Chapter 25 Get Rid of Her

“Old Mr. Mason will be able to wake up tomorrow morning. In the following month, he is forbidden to take supplements. Don’t give him supplement soup like today.”

“Okay.” Benjamin agreed and then looked at the darkening sky. “Let me treat you to dinner.”

“No, thanks. I should go home.”

It was probably seven o’clock now. Isabella took the bag, took out her phone, and checked it. As expected, her mother had called her twice.

Isabella quickly called back, “Mom, I’m sorry, I was busy just now.”

Benjamin looked at the girl talking on the phone in front of him. She had an extraordinary temperament. When she was talking to her family, her voice was soft and pleasant.

“OK. I’ll go back now. Goodbye.”

Seeing that she hung up the phone, Benjamin said softly, “I’ll take you back.”

“Then take me to Gallon Park. I have a car parked in the underground garage.

Gallon Park?

It was a park under construction and it was not yet open to the public. How could her car be parked there? Why did she appear in the church?

To him, the girl in front of him was like a mystery.

“I’ll return the things first.” Isabella had borrowed a set of needle kits from Bennett’s office just now. Today he was on duty and he was still in the office.

After Isabella returned the needle kit to Bennett, she walked out of the office. She passed by Old Madam Brown’s ward, and couldn’t help but stop.

Old Madam Brown was still in a daze with her eyes closed, sleeping peacefully.

Isabella suddenly recalled one afternoon when she was a child. At that time, Old Madam Brown was taking a lunch break, and the sunlight outside the window fell on her body through the vertical curtains. She was breathing evenly and sleeping peacefully as she was now.

Just then, she suddenly heard a voice. “Isabella, why are you here?”

Isabella turned and saw Gail and Michael standing not far away in shock. They had received a call from the hospital, saying that the VIP ward where Old Madam Brown stayed would expire and asking them to come over for a renewal. So they rushed over after dinner.

But, to their surprise, they met Isabella here!

Gail was the first to come to her sense. "You didn't go back to your biological parents? Are you trying to ask Old Madam Brown to intercede for you so that you can stay in Bomsville and stay with our family? Stop daydreaming!"

Michael hadn't expected to run into Isabella in the hospital either,

"Isa. what's going on? Didn't you go back with your family?"

"I don't think she even left!" Gail looked at Isabella with disgust in her eyes. "She must have heard on the way home how miserable her family was and couldn't take it anymore. So she ran away and wanted to ask Old Madam Brown for mercy!"

Old Madam Brown had always spoiled her and loved her. Was she trying to continue to live in the Brown family for free?

"Get rid of her!" Gail tugged at the hem of Michael's clothes, signaling him to act quickly.

Michael really hadn't expected to meet Isabella here, so he could only step forward and ask kindly, "Isa, why don't we talk? How much do you want?"

Seeing how the attitude of her former family members had changed, Isabella sneered, feeling amused.

Were they trying to send her off with money?

Seeing that she was silent, Michael took out a bank card from his pocket. "Here is 100,000. Take it. The password is 123456."

"Michael!" Seeing that her husband was so generous, Gail couldn't help complaining. "Why are you giving her so much?"

Michael used his eyes to hint to her not to speak. If they didn't give her enough, how could she leave willingly?

Yesterday she had stolen Daisy's ruby necklace worth 100,000, and now there was 100,000 in the bank card. She had no reason not to leave.

Isabella's beautiful eyes were full of sarcasm. She looked at the card in his hand without speaking.

"What? Too little?" Gail said unhappily. "I advise you to stop while you're at it. Otherwise, you would end up with nothing!"

"Isa. take it quickly... From now on, Grandma won't need you to visit anymore...Didn't I tell you? You should focus on your new family from now on!" Michael wanted to put the bank card in her hand, but Isabella dodged.

"You damn girl, what on earth are you trying to do? You want to wait for Old Madam Brown to wake up and lie to her? Stop daydreaming!" Gail hadn't expected her to be so stubborn. "I'm telling you, Old Madam Brown will have nothing to do with you in the future. Go away!"

"One billion." Isabella smiled slightly and said word by word, "I will think about it."

"You...no way!" Gail was pissed off. How dare this damn girl ask for a billion dollars? "Why don't you rob the bank?"

"How can robbing a bank be faster than robbing you?"

"You... you..." Gail clutched her heart. She hadn't expected this damn girl to be so ungrateful and greedy. "I won't give you a dime, let alone a billion!"

Gail snatched back the bank card. "If you don't leave. I'll have someone throw you out!"

"Oh, go ahead."

"You... you... I'm so pissed off! What a rubbish VIP floor! Anyone can get in..." Gail was about to go to the receptionist.

"Isabella." Suddenly, a man's voice caught their attention.

Gail looked up and saw a man looking over at the end of the corridor. He seemed to be calling Isabella's name.

Although it was far away, it could still be seen that it was a tall man with a strong aura.

Isabella followed the sound and saw Benjamin standing there waiting for her. She didn't want to waste time arguing with them. turned and left.

"Who is that man?" Gail looked suspiciously at the end of the corridor. "Could it be her dad? Impossible! Her dad's voice can't be so young..."

"It should be her brother. Doesn't she have five unmarried brothers? They said that her grandma was sick. Could it be that she also lives in this hospital?"

"Can they afford it?" Seeing them disappearing at the end of the corridor. Gail couldn't help discussing with Michael. "Michael, we have to transfer your mother to another hospital quickly, or we will be entangled by this damn troublesome girl!"

Michael also happened to have this idea. But in the entire Bomsville, there was no hospital with such good medical resources as Cameron Hospital. Only here could his mother get the best care.

"This damn girl is so arrogant because she knows how much your mother likes her... We can deal with her. But I'm afraid that your mother will relent and let her go back to our family!" Gail remembered that when Old Madam Brown learned that Isabella was not her real granddaughter three months ago, her heart couldn't bear it and she fainted.

After waking up. Old Madam Brown sternly said that as long as she lived for one day. Isabella would not be allowed to leave the family. Whoever let Isabella go wouldn't be forgiven!

Later, when Daisy came home, Old Madam Brown was always cold to her. She only cared about this damn girl who was not related by blood.
