

Chapter 32

Axel plopped into his bed. He took his hand to his forehead and rubbed on it for a few seconds before letting out a sigh.

He had thought that life was going to be perfect any time soon now that Hazel had shifted and she had even turned out to be his mate but her being a white wolf had ruined it all.

How could she even be a white wolf? How in the world could a white wolf have been living with the dark wolves all of these years.

He finally understood why Hazel always seemed more affectionate with the white wolves, it was because of the b***d of the white wolves inside of her.

This was not good for Axel.

This was not good for his ambition to become the Alpha. It was a fact that to become the Alpha, he would be better off with a stronger mate but the white wolves were generally less stronger than the dark wolves.

He was also pretty sure that no one would want him to get together with a white wolf. White wolves were meant to be maids, slaves to them, they were not meant to be the mates of someone like him, they were not meant for a huge position as the Luna.

But there was one thing he could do, he could not abandon Hazel, he could not let go of her even if she was a white wolf. He had to find a way to deal with things, a way to make the others accept her.

His love for her over all of the years was way too much than what he could let go because she was a white wolf.

“I just hope she listens to me and shows no one her wolf side until I find a way to make everyone accept her.”

The next day

Hazel woke up with a loud knock on her door. She g*****d, pushing the covers off her head and wondering who was at the door.

Her mind went to Axel but she shook her head. He knew her passcode and would never knock on the door.

She ran her hands through her hair to straighten it out a bit. She unlocked the door of the room and stepped out of the room. She walked down the stairs and finally opened the door to see...

“Rex?”

“Hazel” he called her name softly as he gently pushed past her into the house.

“What are you doing here?” Hazel questioned as Rex walked further into the room.

“We are in a relationship, right?” Rex asked and Hazel wanted to scoff and she eventually did scoff.

“A relationship? I do not think so at all. You never treated me like we are in a relationship....”

“Hazel, please understand me, I...”

“If you can never find the time and the strength to be with me, then I do not think that we should be in a relationship. Alright, I asked you to leave the hospital back then but did you even send a message? Did you pick me up from the hospital? You are not making any attempts...”

“I am making attempts, Hazel but you are just not seeing it yet.”

“Then make me see it! I do not want you making attempts that I cannot see!” She yelled.

She was tired of the fake love everyone seemed to be showing to her.

“Then you want Axel? The one who makes attempts that you can see?!”
Rex raised his voice.

“Yes... I was wrong, Rex. I do not like you” she shook her head.

“The one I love is Axel but it’s all unnecessary now. No one truly wants me.” She shook her head and pointed towards the door.

“There is the door. Please leave my home”

“No, I am not going to be leaving this time around” Rex shook his head.

“I will stay here until I am sure that Axel is out of your mind. I am the one you love not Axel”

Rex had to hold onto Hazel after all she was the only weakness of Axel. One that might prove to be important in the future.

Hazel was the only one Axel cherished as much as he cherished the post of the Alpha and so Rex had to make sure he had his grip on her.

“You all just leave me alone. I am gradually losing my mind!”

Rex moved closer to hug her but she took steps backwards.

“Do not come closer, please” she pleaded as she took more steps backwards.

Her anger was starting to boil and she could feel her wolf side threatening to take over out of her anger but the words of Axel made her try to keep her wolf in check.

However, Hazel did not have a good grip on her wolf side yet and trying holding it back was not that effective.

Rex continued to get closer.

“I said do not come closer!!” She screamed and hair began to sprout from all parts of her body.

Rex’s eyes widened in surprise as he saw her wolf side partially take over her.

“You have gotten your wolf side?” He questioned her but she gave no response and only let out a growling sound, telling him to get out.

“Hazel”

“Just go! Leave!”

Her wolf side took over her more by the second and it was only a matter of time and more anger before her wolf would take over fully.

She took steps backwards towards her kitchen while Rex approached her.

“Leave!!!!” She screamed and her scream disappeared into a howl as her wolf took over completely.

Hazel quickly ran with her back into the kitchen, slamming the door close with her furry body.

“Hazel! When did you get your wolf side? Step out of the kitchen”

“Should I come in?” He asked and Hazel felt him pushing the door of the kitchen in an attempt to get to her.

“What exactly is wrong with my wolf side? Why does Axel want me to hide it?” She asked herself as the door kept on pushing.

If Rex continued that way, the door would be opened in a few seconds and he would see her wolf side fully.
