Chapter 2731

“I wouldn’t have been such a gentleman if you had done this earlier.”

After saying that, Morrison sealed her lips with a kiss.

Leah reached out and hugged him.

The temperature of the whole room skyrocketed and did not stop rising-everything got extremely hot and passionate until their souls fused.

At the same time, in Coralia...

A tavern located in a homestay in Hohman Town was still operating, and the night market, the quaint streets, and the alleys were all dimly lit. It was already midnight, but the town was still relatively boisterous.

Zephir sat alone in the attic and ordered a cocktail. The noise of the guests sitting at the next table created a huge contrast with the silence that came from him.

The silence prevailed until the piano in the tavern sounded, and its melody suffused the atmosphere. It was a female singer, she was playing the piano and singing, and her slightly smoky voice sounded melodious.

Seeing that her cat had run over to someone else’s balcony and had gotten caught, Ursule gasped, clasped her hands together, and apologized with a pious expression. “I’m very sorry! Kisses must’ve caused you trouble. I’ll take it back from you right away. Um... Can you please hand it over here?”

The balconies were only 5 feet away, so Ursule stretched out her hands, wanting to grab the cat directly from Zephir.

Zephir did not say anything, picked up the cat, and handed it over.

Ursule took it from him and immediately took it into her embrace. “Thank you. I’m really sorry if it’s caused you any inconvenience.”

She then turned around and patted the cat in her arms. “If you run around again, I’ll bring you to a vet and get you sterilized!”

Kisses meowed as if it was protesting.

Zephir flicked his sleeves, brushing off the cat hair that had gotten onto his pajamas, turned back, and entered the room.

The next day, Zephir went downstairs in his loose silk pajamas as the homestay would prepare a buffet-style breakfast for its guests.

"Urs, shouldn't you be at school today?"

"Something seems to have come up in my professor's home, and he asked for a one-day leave." Ursule looked at Yale. "I only come out here when I don't have any class, don't I?"

Yale chuckled. "It's nice to be young."

Ursule only noticed Zephir at this time and was stunned for a few seconds. "Hey, aren't you... Oh, you're the man who stays next door from last night, aren't you?"

Yale glanced at Zephir. "Do you know each other?"

"No, no, Kisses escaped onto his balcony last night, so perhaps it disturbed him." Ursule gave off an awkward smile and thought of something. "By the way, Mr. Quigg, he seems to have been staying here for quite a long time."

Because the homestay had a tavern and provided supper, the rest of the waiters would only come to work from 5:00 p.m. until 2:00a.m.

The only part-time employee on the premises was Ursule, who would only come to sing for the customers at night, and helped in the homestay when she did not have class during the day. And because she was a young lady, the other employees took special care of her.

If her performance were to end very late at night and it was rather inconvenient for her to take a bus, she would be allowed to stay in the homestay for the night.

Everyone who lived and worked here would eventually grow familiar with each other as they got along slowly, to the extent that they would grow to cherish each other's existence.

And Yale would arrange parties, staff meals, gift exchanges, and so on for his employees every holiday.

Thus, instead of saying that where they stayed and worked was a homestay, it functioned more like a family that made everyone feel cozy and cherished.

Zephyr lifted his head subconsciously, feeling that he had just been overwhelmed by a cat.

Ursule bit the straw in her glass and chuckled. "Kisses is just being a little over-enthusiastic, so don't mind it, sir."

Zephyr held the troublesome cat away from his face and frowned. "Sir?"

"Although you look young, you're about the same age as Mr. Quigg, aren't you?"

Zephyr was at a loss for words.

'Did she misunderstand anything about my age?'

He looked down at the cat in his arms and gently stroked its soft fur. "Yale is four years older than me."

"Okay, then let's do some basic Math. Mr. Quigg is four years older than you, so you're already 30 years old and 11 years older than me, so shouldn't I address you as sir?"

'I wasn't even born yet when he was 11 years old.'

As soon as Morrison said that, Leah made a stunning appearance in a champagne-colored low-necked long gown.

Under the misty light, the slowly approaching figure gradually became clearer, with exquisite makeup on and a graceful temperament.

Morrison's gaze was fixed on her, and his eyes could not help but move with her.

"Sorry to have kept you guys waiting." Leah stood in front of them with a smile on her face.

Morrison suddenly returned to his senses, cleared his throat, and instantly took off his suit jacket and draped it over her shoulders.

Leah was caught off guard by his abrupt action.

Morrison explained solemnly, "The air conditioners are on. I'm afraid that you'll catch a cold."

Leah wanted to take off his jacket. "But it's very warm here."

"No, you must be feeling very cold." Morrison held her hand, not letting her take the jacket off of her.

Waylon walked up to the ice cream cart, and just when he was about to grab his wallet to pay, a few little kids glared at him. "Sir, there's a queue here. You can't just jump in."

He paused for a split second, then leaned over and gazed at those children. "How about this? I'll buy each of you one more ice cream, and all you need to do is let me jump in line, okay?"

The children exchanged gazes.

'This seems to be a good deal!'

All of them agreed to Waylon's suggestion in the end.

Waylon bought an ice cream, then bought another for each of them while he was at it. After paying for all the ice creams, he took one out of the bunch and walked toward Cameron.

Cameron could not help but chuckle out loud. "You actually came up with such a method just to cut the queue?"

He handed the ice cream to her. "A problem that can be solved with an ice cream is never a problem to me."

Cameron tore the ice cream open and tasted it.

Cameron raised her head and bit her fork. "So, am I the only special one?"

Waylon scooped her some soup. "You also have a gluttonous mouth. You'll eat anything if no one's there to stop."

She bit her lip and said nothing.

Nicholas let off a chuckle. "It's good for pregnant women to eat more. When your grandmother was pregnant with your father, her appetite was as great as Cam's. She would eat whatever she saw. She even secretly hid snacks from me."

Speaking of snacks hiding, Cameron felt guilty all of a sudden.

Waylon caught the change in her expression and squinted. "Are you telling me that you hid some too?" She denied it boldly. "No! Do I look like someone who would hide snacks away? That's absolutely impossible!"

Everyone at the dining table laughed.

At the Kong Ports...

James, who was shooting his next scene in the police station, sneezed three times in a row, and the actor who played the police officer across from him lifted his head. "Are you telling me that you've caught a cold during such hot weather?"

"I think someone must be badmouthing me behind my back."

The actor teased him. "Maybe someone's thinking about you."

'Thinking about me?'

James was stunned for a moment and trembled as that woman's face flashed in his mind.

'This is absolutely impossible.'

After the two joked around for a little, the filming officially started, and Ronny shouted, "Action!"

The actor who played the police officer immediately got into the role and smacked the notebook on the table. "Still pretending to be innocent? As soon as she said that, Yvonne saw the sip's worth of broth in her cup, and the grin on her face faded. She could not help but roll her eyes.

'When he said he'll pour me some, he did mean it, huh?'

Seeing her expression, the actor who played the police officer could not help but laugh out loud and then said meaningfully, "Evie, he might have claimed that the broth comes from his family, but it might not be from his mother."

Yvonne immediately understood what he meant. "Pfft, I see. It's no wonder he's being so stingy..."

The last sentence was whispered.

After James finished drinking the soup, he frowned when he saw that the two were staring at him strangely. "What's wrong?"

"Nothing, everything's fine. You enjoy your soup, Evie and I will stop bothering you."
