Chapter 191

Darius

“You have to tell us everything, Liam. We will find out one way or the other. The last thing you want is for us to find out elsewhere. It means we will have to hand you to the council for judgment, strip your father of his position, and send him on exile, which would shame your family. Tell us all you know so we can manage the problem better,” Raphael said, and Liam looked stunned.

“My father had no hand in this!” he complained, and I nodded, but we need him to give Amy up. We knew she was a part of it. We also knew it did not matter. As long as a family member was part of it, the entire family would be guilty, it was the law.

“Is your mother a part of it?” I asked him sternly, and he looked into my eyes and bowed.

“Yes, alpha. She was the one that gave them my email and made them recruit me the way they did. She did not want to ask me directly just in case it did not work out, and I told my father, so this was the best option for her. That was what she told me.” He said, and I relaxed.

“Who else is a member that you know?” I asked him, and he sighed.

“Luna

Gezel. Carla Orlov, Luna Kate of Cains Island, Jacob Mikhailov, and some alphas from the eastern region.

They are plenty and have groups in each region except the south.

They plan on neutralising your power and getting rid of Elbert and Albert. They claim the three of you are what is wrong with our world.

There is also a manhunt for a David Pavlishchev. I do not know who he is, but they claim the world would be better without him.

They have a lot of documents and evidence to support their claims,” he said and looked at me.

“I do not know if this would help and if what I am about to tell you would make you spare my father, but they all seem to be taking orders from a man, one whom they refer to as the king and say he would lead the council once they have scrapped out everyone.

Lady Hand and Luna Hand are also on their hit list. I believe I was on too because someone tried to kill me before I was arrested,” He said I did not know how to handle all I had learned.

The most worrisome part of the revelation was that Raphael and Marcel’s family were deep in it.

There was no how this would get out, and they won’t be asked to step down temporarily.

Those women were allowing themselves to be used.

Hearing they tried to kill Liam made me realise that they would kill anyone that stopped being beneficial to them.

So far, Hardy’s region seemed impenetrable to them, and I wondered how he did it.

Casey was at high risk. The man was too peaceful for his own good. This was very bad.

“Are you sure of everything and every name you mentioned?” Marcel – asked him and Liam nodded.

“Do you have proof?” He asked, and Liam shook his head.

“They deleted all the emails and wiped out the blueprint. The app has been pulled down. I have no proof,” He said, and Marcel punched the wall.

My hands were shaking.

I could see the target on all their backs, and I wondered what target was on mine.

If they wanted to scrap everyone out, then they were definitely planning something for me.

Implicating Marcel and Raphael for treason was definitely their smoking gun; I wondered what would be mine. I needed Hardy’s help.

So far, he seemed impenetrable, and I needed to know why.

“How are we not sure you are doing to us the same thing you tried to do to your father?” Raphael asked him, sounding angry.

“You might as well be telling us what they told you to tell us, so we could be misled,” Raphael said, and he had a valid point.

There was a possibility this was all a plan, from the use of the false ID to his arrest might be a plan to get him in here so he could plant shit in our heads. We could not trust him, really.

I looked at Liam to study him, and he shook his head.

“I swear to you I am not lying. These people are very smart. If they sent me here, I would have proof to implicate all these people I mentioned and make you go after them,” he said with tears in his eyes. He seemed desperate and scared.

“They even have people in your estate. My life is forfeit, and I know it,” he said in tears.

“I just don’t want my father implicated, and I want you to spare my mother. Just like me, she has been misguided by this King man,” he said, sounding angry when he said the ‘King man’.

“It is funny how they claim they want democracy, yet they refer to an anonymous person as king,” he said, speaking the irony of their cause.

“I need proof,” I told him, and he bowed his head.

“I want to give that to you, your eminence. I can’t, but please be careful of the people I have mentioned,” he said, sounding resigned.

What he told me about the people working for this organisation living in the estate worried me.

“How did you know there are people here?” I asked.

“They have one of your favourite girlfriends working for them. They claim she is the closest to you, and you dote on her. She has been able to give them seals and documents. She also has unlimited access to your office.

I do not know if she is your current mate, but she was said to be someone you have been intimate with,” he said, and I balled my fist because I knew he meant Lily.

I did not understand why the stupid girl would tell people we were intimate. I was really pissed off.

“There is also a woman called Arya. She comes there once in a while. She claims to know you intimately too. I do not know if she is the one they are talking about,” he said, and I wanted to roar.

There was nothing worse than a scorned woman.

Arya was part of the harem I disbanded. She was scorned and more so when she met Zora at Vino's party.

"Who else?" I asked through gritted teeth.

"Can you recognise these women?" I asked him, and he shook his head.

"They wore face masks, but I know their scent," he said, and I was grateful for that bit.

"You will help me identify them. I will protect you, Liam, and to make sure you do not go down as a traitor, I will pretend you work for me as a spy. That is the best I can do. But if I find out you are still doing their bidding, I would treat you like a grown man and execute you," I told him, and he swallowed with fear.

"We can't trust this boy," Marcel said, and I looked at my friend.

I could see the fear in his eyes.

We all knew what was coming. They had set targets on Raphael and Marcel through their ignorant family members and hit the bull's eye with them.

I did not know when they would play that card, but we need to act quickly because once that comes out, Theo and Marcel will be suspended pending the investigation.

I won't have anyone to lean on.

The suspension also means temporary exile from the north. What would stop them from attacking my friends and killing them while away?

As things were looking, they might play that card very soon..

I need to plead with Hardy to give them asylum when that happens.

Chapter 192

I also knew if they had bull's eyes on Marcel and Raphael, then they have bull's eyes on Abelard and me too.

They were already hunting my half-brother, David; I wondered what they would have on Vino.

Someone wanted to wipe out the top families and lead the council, and the Ma khailovs were a part of it.

"Take him to safety and have him heavily guarded," I said, and Theo looked at me.

"Where is safe for him?" he linked me, and I sighed.

As much as I hated to impose, I knew he had only one place to go, and that was south.

"I will speak to Corrigan. We will need him more than anyone else," I linked Marcel and Raphael, and from the looks on their faces, they knew I wasn't only speaking on behalf of Liam.

They knew it was mainly for their sake. Their mates were pregnant; they needed to be safe and secure while we dealt with the issue.

“They are coming for you too, Darius,” Marcel said, looking worried.

“I know. Though we are yet to figure out the angle, your angles are obvious,” I said.

Theo and Marcel cursed at their relatives for being idiots.

“We need to find my half-brother and his family. We need to make sure he is safe,” I said, not caring how my mother would feel about it.

If David was on their hit list, he was also a victim.

Zora

After dinner, Darius, Marcel and Theo went to question Liam. We wanted to be there, but I knew why they told us to stay behind.

Although Darius said he wanted to see if Liam would trust them enough to talk and if he proves difficult, we will speak to him kindly and get the information out. I know that wasn't Darius's reason, but I let it be.

We had been through too much that day for me to argue with him.

I could see his desperation. He spoke with the two people he would have never spoken to under normal circumstances, especially Hardy.

I knew the cards bothered him. However calm he tried to be, I knew he was troubled by the cards, and so was I

Safety and peace had become paramount, and I looked forward to solving the matter.

Kara and Eloise followed me to my room. Nellie met us in the hallway, looking troubled, and I knew something was off.

“Luna,” I said, and she smiled at me, but her smile did not touch her eyes. Her body language was off, and I wondered what might have transpired between her, Abelardo, Jake and Neva during dinner.

Darius still refused to eat with them, and I knew it was because he loved eating with his friends. It wasn't personal, although since Jake was with us, I planned on having breakfast together to show respect and appreciation.

“Where is Darius?” she asked, and I frowned.

“Working?” I said, and she nodded. Her hand had a slight tremble and did not seem at ease. She was clutching her phone tightly.

“Nellie,” I linked her, worried, and she looked away.

“Please see me when you are through with your friends. It is urgent.” she linked back.

“Jake?” I asked through the mind link, and she shook her head.

“No, Please see me,” she said and walked away.

“What is with her? One minute she is happy, the next, she is a trembling mess. Did she not arrive at the mansion in high spirits? I swear I saw some chemistry between her and Jake, but now she is a mess,” Kara said, and I ushered my friends into my room.

“I doubt it has anything to do with Jake,” Eloise said, and I wondered how Eloise could sum that up.

“How do you know?” Kara asked.

“She was clutching her phone too tightly,” Eloise said, and we all laughed, but I was worried.

We all sat down to have some tea. I linked a servant to serve us tea.

“Congratulations, Kara, I never got to congratulate you personally,” I said, resting my hand on her lap, and she beamed at me.

“Thank you, Zora. I am so excited. I welcome the morning sickness and everything. I am thrilled, and Marcel has been over the moon about it,” she said and then looked at Eloise.

“I am sorry that I made you uncomfortable all this while. It wasn’t deliberate, I just...” she said, about to get emotional, but Eloise stopped her.

“You have nothing to apologise for Kara. I know the feeling. Trust me. I lived it. Besides, it is natural for you to feel that way. Although it made me want to stay away from you, I wasn’t mad.” She said, and we all laughed.

The tea came, and I told the Omega to leave after she had placed the tray on the coffee table.

“How long do you think questioning Liam would take?” Eloise asked, and I shrugged.

“They should have let us in on the fun, too, I am bored,” Eloise said, and I sighed

“Liam is a child. Eloise, he just turned seventeen. It is sad that those sick bastards would want to use him like this I did not think I would have been able to handle seeing the poor boy tortured If you hear his back story, you can’t help but feel sorry for him I doubt I can handle his pain, but Amy, his mother, is another ball game,” I said, feeling rage towards the mother that had failed her son on every level.

I get that she had misgivings with the Hands, if any. I get that she believes she is fighting a cause, but why get her son involved? No matter what anyone said about the bitch, I knew she was involved. She was way too lenient about Li am moving to the west and went out of her way to fulfil an odd request. She did not act as a mother should.

I would have believed otherwise if Christian did not say she was his mother.

There was just no excuse. So her son did not have friends. Neither did I have friends when I was growing up. It was no excuse, and I wanted to get the truth out of her.

“So you think it is the mother?” Kara asked, and I nodded.

“The signs are there. Even if she did not do it directly, she had facilitated it,” I said, and Kara cursed.

10 10

“I will be a mother soon; I will never do that to my baby. If I want to be evil, I will leave my child out of it, even if I believe I am fighting for a just cause. I still won’t get my baby involved in a treasonous act,” she said, and Eloise shrugged.

“It wouldn’t really matter, Kara. I believe this Amy bitch knew it, so she made the most of the situation. If Amy is involved in treason against the royals and the nobles, her entire family will go down for it. She will be executed, and they will be exiled. It is all or nothing. That is the law. Every family should be disciplined and put in check. Everyone is responsible for everyone. That was why they tried to frame Abelardo.

If Abelardo had gone down for that shit, Darius would have had to step down to be investigated. It was all targeted at Darius, and I am glad Abelardo could see it eventually.

I am curious about what Larry’s role is in all this,” she said, reminding us of the man who was once a problem but somehow had faded into the dark. He was in the council, but he barely spoke or acted. Could he be pulling some strings ngs in the background to get back at everyone for the humiliation he suffered?

“Larry..” Kara said, realising we never really thought of the guy.

“We need to look into Larry,” Eloise said, and I nodded.

“Noted. Who we need to focus on now is Amy. I am sure she has a lot to tell us. I also learned she is a Delta like us, so there should be no hard feelings when we apply force,” I said, and Kara shook her head.

“I doubt I can do anything physical,” she said, and I nodded.

“I will have an enforcer there to help us out. It would have been nice to do it all one, seeing how she failed to protect her son, but an enforcer will be great too.” I said, and we discussed other things.

Zora

While I walked towards her room, I told the head of staff that we would all be eating breakfast together in the bigger dining room.

I stood at Nellie's door and took a deep breath before I knocked on it “Come in, Zora,” She said, knowing it was me. Of course, she would; she was an Alpha breed.

I opened the door and walked in. What I saw scared me.

Nellie was a mess, she had a bottle of northern cocktail on the table and a glass of it in hand. I rushed and took the green stuff from her.

Remembering my experience with the thing, I did not want anything to happen to Nellie.

“What is all this?” I asked, a bit annoyed. Why was she acting like a child? I was threatened that day, but I had my shit together, what was her problem?

“I am scared, Zora,” She said, tears streaming down her cheeks.

“I did not know what to do,” she said, pacing about her room.

“What is the matter, Nellie?” I asked her, and she handed me her phone. On the screen was her inbox.

I did not know what to look for until I saw the latest message in her inbox and who the sender was.

“Jenny Lawrence,” it read, and I wondered who was sick enough to play this kind of joke.

“Who is playing with you?” I asked, and she shook her head.

“Open it,” she said, and I opened it.

“Treason should never go unpunished,” it read with a big graphics interchange format (GIF), of someone grinning wickedly. I did not need to guess what the person was referring to.

“We burned the proof, Nellie, you need to relax,” I said, and she shook her head.

“I doubt I can do that, Zora. I am scared,” She said, and I went to hold her.

“This person might be playing a prank,” I told her, knowing deep down that wasn’t the case because we did not see Jenny’s computer and being a file freak, she might have had all the details there. I needed Nellie to be calm while Dari us and I figured out everything.

I moved her to the couch and held her.

“I need you to relax. Do not give them what they want.” I said, and she shook her head.

“Whoever is doing this has access to Jenny’s email and has the proof you burnt. The woman kept records of her crimes. Why won’t she keep a record of the crimes of others? She was that sick in the head. If word gets out that I killed Collier, a lot of things will happen,” she said, shaking, and I shook my head.

“Technically, you didn’t. Elbert has taken all the credit. As for the anonymous letter, you never really admitted to sending it, so it is baseless.” I said, and she did not relax. I knew something was troubling her, or she wasn’t upfront about some things.

“If there is anything you feel we should know, it is best you tell me now,” I said, and she pulled away and began to weep.

“You know how angry I get, Zora. Jenny was frustrating, and she pissed me off severely. I am not sure, but I might have admitted to it over the phone in the heat of anger. Hopefully, she did not record that either.” She said, and I felt the blood drain from my face.

She was an Alpha breed. How could she be so sloppy?

“You what!!!!” I said, and she shook her head.

“I am not sure, but I do not want my words to be twisted and used against me,” she said, crying, and I had no choice but to hold her close and calm her down.

If this was the case, there was only one thing to do: discredit the source and make it seem malicious.

“Nellie, you will listen to me now,” I said with a calm and cold voice.

“I need you to pretend like nothing is wrong. I need you to brush it off. Whoever is doing this is trying to push you off the edge. You mustn't let them. I need you to treat it as harassment. If the person had anything, you would have been arrested. Do not give them what they want. There is so much to deal with now. Do you think you can do that?” I asked her, and she looked into my cold eyes.

She wiped away her tears immediately.

“I am not worried about myself, Zora. I did a lot of shady things with Jenny and her brother. If word got out, Darius would be affected.” She said, and I nodded calmly, knowing all she was talking about, but we needed to focus on the most important thing, and that was to discredit the source. Moving on, the Mikha ilovs were important now. Who knows, Enzo might have the computer or may be Jacob.

I spent thirty minutes more in Nellie's room until she fell asleep. Then I asked a maid to remove the green drink from the room and returned to

I touched his head and ran my fingers through his hair to calm him down. He must have learned something horrible. We honestly deserved a break.

“Tell me,” I said, and he squeezed me tightly.

“He talked. Liam spilt everything, and it isn’t good,” he said and broke away so we could keep eye contact.

“I wasn’t going to tell you any of it so you won’t get upset, but I can’t keep secrets from you, Zora, you are my better half, and I do not want to lose your trust. So I will go against my better judgement and tell you. Please do not get upset,” he said, and I smiled at him.

“As long as it does not involve you being with another woman, I can deal,” I said, giggling, and he smiled at me.

“Far from it,” he said, and I already knew it.

He told me everything Liam had split, and I was in shock. I tried to hide it, but I couldn't. I saw the implications of what they were doing. I was mad. Getting a Sidorov and an Orlov involved meant big trouble for Marcel and Raphael.

“I am trying to seek Hardy's help. So far, they have been unable to get into his territory,” He said, and I wondered if Hardy would want to help him out. Knowing how much Hardy hated Darius and his family.

recently; before then, Ramsey's family was in charge,” I said, and he looked at me wide-eyed. It seemed like a light bulb had turned on in his head. It was cute.

“Why didn't I see it from that angle?” He said, asking himself and not me.

“Of course, Ramsey has a reason to work against Casey. Now I see everything,” he said, and I did not know what to think.

Darius looked like he was reasoning alone.

“Getting his daughter into your home.” He said, counting, using his fingers, and I was trying to make sense of his words.

“I am sure he must have been trying other things before then, Zora. Fate only worked in his favour where Lori was concerned. I am sure he did not expect to be lucky. His daughter’s fate was the man that took his family’s pride from him,” He said and looked at me.

“But there was a problem. You were a problem. The reason Casey refused to accept and honour the bond. The obstacle preventing him from getting close enough to do damage. You were a problem, his problem.” He said. and I was beginning to see his point. I waited patiently to see where he would land.

“He knew the bond would wither since Casey decided to shun Lori. The shunning was a subtle rejection but a rejection nonetheless, and that is why Casey is still unable to bond with Lori properly.

The goddess does not force us to be together, our heart decides to accept or reject the bond.

Casey had rejected her in a subtle manner. That was why Ramsey lied and forced his daughter into your home. Our wolves are primal hence why we have to control them,” He said and got up and began to pace.

s room and claiming her. Just like Cremin let go of Shanon and obeyed my choice, his wolf would have let go eventually, and Ramsey knew.

He had nothing to gain in enforcing the union unless he wanted to watch Casey and counter his moves.

He must have used his daughter as a spy to help him cause things that would make people doubt Casey’s leadership and destabilise him.

His daughter might have been willingly or unwillingly helping him by feeding him information,” he said.

It hit me that throughout the time Lori was with us, while I was there, she visited her father too frequently. I often thought she went to report us or tried to force her father to act in her favour, but I was wrong. She was feeding him information.

The past played vividly in my mind.

Ramsey was quiet when Casey took over, and there was peace.

We all knew he was scorned by it, but he had no Karanue of which to act on his emotions until fate happened.

The way he championed the union was off. He did not mind his daughter being a mistress. He said he wanted her to stay with us, and we could figure it out from there.

I felt his words were a bit off, but I did not pay any attention.

How many fathers would want their only child to be a mistress? With how Casey treated Lori, he should have taken her away from him by now. Instead, he allowed it.

It was when Lori got into the picture that the whole Elbert issue, fearing the Dark Lord Alpha of the Dark Wolf pack and the threat of doom to the east, became a topic of discussion in the council.

It took a while before he finally answered.

"Hello," he said with a sleepy voice.

"Casey," I said, and he was silent, then he spoke.

"Zora?" He asked, and I could hear the break in his voice.

I felt bad realising Ramsey had ruined our marriage deliberately for his personal gains.

I wouldn't have had it any other way because Darius is my destiny, but Casey and I did not deserve what happened to us.

"I just left the hotel suite. What do you need?" he said, and I sighed.

"Who pushed the idea that we should team up with Elbert because Darius might come for the east?" I asked, and he sighed.

“Cruz, of course,” He said, and I nodded.

“I know that much, but I need to know who put that in his head. Cruz isn’t our leader, he must have had a discussion with someone, and they sort of put it in his head. Can you find out how he came up with the idea?” I asked him, and he sighed.

“Who are you suspecting, Zora? I know you very well. You wouldn’t call to ask for such a favour if you did not already have someone in mind and wanted to clarify,” He said, and I sighed.

“I know this might sound off, but I think Ramsey put it in his head,” I said, and he was silent.

“I know he is Lori’s father, and trust me, I am not trying to get at her..” I said, and he interrupted me.

“I can never think that, Zora. I know you love Darius. I can never think you would want to get at Lori for anything. You saved her life that day. You could have waited for them to kill her and me before surrendering to go to the north. You ensured both of us survived, so I can never think that. I need you to tell me why you think Ramsey put it in Cruz’s head,” He said, and I relaxed a bit.

“He wanted Lori in our house by all means. He did not care if she would be a tired child or miserable. He just wanted her in our home. She told me he made her lie against you. He threatened her.

She is his only child, Casey. He shouldn’t do that, but then again, he was the leader of the east before we took over,” I said, and I had forgotten myself and used ‘WE’, and I hoped it wouldn’t get to Darius.

“She told you that when?” he asked and I told him of the meeting I had with Lori and her request. I heard him curse at Ramsey.

“He wanted her in our home so he could keep an eye on you and run circles around you. Problems started when she came to our house, and she visited him too often.

I doubt she knew what he was doing, so please go easy on her, but he used her. I just need to know if Ramsey put the idea in Cruz’s head so I can figure out what to do from there. It is very important because everything that has happened has almost led to war between the north, east and south.

I think Ramsey is part of this organisation, and they have recruited alphas in the east through him. I hope you can see the bigger picture.

In exchange for his help, they will give him back his honour and make him the leader of the east.

These people are crazy, Casey. I know of a mother that signed up her underaged son to be used as a tool and discarded; Ramsey could have done the same with Lori. What made her valuable and part of the plan was because she was fated to you,” I said, and Darius walked up to me and asked for the phone. He seemed a bit impatient, so I handed it to him.

“I need to see you and Hardy at the Estate tomorrow. It is an emergency. The operation is bigger than I thought, and you and Hardy are targets too. It isn’t just my fight anymore. Do you think you can make it here without telling your mate?” He asked him with a stern, commanding voice, and there was silence, and he spoke.

“Very well then, I will expect you in the morning. We need to move quickly,” Darius said and handed me the phone.

“Casey,” I said, and I heard him sigh.

“Is what he said true?” He asked me.

“Yes. It is bigger than we all thought, and I think Ramsey is part of it. Please do not let Lori in on anything. Tame Sage,” I said, and he was silent. I knew exactly what was running through his mind.

“Please, Casey. Think of your child. I doubt she knew her father was using her. Do not take it out on her, Casey. Please. Do not do anything that would alert Ramsey. We do not know what he is up to,” I pleaded with him, and he sighed.

“I will try, Zora. I will try,” he said, and I said good night.

Darius joined me in bed and hugged me.

“As much as I am grateful for this union, it breaks my heart that Ramsey ruined your home for this nonsense,” he said, and I did not know tears were streaming down my face.

I remembered the exchange.

I was mad. I was furious. I did not see Ramsey.

Casey was still haunted by it all.

Ramsey had destroyed a fine man because of his greed. He had condemned his daughter to live in a loveless relationship.

What kind of future will her baby have? The man was evil.

I thanked the goddess she gave me a second chance at love.

Casey deserved better, and I began to weep.

Darius held me tight as I wept my heart out.

I remembered everything Casey and I went through together, the promises we made, his remorse, and his effort. He tried. He wasn't emotionally strong enough, but he tried, and that bastard wrecked us.

It was personal between Ramsey and me now. If no one moved in on him, I would because he had rubbed me wrongly.

I wept and tried to calm myself down. Monica howled in my head, and Darius held me to his chest. I was a wreck, and I knew it. Seeing how hurt the realization of what happened made me feel, I wondered who would be consoling Casey.

Darius

Everything suddenly made sense, and I could feel Zora's pain.

Realising someone ruined her home because of his personal gains was very painful.

I held her in bed until she finally fell asleep. Then I slept.

I woke up in the morning and found Zora pacing in the bedroom.

I looked at the clock, and it was six in the morning.
I wondered what must have made her wake up early.

I looked at her sheer nightgown and saw the tiny bump. I smiled; realising that we would welcome our child into the world was heartwarming.

I looked at her, and my heart was glad.

She had brought joy into my life.

The need to end the trouble around us was critical.

I got off the bed and went to hold her.

She was startled a bit, which meant she was deep in thought, but she rested into my arms quickly, and I stroked her hair. She was gorgeous with her messy hair, and I loved her.

I placed my hand on her bump and kissed her forehead, taking in her scent, and Cremin howled in reverence in my head. We were complete. Our wedding would take place in three weeks, and it seemed too far.

“Zora,” I breathed, and she moaned, resting her head against my chest.

“Why are you up so early?” I asked, feeling the anxiety she was trying to suppress, and she gently broke away from me.

“Are you thinking of what happened to you and Casey?” I asked, and she shook her head, frowning at me.

“I was over it before I slept. If anything. I am grateful because it led me to my true mate,” she said, and I knew she wasn’t lying. I could see it in her eyes. She cared for Casey as her friend, but I was the only man in her heart. I would never oppose her friendship with Casey. It is a part of her, he is a part of her.

“So why the anxiety?” I asked her, and she sighed and went to sit at the foot of the bed.

I knew it wasn’t appropriate to be having erotic thoughts at the moment, judging the situation, but she looked very hot sitting in her short see-through night dress. Her nipples were hard, and she looked ready to be ravaged by me.

“Calm down, Cremin,” I said to my wolf because he wanted to go for it, and I could feel my cock twitching in my pants.

Zora looked at my pants and smiled at me. I looked down and saw that I was hard, so I went to sit beside her.

“Ignore it. Tell me,” I said, wanting to know what troubled her, and she smiled at me.

Zora did the craziest thing. She got up, knelt in front of me and sprang my cock loose from my pants.

I leaned back, ready to take what she offered, and she went to work.

It felt so fucking good.

She paid attention to it, sucked the tip and licked the shaft before taking it deep into her mouth until I hit her throat, and she gagged a few times.

Cremin was going crazy. We must have done something right to have it this good.

I leaned forward to see what she was doing, and the sight of her bobbing her head on my cock drove me to the edge. I gently held her hair away from her face while she paid attention to my cock.

“Zora,” I moaned, and she increased her pace.

I did not want to come in her mouth, so I gently pulled away.

Helping her up, I laid her on the bed and buried myself inside her. I felt at home and began to pump. I held on to my release waiting for her to climax.

She was wet, soft and slippery. Her walls milked my cock, making it hard to hold on.

She moaned, and I felt her. Her clenching walls squeezed tighter while I pumped.

I kept my rhythm and maintained my speed. Never crashing the build-up. I felt her nails dig into my skin as she climaxed, and I followed. I groaned deeply and released the ecstatic feeling that had overwhelmed me, pouring myself into her.

I pulled out and lay beside her in bed, trying to catch my breath. It was worth my morning.

I looked at her, and she was trying to catch her breath too.

“Thank you,” I said, and she smiled at me.

“You will thank me later,” she teased and giggled. We rested a bit before heading to shower. Entering the bathroom, we started our morning routine.

“Did you find out what happened to Jenny’s computer?” Zora asked me, and I wondered where the question sprang from. I figured it must have had something to do with the anxiety she was experiencing in the morning before my erection got in the way.

“Not really. Is there an issue?” I asked her, rinsing my toothbrush, and she nodded, spat the paste in her mouth, and then rinsed out her mouth before rinsing her toothbrush.

Holding the brush under the running water, she stared at it.

“There is a big problem, darling, but I want you not to panic,” she said and placed the brush in the holder.

She used the towel to dab the water on her lips and then went into the shower .

“What is it?” I asked, joining her in the shower and picking up the gel while she turned on the water.

“Someone has the computer, and they have access to Jenny’s email,” she said, and I froze.

Zora noticed it, collected the shower gel from me, and turned me around.

I felt her hands run across my back, gently caressing me as she lathered the liquid on my skin.

“How do you know this?” I asked her, and she sighed. I could feel her anxiety rise. She was worried about how I will take it.

“Did they threaten you with it?” I asked.

“No, no,” she said quickly, and I wondered what the issue might have been then.

“Tell me, please,” I said, shut off the water and turned to look at her.

Darius

Jenny knew my mother had a hand in my father’s death. Jenny knew my father wanted David as lord. Jenny knew a lot of dirty secrets, and the woman kept a record. She also Sagemailed my mother a couple of times, and my mother confessed to exchanging emails with her. This person with Jenny’s computer must have access to a lot of information.

“The message was vague, so I doubt the person has proof of anything. Look at it this way. If they had proof of anything at all, your mother would have been arrested by now. They might be trying to scare her and make her slip up,” she said, and I shook my head.

After speaking to Liam, I knew the organisation were smart and sadistic people. They might just want to drive her crazy and destabilise everything around us before they strike.

“They might just be playing with her and holding on to the ace,” I said to Zora, and she was silent. Her eyes showed that she was thinking the same thing.

“Damn it!” I growled, and Cremin began to growl. It had been a long time since I had shifted. Maybe I needed to let my wolf go wild. With the way I was feeling, I needed an outlet.

“I need to go on a run with Cremin,” I told my mate, and her eyes looked slightly sad. She nodded quietly, stepping away from me in the shower.

“I will be back. I just need to release my fear,” I said, gently patting her cheek, and she nodded. She was scared too.

“I will be back in an hour,” I said and stepped out of the shower. I wore

I walked briskly until I got to the exit, then headed for the western garden leading to the property’s forest. Getting into the woods, I shifted, letting Cremin take over, and we ran.

I moved about the woods growling with rage. I needed an outlet.

There were many clues, but none led us to the top. All we had were still pawns. I knew we would have to start arresting people soon, but I just hoped the noise would quiet until after my wedding.

We needed to have some peace and celebrate our wedding peacefully before we resumed this nonsense. I was sure the culprit would die a prolonged and painful death when caught.

I roamed about the forest and when the morning was very bright, I returned to where I had left my shorts, shifted back to my human form, wore the shorts and returned to the estate.

I rushed to my room to shower and dress up. Entering the room, I saw Zora standing by the window, staring outside with her hand on her tiny bump. She wa s worried, too; I could feel it. I went to her and held her from behind. I knew I was dirty, but I could not help but try to console my mate.

“You are back,” she said, turning toward me, and I noticed her eyes were swollen. Too many things were happening, and there wasn’t any time to take a breather.

“I can walk away from all this if you ask me to, Zora. I will gladly walk away and never look back. We can lead a quiet life. I heard my half- brother has a family and is living a quiet life. We can do the same,” I said to her, ready to walk a way because I was tired. We had no time.

Our wedding was around the corner, and we could not even plan it.

As things were looking, it did not seem like we would have a honeymoon. Zora shook her head, and I could see the rage in her eyes.

“I know you have called Casey and Hardy here, but I want you to listen to me, Darius,” she said, and I saw her eyes.

I knew she had thought about what she was about to say, and I knew it was severe.

“The alpha of the Dark wolf Pack, lord of all werewolves, one whom everyone refers to as the Dark Lord Alpha, will never walk away,” she said, and I frowned at her.

“Sometimes people need a nightmare to wake up,” she told me, and I frowned at her.

“You can talk to Hardy and Casey. You can reason with them. It is okay. But I want you to do this for our child and me.” She said, looking deep into my eyes, and her wolf flashed.

“I want everyone that Liam and Cindy mentioned arrested and locked up. I want their rights taken from them; I want you to bully the council and put them in their place. I want you to dismiss anyone that opposes you. I want you to be a tyrant; I want you to be the demon they fear, the Dark Lord Alpha,” she said, and I was stunned.

“I will stand beside you and support your every move. I will do whatever it takes to quiet the noise,” she said, and I felt her determination.

I looked into her eyes for a bit and gently nodded. She was right. We need to act and stop waiting. So much damage had been done throughout the waiting period.

This move would scare the culprit and destabilise them. But if we have to do this, the arrest must happen simultaneously in every region.

“I will do it. If that is what you want, I will do it. I will be that monster,

Alpha Jake stood up to greet me, and so did Marcel. Theo and Abelardo It was an official breakfast, and I could understand why Zora would organise it. It was a show of respect to Alpha Jake Brighton, telling him he was welcomed in our home that would alert Ramsey or Lori. I wasn't sure of the woman's role in the whole mess, but one certain thing was that she was indeed a channel.

We went to my office, and everyone made themselves comfortable.

"Casey and Hardy are on their way here; they said you invited them," Raphael said, looking a bit worried, and I nodded.

"I did so last night. Zora and I figured something out, and we need their cooperation based on what Liam told us," I said, and Marcel nodded.

"What did Christain's son say?" Abelardo asked, and I wondered how he was already up to speed, knowing he had arrived at the mansion early in the morning.

"I told him everything," Marcel confessed, and I nodded.

"I personally think Larry is part of them. The man does not like you," Abelardo told me, and I nodded.

"It is great that you know now, but that isn't why I have called the meeting," I said and looked at Marcel and Raphael.

"The only reason why fighting these people has been difficult is because we are trying to use the law to get them, but the truth is the law is working in their favour. With everything they seem to have planned out for us, we won't win." I said, and Theo bowed his head.

"We do not stand a chance playing fair. Our mates are expecting, and we have four weddings on the Blue Moon night in three weeks. At the rate this is going, the weddings will be rushed, or they might not hold. We might be exiled or disgraced before then. We need peace. Without peace, we cannot think.” I said, and Theo nodded.

“Raphael, your mate is showing now, mine has started to show, and Kara is just starting her journey. This is too much. Yesterday it was cards. Only the goddess knows what their next move would be. You all have heard firsthand what they are planning on doing. None of us is safe,” I said, and Abelard looked at me.

“So what do you propose? I know you are saying all this because you have a plan,” he said, looking at me, and I nodded.

I looked at Marcel and Raphael, and I sighed.

“All my life, I have tried to be fair and kind. I disliked my father so much that I did not want to be like him. So I gave the council liberty and allowed the people to decide. I tried to honour and keep to the laws and made myself accessible for all, and how did they pay me?” I said, feeling rage coming to the surface as I thought of all I had been through. The subtle attacks, the killings, the schemings and the lies.

“By running circles around me. Undermining my authority and trying to strip me of my power,” I said and balled my fist.

“If they had done this to my father, I would have said he deserved it, that he was too wicked, but what is my crime? What is our crime?” I asked, looking at them.

“They have food on their tables, jobs, freedom and peace. They can mix if they choose. Our world has never been this happy, but some people still feel they can do better than us. Instead of arguing with us in the council by conversing about their goals, they chose to be treacherous about it. Sneaking about and committing all forms of atrocities. We have heard what they call their leader. They call him a king,” I said and chuckled.

“I do not need anyone to tell me where all this is going. They do not seek democracy but autocracy. They worship a man, one wolf that wants to seize power for themselves. Either because they feel they will do a better job or they own it. This person is not planning for a rotation; they are planning to cripple the government and take it when it is at its weakest, and when will be the weakest time?" I asked them.

"Just like in the past, it will be when there is a council and governors. Neither having total power or control, both are required to work together but can successfully work against each other. This king's agenda will not bring peace but war and a bad case of inequality. Yet fools are running around and trying to make the 'king's' dream a reality. We all know he will not share his power or glory with them. Whatever he promised them might not be theirs to take at the end, yet they see me as the enemy," I said and chuckled.

"My only crime is being nice. My only crime is being understanding and giving people freedom. I am not lord of the north: I am a Hand; the Sidorovs, Orlovs, and Balyeavs are the lords, I am king!" I said, my blood boiling.

"My ancestors ruled this world from the beginning, and the Sidorovs, the Orlovs and the Balyaevs were born from the Hand lineage. I am king and refuse to be treated as a commoner in my kingdom. I am not the lord of the north but the king of wolves. Before all this nonsense, the rule was equal, and the people thrived.

I bet you none of this nonsense would have happened if we had maintained that order. The council was formed to represent the voice of the people to the king. Now they want to scrap us in the most brutal manner and take over. We can't let that happen," I said, and I saw a smile creep on Abelardo's face.

"I have waited for you to speak like this, brother," he said with joy, and I nodded.

Casey

Zora’s call brought back painful memories, and I soon found myself walking on the street where the hotel was. I couldn’t go back to my room

I couldn’t see Lori.

I was blind and weak. I was stupid and gullible. I helped Ramsey mess up my home.

All I had to do that night was reject her. I shouldn't have gone to talk to her. It was true when they said we should always tame our wolves and not let them drive or direct our actions.

My life was a mess because I allowed Sage to control me. I lost a great woman and companion because of a stupid bond.

Hearing that Darius and Zora were now fated broke my heart completely.

Maybe if I had rejected Lori and Zora rejected Hardy, we might have been fated. The goddess had already blessed our union under a blue moon. Why did my wolf destroy everything? I walked, tears streaming down my face.

I had never cried so much in my life, but this year had been hell for me. I had cried so much this year that tears had become normal. They fell easily, and I did not fight them. Everyone knew I was a wreck, and there was no hiding it.

I could not believe Lori had the effrontery to see Zora and make requests.

I have to commend Zora for her self-control.

I doubted I would have honoured her request if I were in Zora's shoes.

Not because she loved me or wanted to be with me but because her father wanted to take the east from me.

I walked and thought of everything. From when Ramsey began to clamour about me taking advantage of his daughter. Never for once did she come out an d confess it wasn't true. Zora might have asked me not to alert her, but I was done playing nice with Lori.

I did not care if she was carrying my pups. I knew she wouldn't have tried this with the likes of Hardy or Darius. I must have come across as a weak man to everyone for them to use me like this. The fact that I loved peace did not make me weak.

"I don't want her anymore," I heard Sage say in my mind. I could feel his anger. No one would be happy learning we were pawns, and a means to an end.

"Zora would never use us. Lori destroyed us," Sage said, and I could understand his pain.

"You should have ignored Lori's wolf's call, but you didn't. You left Zora's side and went into Lori's room to claim her. You put us in this mess, Sage," I told my wolf angrily because he had betrayed me the most.

"I am sorry," He whimpered in my head.

"Sorry won't fix it, Sage. Sorry won't change things. It won't bring her back to us," I told my wolf, and we were both in pain.

"When you came to me, you promised you would protect me, be my strength, and never hurt or mislead me," I reminded my wolf.

"Zora was in my life before you, Sage. You have always been a part of me from birth, but you came to my consciousness when I was eighteen. Zora was my friend before then, and we had each other's backs."

"You promised you would love what I love and protect it with everything. yet you betrayed her," I said. I felt Sage's pain, so I had to sit.

"You threw her away for a feeling, a bond that we could do without. You gave our enemy an opening to torment us. You made us weak. Did you see what Darius did at the ball?" I said, feeling ashamed of myself.

"He had a history with that woman, so the pull would have been stronger than ours, yet he honoured his promise. His wolf honoured his choice. His wolf did not knock him out and do the unthinkable, his wolf allowed him to make a choice and accepted it," I said.

"You cheated me, Sage. You knocked me out severally, battled me unceasingly, and kept trying to make it work by force. Every time I tried to touch my wife, you fought me. Every time I chose my wife, you fought me. You ruined me. You betrayed Zora, you betrayed me, Sage. If I could separate myself from you, I would in a heartbeat because you have done more harm than good," I said, and he was utterly silent.

"But I do not blame you, Sage. You were like a child in a candy store. I shouldn't have given you free rein. I should have held on to control and stood my ground: I should have completed my sentence on the balcony and spoken the right words to break free from her. I should have ended it on the spot, but I let it fester and gave it room to overcome us. So I take the blame for everything," I said, and Sage whimpered.

"We can't lose more than we already have. We cannot continue to let Ramsey run circles around us. I hope you know what we need to do?" I told my wolf, and he growled.

"We need to be the opposite of who we are, we need to be ruthless and unforgiving when dealing with the bastard. It means dealing with Lori too, even though she is carrying our pups. As things are, that pregnancy seems more like a trap than a coincidence because, to be honest, we weren't ready," I told my wolf, and he growled some more.

“I do not want Lori anymore; she has betrayed us,” Sage said firmly. I was determined to help him keep that resolve.

We returned to the room, and Lori was awake in bed, her eyes were puffy, and she looked worried. I did not say a word to her. I went back under the covers and lay down. Lori looked troubled and stared at me, still sitting in bed.

“Zora is never coming back to you, Casey, you must move on. You can’t keep punishing me like this. It isn’t my fault that we are fated,” She said to me, and I almost raised my hands at her because she had said the very words I said to my wife.

I sat up in bed feeling complete rage, and Sage keeping his promise, receded to the back of my mind, promising not to interfere this time.

“But it is your fault that you came into my home and broke my marriage. It is your fault that you could not speak the truth to the alphas when your father lied that I had accepted you and taken advantage of you on the balcony. It is your fault that you sowed discord between Zora and me by telling lies and pitting us against each other. It is your fault, Lori,” I said, and she shook her head, tears streaming down her cheeks.

“No, Casey, it is Hand’s fault that she is not in your life. He attacked the region and took her from you as tribute. Had he not attacked our region, she would have still been with you. You have an issue with him,” s he said, and I giggled. Knowing her father caused the incident that led to the attack made me giggle.
