Chapter 18 I Was Just Afraid You Would Accidentally Burn Our

Parents

“Who was that young girl yesterday?” After Aubrey left, Old Mr. Mason breathed a sigh of relief, turned his head, and asked, “Did you thank her properly?”

“I’ve already given her a check.” When Green talked about the young girl, he was also overwhelmed with admiration, “I didn’t expect a teenage girl to be a miracle doctor!”

It was really surprising!

“That young girl was just pa*sing by. She happened to find out about your condition, and tried her best to save you!”

If she hadn’t “meddled in others’ business”. Old Mr. Mason would have been...

“She’s kind-hearted...” In Old Mr. Mason’s mind, a delicate face appeared in a trance. It was a little blurry, but he could vaguely feel that it was a beautiful girl with a nice voice.

It was a pity that she was too young, and Benjamin and Cecilia had a marriage contract... Otherwise, it would be nice to make her his granddaughter-in-law!

“Have you written down the contact information of the young girl?” Old Mr. Mason said suddenly, “I want to thank her in person.”

Green was startled and hurriedly looked at Mr. Mason.

Mr. Mason had asked for the young girl’s mobile phone number yesterday!

“Don’t disturb her.” Benjamin flatly refused.

“Why, can’t I meet my savior to express my gratitude?”

What Old Mr. Mason thought was that so many experts and famous doctors couldn’t cure his disease, but the young girl saved his life when he was dying.

What did this mean?

It meant that the young girl’s medical skills were better than theirs!

If he remembered correctly, the young girl should be only seventeen or eighteen years old. He happened to have another grandson who was about the same age as her...

If he could set them up successfully, it would be a good marriage.

“Do you have her contact information?” Old Mr. Mason thought of the way Green looked at Benjamin. This brat had the young girl’s cell phone number or WhatsApp.

“I don’t care. You have to call the young girl.” Old Mr. Mason insisted.

In the end, Benjamin let go and said, "Whether she comes or not is up to her."

Old Mr. Mason's "conspiracy" was half successful, and he hurriedly said. "Of course!"

If she didn't come, she would be frightened by Benjamin's coldness!

Seeing Benjamin about to leave...

"Wait a minute!" Old Mr. Mason added as if thinking of something, "When you talk to the young girl, be polite and gentle! If you don't know how to do it, let Green teach you! Don't scare her away, you hear me?"

She was his potential future granddaughter-in-law after all...

Benjamin thought he was gentle and polite enough and he didn't need others to teach him.

Green thought Old Mr. Mason was trying to get him in trouble. Benjamin had just forgotten about the Fenneth project...

"The young girl is my savior after all. You must be nice to her!" Old Mr. Mason was afraid that the young girl would not be able to withstand being frightened due to her young age.

Williams and Eloise came to the dining table and delivered various breakfasts to their two daughters.

"This is the dessert that the chef made early in the morning. It's just out of the oven. Come on, Isa, this is yours. Be careful, it's hot."

"Cecilia, you've lived in school for a month. It seems you've lost some weight. Eat more."

Cecilia smiled sweetly, "Dad, Mom, I'm fine. Give more to Isa. Haven't I eaten enough good things since I was a child?"

Eloise chuckled, thinking that Cecilia was sensible. She cared about Isa a lot instead of doing everything possible to exclude Isa because of her arrival.

This situation was much warmer than expected.

"Dad, this is your favorite herbal tea when you have breakfast. I'll pour you a cup of tea." Cecilia stood up and poured the tea from the white porcelain teapot into Williams's cup. Then she picked up another blue teapot, and poured the fruit tea inside into Eloise's cup,

"Mom, this is your favorite fruit tea. Drink it while it's warm."

Eloise hadn't expected her daughter to still remember their habits. She smiled lovingly and took a sip from the teacup.

Cecilia, like a victor after a battle, deliberately glanced at Isabella.

Isabella was her parents' biological daughter, but so what? After spending so many years together with her parents, no one knew their eating habits better than her.

How could Isabella fail to see her thoughts? She looked calm and ate the delicate snacks on the plate slowly as if she didn't take it seriously.

“Isa, I don’t know what kind of tea you like to drink...” Cecilia wanted her to pour it herself.

But before she finished her sentence, Isabella said casually, “Green tea, thank you.”

Cecilia was stunned for a moment. Was Isabella asking her to pour her a cup of tea? Was she a maid?

“You dote on Isa...” Williams mistakenly thought that Cecilia was going to pour tea for Isabella, and cheerfully said, “Isa, Cecilia is always like this. She cares about her family very much. If you don’t let her pour you a cup of tea, she won’t be happy.”

Isabella looked up at her, “Well, thanks.”

Cecilia was a bit stuck. But when it came to this point, she could only stand up and pick up the teapot with a smile on her face.

Out of the corner of her eye, she noticed that Isabella was wearing a white gauze dress today.

The gauze dress was very thin, and brewing green tea required very hot water...

If she accidentally got burnt...

With just one look, Isabella could see what she was up to.

Cecilia was pouring tea when she heard Isabella say, “Don’t spill it.”

Cecilia hadn’t expected her to see her plan so quickly. She gritted her teeth secretly, trying to pretend she didn’t hear it. Unexpectedly, Isabella added, “It’s enough.”

Cecilia could only stop what she was doing, and said with a smile, “Isa, you are so careful. I have poured tea for our parents for so many years, and I have never spilled it. Were you worried that I would burn you?”

Isabella raised her clear eyes and smiled slightly, “I was just afraid you would accidentally burn our parents when you spilled it.”

She cared about her parents.

“Oh, Isa, you’re so sweet...” Eloise had never expected that Isabella would care about her and her husband so much.

Cecilia sounded a little petty by comparison.

But Cecilia shouldn’t be malicious.

Williams smoothed things over with a smile, “Isa, Cecilia, the results of the college entrance examination will be released soon. Do you two have any universities you want to apply to?”

He put down his teacup and looked forward to their answers with a smile.

After Cecilia sat down, she felt that it was necessary to outshine Isabella, so she took the lead and said with a smile, “I might choose Bomsville University.”

When Isabella heard the words “Bomsville University”, she raised her eyes and looked at Cecilia thoughtfully.

Cecilia naturally noticed her gaze. She smiled and said, “Many students said that the college entrance examination is too difficult, I think it’s easier than the exercises we usually did. I think Bomsville University isn’t a problem.”

“Bomsville University is the best university in the country, but... I remember that you seemed to want to go study abroad before, right?” Williams looked at her with puzzled eyes.
