

Chapter 71

“Hazel” Axel called but she gave no response to him.

“Hazel, I am talking to you” He leaned against the wall of the kitchen but she still gave him no response.

“Hazel” he finally walked towards her and was about to wrap his arms around her waist but she pushed him off and passed him a glare.

“C’mon, Hazel”

“Oh, you are going to act like nothing happened last night?” Hazel questioned and Axel gulped down.

“I was thinking of taking you out today. Let’s go have fun outside with Sana”

“Oh, that’s your way of forgetting about last night, right? Well, it is not my own way of getting over it. You chose your hands over my body last night”

“Pretty head”

“Don’t call me that until you tell me everything that is going on with me that you know about”

Axel pulled his lips into his mouth. Telling her about herself and then the prophecy was not a good option at the moment.

He leaned in and kissed her lips softly but she didn’t respond to his k*s. He slowly pulled away from the ks and caressed her face gently.

“Can you give me two days more?” He asked, caressing her face gently.

“In two days, I am going to tell you about it”

She narrowed her eyes at him.

“Are you sure?”

“Yes, I promise you”

“You promised already. You cannot go back on your words.”

“I will never go back on my words” he assured her and pressed his lips onto her forehead.

“I love you, remember that” he whispered as he pulled away.

“And I love you too.”

“And Sana loves mommy and daddy too” Sana walked into the kitchen.

“And mommy and Daddy loves Sana too” Hazel cooed but Axel simply walked up to Sana and scooped her up in his arms.

“She is little, she should not be in the kitchen yet. What if something happens?” He asked and Hazel chuckled, remembering how he would always chase her out of the kitchen when she was little but at least he was being nice about it to Sana.

“So you are going to wait till she is sixteen before you start letting her into the kitchen?” She asked with a chuckle.

“Yeah” Axel chuckled also and she giggled.

“You are never going to completely change”

“I am sure you do not want me to completely change too”

“I have never been a picnic before” Sana grinned as Axel laid the blanket on the grass.

“I have never been on one with people I can call true family” Axel replied and glanced over at the both of them, giving them a sweet smile.

“Me too. And I am glad to have found family in you both” Hazel replied.

“No, I am glad to have found that in you both” Axel replied as he sat down on the blanket.

Hazel and Sana did the same.

“It feels so nice, doesn’t it?”

“Yeah, it sure does” she affirmed.

“What would you like to eat first?” Hazel asked but before Sana could give a response, they all heard the screaming of someone.

Hazel and the other two turned backwards to see a boy around the age of fifteen being beaten up so badly by a man.

No one around seemed to care about it. It was obvious that the boy was a white wolf.

Sana looked at the boy with sad eyes, hoping that angels such as Axel and Hazel would find the boy very soon.

Axel looked at Hazel instead, noticing the rising anger that was fast clouding her face. He knew that it was because of the bd in her veins and then her duty from the prophecy.

He reached out his hands to touch her and calm her down but before he could do that, Hazel had shot up from where she was seated.

She got up on her feet and her claws grew out of her fingers, the fangs in her teeth instantly becoming obvious.

Axel quickly rushed towards her but as if Hazel was consumed by something, she hit him off, sending him rolling into the grass before he quickly got back on his feet.

“Do not shift, Hazel!” He screamed at her but Hazel was far too consumed by an anger that she could not understand herself.

Hazel shifted fully into her wolf form with a growl and leaped into the air, the white end of her tail screaming that she was a white wolf to every other person there.

Axel shifted into his wolf form too, ripping his clothes off as he sped towards Hazel to stop her from doing whatever she was about to do.

He jumped onto her, pushing her down to the floor as he tried to hold the furious Hazel down.

Sana screamed out loud as she saw Axel and Hazel involved in what seemed to be a fight.

Sana screams distracted Axel and just the few seconds of distraction was what the furious Hazel needed. She jumped onto the man who had been beating up the white wolf and tore him apart with a reverberating growl.

Everyone in the place gasped at the bloody sight. A white wolf had just torn apart a dark wolf and that white wolf was someone that some of them did recognize, Hazel Simons.

Hazel’s furious eyes seemed to ease and then her body fell to the floor as she shifted back into her human form.

Tears filled her eyes as she realized what she had just done. She could not understand why she had done that, she could not understand why she felt such immense strength and anger inside of her.

“I... I killed him” she cried as she stared at her bloody hands, her lips trembling.

Axel shifted back into his human form and walked towards her slowly. He wrapped his arms around her.

“I... Killed him, Axel. I don't understand myself, why did I kill him? Why do I feel more sympathy to the white wolves than the dark wolves? Why am I like this?” She cried out and without a word to her, Axel picked her up from the floor and walked towards their parked car that was close by.

He put the crying Hazel into the car and motioned Sana to get in.

With tears in her eye, Sana got into the car and he shut the door of the car after picking out a spare jacket.

He wore the jacket over his naked body and looked back at the people who had witnessed the scene.

He knew clearly that he would not be able to keep this a secret forever but he could keep it a secret for a few hours or a few days, maybe.

“Clearly, you all have seen what happened here!” He called out to them.

“Yes, what you have seen is what she is but what happened here must remain a secret.”

“But....”

His eyes turned red and the man about to talk lowered his head, not daring to look into his eyes.

“I do not care about what is in your mind right now! If I do hear about what happened here somewhere else, I will not care about who leaked it. I will come for each and every one of you and eliminate you all, I won't spare even one of you nor will I spare your family. I will wipe your family and your lives off this Pack”

“This could be an empty threat” he added.

“But I am sure that you do not want to find out if that is what it is.”

Threatening them into keeping quiet was the only thing he could do at the moment and the next thing he had to do was to take Hazel away, he had to make her hide somewhere else where no one would be able to find her because this happening would not remain a secret for long.
