll lend it to you. I'll then introduce you to a job after your brother's surgery is over and his eyesight is restored. You can slowly return the money to me after you start working."

Mia picked up the card and looked at her incredulously. "Are you really willing to help me?"

Freyja smiled. "I have lent you all the money that you need, and you can now contact the hospital to reschedule the surgery. What's there left to doubt?"

Mia got up abruptly and knelt on the ground. Freyja stood up instantly and helped her up. "What are you doing? Get up already."

Freyja placed the letter down and looked up at Mia, who had dyed her hair black. "Flax-colored hair suits you quite well."

Mia smiled and said, "As you advised, I removed the red dye, and it became like this after the red faded."

"Has your brother's surgery been scheduled?"

She nodded with a smile. "Yeah, it's been arranged, and the surgery will take place in a few days, so he doesn't have to wait so long anymore."

Freyja got up, walked toward her, and placed her hands on her shoulders. "Then I'll bring you to a job interview now."

Mia followed her, chattering and asking along the way, "What's the job? Where are we going for the interview? Will it be difficult?"

Freyja stopped in front of the car, opened the door, and let her get in first. "You'll know when you get there."

"Oh, okay." She got into the car obediently.

Soon, the car arrived at Blue Valley Manor.

Mia stuck her face against the car window, stared at the huge courtyard, and was once again shocked. What she had been seeing nowadays had really shown her the lifestyles of the top one percenters and their attitude toward life.

Daisie was taken aback and took a glance at Madam Ames. "But Nollace is the one who hired her."

"She stopped me from meeting you just now, so don't you think it's strange? Logically, whenever there's a guest, she should notify you, the mistress of the manor, no matter what. But she didn't even notify you, and she was already certain you would drive us away. I can almost feel that this woman is up to something."

'A woman's sixth sense is known to be very accurate. How could an employee have the right to decide on her employer's behalf?

'I don't believe that Nollace has given her such authority.'

Daisie pursed her lips tightly and did not utter a single word.

Freyja sat upright and took her hand. "Alright, this girl is looking for a job, and I'm not in need of an employee now. That's why I'm introducing her to you. Don't worry. I have an eye for a great employee."

Daisie naturally trusted Freyja, so she nodded. "Okay, I'll let her stay."

Freyja got up and walked toward Mia. "You'll be working here from now on."

Daisie sat on a bench in the garden and asked Mia to sit as well. "Will you miss your family when you're staying abroad?"

Mia froze for a moment and then lowered her gaze. "I have no family."

"I'm so sorry. I didn't know about that."

Mia waved her hand immediately. "It's okay. You don't have to apologize to me. I've already gotten used to it. I'm an orphan, and I don't have much of an impression of my parents now, so even if others mention them around me, I won't feel offended at all."

Daisie leaned back into the back of the bench. "Since I got pregnant, I've rarely contacted anyone from outside this manor."

"You're pregnant?" Mia was surprised.

Daisie squinted and grinned. "Can't you see it?"

Mia took a short glimpse at her belly. "Ah, I can see it now. The dean said that pregnancy takes a huge toll on a woman's body. You'll get emotionally unstable, and your body will become bloated and fat. You'll also lose appetite and can't sleep well at night, but you don't look very fat."

Nollace wrapped his arms around her waist. "I won't go out for dinner anymore. I'll come back to accompany my wife daily from now on."

Daisie froze for a moment and then gently pushed him away. "How can you not attend dinner appointments? You're the director and president of the company. If I don't let you go, I really can't imagine what others will think of me. I'd surely get into trouble if someone else were to say that I'm not a considerate wife."

He frowned. "Who would dare to say so?"

"How could I know?"

Daisie went to the dining table and sat down. Seeing the prunes on the table, she picked up one and put it in her mouth. "Sour food is still the best."

Nollace walked to her side, propped his hands against the surface of the table, leaned over, stared at her, and laughed. "Are you still angry?"

She replied, "No, what's there to be angry about?"

Nollace asked the servant to bring the dessert over. "I bought you something that you love."

Daisie raised her head. "You purposely bought it for me?"

"Yeah, she does have the ability to be a marvelous housekeeper." Daisy lowered her head. "Freyja came to see me today, but she stopped her from seeing me. And when I said that I wanted to keep Mia here, she insisted that I had to first ask for your permission.

"I know you're the one who hired her, so it's normal for her to listen to what you have to say. But I feel like a person who's being excluded, and I can't even do what I want."

Nollace's heart tightened, and he picked her up and placed her onto his thighs. "Why would you think about such things?"

He approached her, and his breath brushed her cheek. "If you don't like it, you don't have to listen to her. You can do whatever you want, but the bodyguards must still be allowed to follow you when you go out."

After saying that, he hugged her tightly. "I'm really afraid that you'll get ill from boredom. Daisy, I don't want you to be unhappy. And if you're really unhappy, then I'll..."

Daisy looked at him. "Then what?"

The servant looked up at Daisy cautiously. "How about I give Madam Ames a call and ask her to come over now?"

Daisy scoffed. "There's no need for that. I don't think I have the authority to order her around."

After making such a sarcastic comment, Daisy walked to the kitchen alone, but Mia immediately stopped her. "What are you doing?"

"I'm going to make my own breakfast."

"How can it be!?" Mia pulled her out and made her sit at the dining table. "If the chef isn't here, you have me. I, Mia Keaton, was once lucky enough to work as a part-time sous-chef in a restaurant. Don't worry. Although I haven't cooked in a while, I promise it'll still taste good!"

She swaggered into the kitchen and started messing around with some ingredients.

The two servants were worried that she would light the kitchen on fire, but because of Daisy's presence, they did not dare to say anything. They looked at each other and arrived at the same solution.

The other servant hurried to the yard, took her cell phone out, and called Madam Ames. "Madam Ames, come back quickly! Mrs. Knowles has woken up, and she's very upset. We'll all be fired if Mr. Knowles learns about this."

The bowl of noodles looked very good and smelled great. Considering that Daisy had been having a poor appetite during her pregnancy, Mia had specially placed two slices of lemon on the noodles.

She walked up to Daisy with the noodles. "Ma'am, look."

Daisy smelled the fragrance of the ingredients contrasting with that of the lemon, picked up the fork, and could not wait to taste it.

The lemon offset the greasiness of the soup, and its sweet and tangy taste blended well with the rich and aromatic broth.

Daisy's appetite was stimulated, and the cooked noodles all looked al dente and did not break, making the dish look and taste very refreshing.

Daisy took a big mouthful while Mia stood aside and watched her eat.

"How is it? Does it taste good to you?"

Daisy nodded and gave her a thumbs up. "This is great. I don't feel sick now. How did you do it?"

Even the servants could not believe it.

After all, the chefs Nollace had hired were head chefs who once worked in hotels. However, Daisy had been having a poor appetite because of her pregnancy, so no matter how delicious the food was, she would always vomit after eating only a few mouthfuls.

Nollace narrowed his eyes as if thoughts were flashing across his mind. "She met a woman?"

Hedeon rubbed his chin. "I don't know what those two women were talking about, but their actions look ed mysterious, so it's definitely not something good."

There was a knock on the door, so Hedeon got up and opened it.

It was Cecelia.

Cecelia ignored Hedeon and walked in with some documents. "Your Highness."

She handed Nollace the documents, but he did not take them from her. "Just place them on the desk and leave us."

Cecelia smiled, leaned over, and approached Nollace with her upper body. "Your Highness, must you be so unfeeling to me? I admit that I shouldn't have used my father to restrain you. It was my fault, and I apologize."
