Chapter 1023: A Lingering Fear

"He hasn't taken a vacation for a long time indeed. Let him rest longer this time." Matthew wondered if Dolores had sensed something. He asked tentatively, "Do you want me to work longer in the company?"

Dolores put his clothes into the suitcase and closed it.

"You've assigned a lot of work to others in the past decades." She raised her hand to stroke the corner of his eyes. "You have so many wrinkles here."

In fact, she knew that Matthew had given up a lot of things for her over the years.

"I'll help Joshua buy a new house, so it will take a long time. Joshua has move out when he was quite young. I want to take this chance to take care of him here."

Upon hearing it, Matthew didn't think Dolores had sensed or suspected anything yet.

Matthew breathed a sigh of relief inwardly. "All right. I'll let Abbott take a vacation." He covered the back of Dolores's hand. "Have I become old?"

"Yeah. But I still love you." She smiled. Her eyes were still bright, but time left traces at the corner of her eyes.

The only change on her face was the crow's feet. Compared to other women in her age, she had to take pretty good care of herself.

Dolores used to hear one saying, "The benefactor of the previous life can become a lover in this life."

She believed that probably that was how Matthew and she were meant to be.

In the past, Dolores wasn't quite willing to express her love verbally. However, as time went by, she believed that she must express it.

Matthew chuckled. "At your age, do you still want to use the honey trap on me?"

She raised her brows and asked, "Will you still fall for it?"

Knock. Knock--

There were suddenly a few knocks on the door. Dolores said, "I'll go answer it."

After opening the door, she saw Jasmine standing there. Seeing Dolores, she smiled and asked, "Am I interrupting?"

"Not at all. Please come in." Dolores stood aside to let her in.

Jasmine didn't enter. She said, "No, thanks, Dolores. I just want to inform you Boyce and I have to go home."

“So soon!” Dolores frowned. “Now?”

“I’m afraid so. Boyce has work to deal with.” Jasmine heaved a sigh. She didn’t want to leave so soon either, but Boyce must go back because of his work. She couldn’t do anything about it.

Dolores soon understood why Boyce had to go back so fast. The prime culprit of his case died, but the case must be closed. Boyce must go back to deal with it.

He was in charge of this case, so he must close it as well

Dolores and Matthew went to see them off.

“Will you stay here longer?” Jasmine pulled Dolores’s hand and asked while standing in front of the car.

“Yes, I will stay here for a while before going home.” Dolores knew what she implied.

“Please don’t worry about the kids. I’m here to watch them.”

"That's good then. I want Boyce to have early retirement so we'll have a relaxing life later.

Although it's threatening but not dangerous this time, I still have a lingering fear," said Jasmine.

Dolores nodded. Jasmine had always been supporting Boyce. Besides, for Boyce's work, Jasmine had been taking care of the family and never let Boyce worry about anything. Now they were aged and Boyce could have an early retirement. They should have a more peaceful life.

“I understand. I support whatever the decision you guys make.” Dolores patted her on her hand.

“Okay. Take care. “ Jasmine sat in the car with Boyce. The car window was pressed down. Dolores said,

“If you can retire, you should come here and stay for a while.”

Jasmine said, “We will.”

Watching the car leave, Dolores and Matthew went back to the house. Armand was standing at the door.

"Boyce is truly busy. He has to go home overnight right after his daughter's wedding," he remarked.

“You know what his job is, don’t you?” Dolores glanced at him.

Armand said, “I know he’s quite busy with his work, but he doesn’t have to work so hard. He should take

They walked into the house. Dolores said, “I’ll stay here for a while.”

Armand was quite surprised. “Don’t you go to Thailand?”

Dolores said, “Matthew will take charge of the company for a while, and I’ll stay here.”

“What?” Armand was more surprised. “Why?”

“It’s quite late now. Dolores, let’s go to bed.” Matthew was afraid that Armand would be too talkative.

Probably later Dolores would suspect something. Hence, he interrupted them.

Armand was speechless.

Chapter 1024: I'll Cure You for Sure

Armand wondered if he had spoken something wrong.

He looked confused.

"Did I say something wrong?" he asked Matthew while looking at him.

Dolores also looked over at Matthew. Obviously, she could feel that Matthew purposely interrupted Armand.

Matthew cast an indifferent glance at Armand. "You are getting aged. Have you become as oversensitive as a woman?"

Armand choked up.

He found that no matter what he said, Matthew would retort him. He shushed.

Dolores was also speechless.

She wasn't happy about his remark about a woman being oversensitive

She wondered if she should also stop speaking as well. Otherwise, Matthew would remark her being oversensitive.

After entering the room, Dolores couldn't help but ask, "Did you remark Armand or me just now?"

Matthew couldn't utter a beep.

Inwardly, he truly felt that Dolores had been oversensitive.

"Do you want to say that I'm oversensitive on this issue?" Dolores answered before he reacted. With a smile, she said, "All right. I might have been oversensitive. Let's go to bed early. You'll take an early flight tomorrow. You should have a good sleep."

Dolores had a self-reflection and realized that she had been a bit oversensitive recently.

Matthew and she had been together for whole life, she still suspected that he was hiding something from her. She didn't think it was appropriate.

"How long haven't we separated?" She unbuttoned the buttons on his collar and cuffs considerably.

Since Matthew left the company to the management team, he seldom wore business suits. Instead, he wore casual clothes. It was because of Joshua's wedding, so he put on a suit again.

Dolores seriously unbuttoned his shirt. "Go to take a shower," she said.

Matthew looked down at her. "Why do you treat me so well suddenly?"

She raised her brows. "Didn't I treat you well before?"

"Of course." Matthew grabbed her hands. "You've stripped me. Why don't you help me bathe?"

“Stop kidding, old man!” She patted his hands off. “Go take a shower.”

Matthew smiled in silence. He went to the bathroom obediently. It seemed that Armand’s interruption had removed Dolores’s suspicion completely.

The next morning, Matthew took the earliest flight and left.

Dolores stayed in Armand’s house.

They didn’t wait for Joshua and Bonnie for breakfast.

“Let’s eat.” Theresa poured a glass of milk for Dolores. “They should have it in the hotel.”

Dolores picked up the milk. “Theresa, please don’t go to your store today. Let’s go out to do something else.”

There were a lot of designers in the tailor’s shop, so Theresa didn’t need to go there every day. She sat down, took a piece of toast, and applied some peanut butter on it. “What are we going to do?” she asked.

“I must buy a new house for the kids. They can’t stay all the time in the hotel. If they stayed here, it would be too crowded. I must get them a new house so they could stay in their own home,” said

Dolores.

“Yeah. They are so young and just married. They should enjoy their private world. Okay. After breakfast, I’ll go out with you,” said Theresa.

“Are you having breakfast so early?” Joshua and Bonnie came in.

“Why didn’t you wait for us?” Joshua walked into the dining room and pulled a chair for Bonnie.

“We wanted to wait for you, but we thought you wouldn’t come here for breakfast. Why did you guys get up so early?” Theresa stood up to get the tableware for them.

“We seldom sleep in usually,” Joshua smiled and answered.

Before Theresa could answer the question, Armand chimed in, “But it was your wedding day yesterday, wasn’t it? We thought you couldn’t get up in the morning, so we didn’t wait for you.”

His words were full of ambiguous implications.

Bonnie lowered her head, blushing slightly.

Joshua was a man. Although Armand was a friend of his father, he was like a friend of Joshua. They were quite close and always spoke directly to each other. “Oh, you’ve experienced it before. That’s why you know,” Joshua joked.

Armand choked up for a moment.

"You brad, how dare you jest at me!" Armand said angrily but he smiled. "You've become like me more and more. Like my son."

"I can be your son, but you must let me inherit all your legacy." Joshua took over the tableware from Theresa. He looked up and smiled. "Do you want to recognize me as your son?"

Theresa faked being anger. "I dare not. You haven't called us Dad and Mom yet, but you are coveting our properties. You are so greedy!"

"Exactly! Too greedy!" Armand echoed.

"Look at you. So stingy! Do you think I truly want your properties?" Joshua bit on a piece of toast and said, "I want to eat eggs stewed in tea."

"I'll make them tomorrow," said Theresa.

Joshua smiled.

"I'll go out to find you a new house today. Do you have any requirements, Bonnie?" Dolores gave Bonnie her fried egg.

"Up to you, Mom. I don't have any requirements. It'll be better if it's closer to the company, so it's convenient for Joshua." Bonnie was quite shy. "Mom, please have the egg."

She put her plate in front of Dolores. "I'm not quite hungry. I've had a piece of toast just now."

The breakfast in the hotel was quite simple -- fried eggs, some toast, fruits, and milk.

"Just eat it. I'll look at as many houses as possible before making the decision." Dolores reached out and tossed a strand of hair for Bonnie and put it at the back of her ears. "You can go back to the hotel for a rest after breakfast."

She was afraid that Bonnie would feel shy if staying here.

Bonnie lowered her head and answered, "Okay, Mom."

After breakfast, Dolores wanted to clean up the table, but Theresa stopped her. "Let Armand do it. Let's go."

Armand looked at them pitifully. "I can clean the table, but can you take me along with you?" he asked.

Joshua and Bonnie had gone back to the hotel. Boyce and Jasmine had left. Now if Dolores and Theresa also went out, Armand would be alone at home.

"If you are bored, just go to your factory." Theresa looked at him. "You can't leave everything to Joshua completely. He just got married. You should help him keep an eye."

Armand was silent.

"I found you dote Joshua more than doting me. You are so considerate of him. Why aren't you considerate for me?" he complained in a grievance.

"Joshua had never done anything wrong to me. But, have you?" Theresa looked at him with a smile.

Armand shushed immediately.

"I'll clean the table and do the dishes. I'll also prepare for lunch."

Dolores could hardly hold back her laughter while watching them. She patted Theresa and said, "Could you just stop bullying Armand?"

"No, she's not bullying me. I volunteered," Armand hurriedly said.

Theresa cast him a glance and went upstairs. "I'll go get changed."

In the past, Dolores felt quite sorry for Theresa. She felt that Theresa had tolerated a lot of grievances after being with Armand. In fact, she did. She even couldn't become a mother all her life because of Armand, which was the regret of her whole life.

Watching how Theresa and Armand got along now, Dolores felt sorry for Armand. However, she didn't think Theresa had gone too far. Theresa had suppressed herself for a long time, and finally, she could lead a worry-free life proudly. Dolores felt happy for her.

"Alas... She doesn't care about my dignity even when there are guests." Armand rubbed his nose. He felt embarrassed because he was mocked at such an age.

Dolores helped him clean the table "I'll do the dishes. No one is mocking you. She has suffered a lot. You should be generous to her, obey her, and dote her," said she.

"I'll do it, Dolores. You can go out early. I know it, so I won't get angry no matter what she does to me. I know I've owed her all my life. It's already the greatest gift from her since she has forgiven me and been with me." Armand knew everything quite well.

He understood everything.

In the small town.

After Evelyn had been to a big herb store in the city and found the herb she wanted, she started to cure

Andrew.

"No worries. I'll cure you for sure." She seriously weighed and dispensed the herbs.

There was a room in her house in which three walls were covered by the cabinets. All different kinds of herbs were stored there. There was a rectangular table in front with an electronic balance.

In the past, her family used the balance with weight scales. Now she used the electronic one.

Andrew was sitting on the chair next to her. He had used to the herb smell that fulfilled this room. He turn in the direction where she was speaking and said, "Are you sure my blindness wasn't caused by my injury this time?" _____

Evelyn blinked while looking at him. "Why? Don't you believe me? Are you afraid I might not cure your eyes?"

"I like being this way." Andrew chuckled.

"Why? You even can't see me." Evelyn looked quite serious. "I must cure you."

Andrew waved at her. "Come here."

Evelyn put down the herbs in her hands and walked to him. Then she sat on his lap naturally. She had a faint scent of the herbs, which didn't smell bad. It made his mind clear instead.

Andrew stroked her through her back to her cheek, pinching it gently. "I'm afraid you're too ugly. I'll be freaked out."

Evelyn pressed her head on his shoulder. "You said you won't mind if I was ugly. Why? Do you want to go back on your word?"

"Of course not." Andrew's tone suddenly became quite serious and deep. "If you were truly ugly, I'll marry you as well."

"If I was ugly and poor, what would you marry me for?" Evelyn looked at him. Her nose tip slightly touched his cheek. Her breath was exhaled onto his skin.

Feeling the warmth, Andrew didn't mind it at all. Instead, he enjoyed the feeling.

He also wondered about her question. Would he marry her for her beautiful voice, knowing Chinese medicine, or being so kind?

He didn't know the exact answer. He only knew that he enjoyed being with her a lot.

Although he hadn't seen her face yet, her voice was sweet and gentle

It was a cool breeze in the summer, gently touching his heart.

Holding Evelyn, Andrew could clearly feel her thin and soft body. His heart fluctuated.

He guessed that probably he would marry her for the feeling she brought him.

That was a feeling that he had never experienced from another woman.

“You are so skinny. How did you manage to carry me down from the hill?” It was so difficult for him to imagine such a soft and weak girl to carry him on her back and went down the hill

“Although I’m thin, I’m not weak,” said Evelyn, “You might not win against me in a fight.”

Since her childhood, her grandmother had nursed her health. Evelyn looked weak, but she had power. In the past, she also learned martial arts from an old hermit for self-protection, because her grandmother was afraid that she would be bullied. She made great progress in it. An ordinary man might not win against her.

“For real?” Andrew smiled. Obviously, he didn’t believe her.

Evelyn slight frowned and said, “Let’s have an arm wrestling.”

“Sure, but we must get a prize for the winner. It’ll be more interesting.” Andrew pressed his lips with a hidden scheme.

Evelyn didn't pay attention to it. She was thinking about what prize was good for her.

“The one who loses will give the winner one promise without any condition. What do you think?”

Andrew added.

Since Evelyn rescued Andrew, the latter had been recovering all the time. Although he looked tall and strong, he looked pretty fragile. Evelyn believed that she could fight against two adult men at the same time, so she didn’t think it would be a problem to win against Andrew.

She had completely ignored that he was a soldier._

“Okay! It’s a deal!”

“Deal!” Andrew reached out his hand.

Evelyn said, “Wait a minuted.”

She went to bring a stool over and put it opposite Andrew. In between, she also put a small table, making it quite formal.

“All right.” She sat opposite him and pulled Andrew’s arm on the table. Holding his hand, she said, “I’m ready.”

Andrew was quite calm and casual. “If you made my arm tilt for one per cent, you would be the winner.”

Evelyn raised her eyebrows. “You look down upon women, don’t you? You’ll suffer a loss.”

Andrew only smiled calmly.

However, when Evelyn increased her strength, she found that although Andrew looked fragile after being injured, his arm was full of strength. She couldn't move him a bit at all. She frowned, realizing that she might be too careless. However, it was too late for her to regret it. It was like archery. Once, the arrow was released, it couldn't come back. Since Andrew couldn't see, she secretly used both hands. Andrew found it but didn't expose her, letting her use her both hands at the same time. It turned out even if she had used both hands, she couldn't shake Andrew's arm at all. "I'm a girl. You must let me win." Evelyn pouted. "You are a man." "I only used twenty per cent of my strength. What else should I do?" Andrew laughed complacently. "You lost. You must promise one thing." Evelyn was speechless.

It wasn't until then did she realize that she had fallen into his trap.

"I give up." She released him. When she was about to withdraw her hand, Andrew grabbed it with strength. Then he withdrew his arm and pulled her into his arms. While doing it, he knocked over the table between them and there was a loud bang. "Uh..." Evelyn was startled. When she returned to her senses, she found herself in his arms. "What do you want?" "Of course, I want my prize." Andrew wrapped around her waist tightly, his fingers rubbing her skin. Evelyn's heart was racing. She stammered, "What... what prize do you want?" She was usually sharp-tongued and graceful. Right then, Andrew couldn't see her expression, but he could feel that she was shy. Imagine her blushed face, Andrew believed that she must look quite adorable now. He laughed and said, "A kiss." Evelyn was silent. She whispered, "Did you set me up?" "I'm blind. How could I set you up?" Andrew didn't admit it. "You must admit defeat for the bet." ____

Chapter 1027 You've Slept in My Bed

“What if I don’t?” Evelyn looked at him secretly.

Since they were quite close, she could clearly see the fine fluff on his face. The wound on his forehead had almost recovered. There was only a slight scar. Even she was looking at him so closely, she couldn’t find any defect on his face. He was so handsome.

Andrew couldn’t see but his hearing was quite sensitive. He could know where she was facing upon her gentle breath. “I’ll give you a chance to take advantage of me...” he said.

While he spoke, he pressed the back of her head and accurately found her lips. He bent down and kissed her.

Evelyn didn’t struggle or close her eyes. She kept staring at him and kissed him back slowly...

Due to their little interactions, the herb soup that was supposed to be ready by two in the afternoon was ready by four in the end.

Evelyn complained, “It’s all your fault. The herb soup is delayed.”

She poured the soup into the bowl.

The boiled soup was quite hot, and its smell fulfilled the room.

She wanted to cool it down, so she went to get some candy.

She knew it was quite bitter, so she prepared candy deliberately.

Later, it would cover the bitterness in Andrew’s mouth.

“You must trust me.” Evelyn took the bowl of soup to Andrew. “I will cure you for sure.”

“I trust you,” said Andrew. He truly meant it. He trusted this girl. If she would harm him, he wouldn’t have survived until now.

When getting along with her, he had found that she was a kind girl with a strong hands-on ability.

He had never met such a kind of girl.

She was so young but she knew Chinese traditional medicine.

Evelyn put the bowl next to her lips and tested the temperature. When she ensured that the soup had cooled down, she put it next to Andrew’s lips. “Take it. It’s quite bitter. I got you some candy.”

Andrew smelt the strong herb smell with steam.

He opened his mouth. Evelyn cooperated with his swallowing speed and slowly tilted the bowl.

The soup smelt bad and tasted quite bitter.

However, Andrew didn’t frown at all when taking it.

Soon, he finished taking the soup. Evelyn put down the bowl and get him a glass of plain water. Then she fed him with candy. She was quite careful and patient. For dinner, she cooked the dumplings with shredded shepherd's purses. She made them yesterday. Since she had made a lot of them, she put some into the fridge. Hence, she cook it for dinner tonight. It was already dark outside. She closed the door of the yard. At the door, there was a lamp to light up the whole yard, in which there was a square table. She put the dumplings, bowls, tableware, dipping sauce, and stir-fried vegetables on it. "We'll have dinner in the yard today." She helped Andrew go out of the door and to the yard. Then she helped him sit down on a stool. "Is it too short?" The table and stools were all small, so they were short as well. "Not really." Andrew sat down. Evelyn sat next to him. "What would you like to eat tomorrow? I'll cook for you." Andrew just felt that she was amazing. She knew the Chinese traditional medicine, played martial arts, and was good at cooking. The soup, stir-fried vegetables, and dumplings with wild herbs that she made were all tasty. "I'm not picky." Evelyn started feeding him. "Oh, it's easy to raise you, then." Andrew asked, "So, will you raise me?" "Of course." Evelyn used his chopsticks, picked up a dumpling, and put it into his mouth. "You've slept in my bed. You are mine now." Convenient Marriage: Mr. Nelson's Love Trap Chapter 1028 I'll Be Responsible for You

Andrew was taken aback for a moment. Earlier, he was teasing, but he felt that she had teased him. "There are stars in the sky tonight, quite bright. When you can see, shall we sit in the yard and look at the stars?" Evelyn looked up and stared at the starry night. "I don't think you could see such a starry night in big cities." She withdrew her gaze and looked at Andrew. "Does your family live in a big city?" Andrew nodded frankly. "Yes." "How many family members do you have?" asked she again. "My parents, my younger sister, and young brother." Andrew reached out to rub her head. "They'll also be your family in the future."

“Are you the oldest?” Evelyn smiled. “If I married you, I would become their sister-in-law.” He smiled affectionately. “Of course.” Evelyn covered her mouth and smiled. “Will they like me?” “Of course. They are both quite kind.” Evelyn thought for a while and tilted her head. “I’ll also take good care of them.” Andrew laughed. “You are so young. Why would you like to take care of them?” Evelyn also laughed. “Because I’m their oldest brother’s wife.” Andrew smiled, holding her in his arms.

After dinner, Andrew was sitting in the yard and enjoyed the peace, breathing some fresh air.

Evelyn did dishes and cleaned the table.

After that, she sat next to Andrew in the yard for a while. They didn’t go back into the house until past eight.

Evelyn helped him go upstairs. “I’ve plugged in the water heater. There should be hot water. Let me help you bathe.”

Andrew paused a bit. Turning in the direction where her voice came from, he asked, “Are you sure?”

“Did I help you bathe last time? Why? I won’t take advantage of you. Actually, it’s me who would suffer a loss,” Evelyn mumbled, “I don’t mind you are poor and blind. I let you share my bed. I cook for you and help you bathe. I treat you so well. You can’t find any other woman who would be so good for you.”

“How do you know I’m poor?” Andrew had never told her about his family. He wondered why she misunderstood that he was from a poor family.

“Of course. If you were from a rich family, you would stay home and inherit the legacy. You would be a rich business owner, wouldn’t you? How could a man from a rich family give up the wealthy life, serve in the military, and always live in danger?” Evelyn said affirmatively. It sounded quite reasonable.

Andrew even didn’t know how to retort.

“What if I’m truly from a rich family and came out to suffer?”

Evelyn looked at him up and down, raising her eyebrows. “You said ‘what if’. It’s such a small possibility

No worries. I’ll raise you.”

She helped him to sit on the bed. “I’ll take off your clothes now,” she said.

Andrew was wearing a white T-shirt, bought by Evelyn for him. All his underwear, outfits, and daily supplies were bought by her.

10 Stars Who Got Excluded From The Hollywood Elite Club

The Criminal Minds Cast: Where Are They Now?

He was raised by Evelyn in the current circumstance.

Since there were no buttons, she grabbed his shirt and lifted it, taking it off for him.

She had cleaned the wounds for him and helped him bathe before, and she knew he was strong.

However, whenever she saw his body, she couldn't help gazing at him.

His figure was way too charming.

In this town, no man had the guts to provoke Evelyn. She was young and good-looking, but she was quite tough.

Even someone was drooling at her appearance, he didn't dare to pursue her, afraid to be beaten.

Back then, the son of the town chief had a crush on her. She kicked him into the driver when harassing her. It was in the winter. Later, he dared not to bother Evelyn any longer.

Since she didn't even like the son of the town chief, other men dared not to bother her easily.

Hence, although Evelyn was living alone in the house, no one came to make trouble for her. No one dared to bully her in this town.

"Will you blush?" Evelyn started taking off the pants for Andrew.

Andrew's heart was racing. On the surface, he faked being quite calm. "I'm a man. How could I blush?"

"Why you purposely tightened your face? Aren't you pretending to be calm?" Evelyn intentionally teased him. Raising his chin, she said, "Don't worry. If you want to sacrifice yourself to me, I'll be responsible for you and marry you."

Andrew was silent.

He wondered if she was flirting with him.

"Evelyn, can't you be more reserved?"

"I truly love your appearance. If you were too ugly, I wouldn't have saved you." Evelyn helped him stand up. "Let's go to the bathroom."

The skin of her palms was quite soft and smooth. When she touched Andrew, his muscles were all tightened.

After finishing the bath, Evelyn was also wet all over. Since Andrew couldn't see her, she also showered and went out of the bathroom together with him.

She helped Andrew sit on the bed. When she was about to get the hairdryer from downstairs, he suddenly called her.

“Ehn?”

She looked back. He wrapped around her waist, pulled her into his arms, and pressed her below his body.

Evelyn wasn't panicked. She widened her bright eyes and looked at him who was above her.

She pinched the bedsheet.

Her heart hammered.

“Evelyn, I'll be responsible for you,” said Andrew.

“I know.” Evelyn held her breath and dared not to move a bit. She could only hear her heart beating so violently.

Right then, she was so nervous. However, she didn't want to retreat. Instead, she took the initiative and wrapped her arms around his neck.

Everything happened so naturally.

In the morning, the sunshine shone through the crack of the curtain, falling into the room gently.

In the bed, Evelyn's small body was nestling in Andrew's arms. She was still sleeping soundly.

When the clock on the wall showed it was eight o'clock, Evelyn felt her cheek tickled.

“Hmm--”

She moved a bit and slowly opened her eyes. There was light in the room. She closed her eyes and opened them twice. Then she completely opened them.

“Are you awake?” Andrew's eyes were opened, but he couldn't see her. He could only stroke her features with his hands.

Probably it was because Andrew couldn't see her, she wasn't embarrassed. Reaching out her hands, she also stroked his features. The longer she looked at him, the more handsome she felt he was. She looked up and pecked him on his lips. “Are you hungry?” she asked.

It was already past eight. Usually, they had breakfast at seven o'clock in the morning.

“Ehn--” He answered in a deep tone as if it was from his chest. In the end, he lengthened the tone, sounding so ambiguous.

Evelyn grabbed the towel to cover herself. “I'll cook for you...”

As soon as she lifted the quilt, Andrew wrapped her slender body with his hands and held her together with the quilt in his arms together.

"Let me get up. I'll prepare for the breakfast." Evelyn slightly struggled.

"You are my breakfast." Andrew held her tightly with his strong arms. "You are a little liar." Evelyn was confused in silence.

"You told me you are ugly. Didn't you lie?"

"Can you see me now?" Hurriedly, she waved her hand in front of him and muttered, "It shouldn't be. It will take at least several times for you to get better."

Andrew's eyes were not caused by any injury. When he was in the mountain, the power of some kind of butterfly dropped in his eyes, so it caused disturbances of visual acuity.

This kind of butterfly had quite colourful wings.

Seeing that he didn't respond, she could tell that he still couldn't see anything yet. She asked, "You can't see me at all. How do you know I'm not ugly?"

Andrew smiled without answering her.

Every night, he would stroke her face with his hands. Although he didn't have a clear picture, he had a rough illusion, which was told by his fingers. He roughly pictured what she looked like in his mind.

Evelyn suddenly felt a bit frustrated, afraid that her appearance would disappoint him.

She clung to her face on his chest. "No matter what I look like, you must remember how well I treat you."

"I won't forget."

Andrew kissed her on her forehead gently.

However, right now, in the town.

Noah said, "We've searched for him here. The top has sent several men here. Why did you have to come here in person?"

Matthew looked solemn. "If your son disappeared and no one knew if he was alive, would you feel easy?"

Noah was rendered speechless.

In fact, he was afraid that Matthew's appearance here would make Dolores suspect.

However, he believed that Matthew would have dealt with it well.

"We've enlarged the scale of search. Please don't worry." Noah took the lead in front.

"Although it happened nearby here, I don't think we could find him nearby. There are two towns and seven or eight villages around this area. We've done the comb search but failed to find him. I'm wondering if our strategy was wrong. Probably he's not here now."

Matthew didn't answer. He wanted to see the scene first.

The scene was in the mountain and it would take him two to three hours to enter.

Noah followed him and explained the situation, "The town just now was the closest place to the scene.

We've searched there twice, but the villagers all said no stranger had been there before.

We did search for him inside their houses. If any of them saw someone injured and rescued him, they shouldn't have hidden him. Hence, I don't think he's here."

Besides, who would hide an unknown man in their houses?

The scene had been damaged. Matthew saw a lot of footprints without any clue.

However, his intuition told him that if Andrew was still safe, he must be nearby here. After all, it was rare for outsiders to come over, and nor would they come into such a mountainous area.

Who would come to such a remote place?

Hence, Matthew didn't think the search scale was quite big.

Out of the mountain, Matthew found a detailed investigation -- since the mountain was located on the border of two countries, ordinary people wouldn't go there

Hence, there were a lot of wild animals on the mountain.

There was a local black market, in which the wild animals were traded secretly.

Due to its existence, some people would go to the mountain. Hence, whoever went to the mountain would possibly find Andrew.

That could explain why Andrew was completely missing.

If it was a person who secretly engaged in wild animal trading when he met Andrew, he would either rescue Andrew and hid it from others due to their dark trades, or he would kill Andrew to avoid their trades from being exposed.

No matter what had happened, Matthew believed that it was a key to find Andrew's whereabouts.

If they didn't have any method, no matter how big the search scale would be, it would be useless.

"According to your guess, anyone who had been to the mountain would have a chance to find Andrew, right?" Noah was enlightened. "I agree. We should find those people who probably had been to the mountain."

"I'll send someone to look into it." When Noah was about to stand up, he recalled something and then sat down. "We searched in one house in this town before. There was just a girl living in the house. She had a lot of herbs. The citizens of the town also said she often goes to the mountain. However, we've searched in her house but couldn't find Andrew. I don't think a girl would hide an unknown man in her house, would she?"

Matthew looked up at him.

Meeting his ink-black eyes, Noah hurriedly said, "I'd rather make a mistake than missing anything. I'll ask my man to go there again."

"Is it far from here?" asked Matthew.

"Not really. It's on a hill in that direction," Noah pointed in the direction where Evelyn's house was.

"Let's go there now." Matthew stood up. Noah wanted to persuade him to take a rest first as he never rested after his flight had landed. However, if his son were missing, Noah didn't think he would have the mood to rest either.

"I'll show you the way," said Noah.

It was almost seven in the evening now, so they went over with several other men.

When their car arrived at the bottom of the hill, they found the lane was way too narrow.

Hence, they couldn't drive up but only walk.

They parked the car next to the hill.

"Someone in the town said the girl in this house is quite bold," one of the men said.

Noah took a glance at him. "How bold?"

"They said she dared to catch a viper with bare hands. Isn't she bold? Many women would be freaked out when seeing a snake." _____

Noah raised his eyebrows. "For real?"

The man said, "Yeah, it's real. Someone in the town witnessed it himself."

Another man said, "Let's see what kind of girl it is late."

While talking, they walked towards the hill.

Right then, the cell phone in Matthew's pocket started ringing. He pulled it out and found it was a call from Dolores. He paused a bit. After Noah and other men went afar, he swiped to answer it.

"Hello..."

“Why did it take you so long to answer the phone?” Dolores asked hoarsely in a strong nasal voice.

“What happened?” His face tightened immediately.

“Uncle Kevin... He passed away.”

Matthew wasn't quite surprised. After all, his doctor had mentioned that at the most he could only witness Joshua's wedding.

“I'll go back now.”

He hung up the phone and called Noah back.

“I must go back. Please go on searching here,” said Matthew.

“Haven't you just arrived? Why are you going back now? Has anything happened? Or...”

Matthew interrupted him, telling him that Kevin had passed away.

Noah nodded. “I see. Please rest assured and leave everything to me. I'll investigate as you suggested.”

Afraid that Matthew was still worried, Noah added, “I'll try my best to find Andrew as soon as possible.”

Matthew didn't answer. He put his hand on Noah's shoulder in silence, which actually implied a lot of things. Although he didn't speak a single word, Noah knew how heavy the burden was on his shoulders.

“I'll try.” Noah gave him a ride to the airport. The men who came with them would continue searching for Andrew.

After Matthew had arrived, without a rest, he had to rush back.

They had to drive to the city so he could take a flight.

Noah drove directly to the airport in the city.

However, they didn't find a suitable flight to fly back, so Matthew changed to take the high-speed train

It took him a whole night to see off Matthew and come back to the town.

When he finally got back, it was almost bright

However, the good news was waiting for him.

“Andrew Nelson has been found,” someone trotted over to tell him good news as soon as Noah had parked the car.

“When?” he asked.

“Last night.”

After Noah and Matthew were gone, those men continued to search. In the evening, Evelyn was having dinner with Andrew in the yard, which was seen by them.

"Where is he now? Why didn't you call me last night?" Noah asked in a deep tone.

"We tried to call you but couldn't get through."

"How could it be?" Noah thought that he was talking nonsense. He pulled out the phone from his pocket, but the screen didn't light up after he pressed the buttons. It turned out that his phone was dead.

"How could it be dead at the critical moment." He felt a bit annoyed

"We've picked up Andrew Nelson as well as the girl who has saved him," the man reminded Noah.

Noah said, "Okay. I'll go check on him. That's the most important."

It was good to find Andrew.

He strode ahead while asking, "Is he OK?"

The man who followed him paused a bit. "Well, he's blind."

"What?" Noah couldn't keep calm. His face went livid and pale.

"But he'll be fine. The girl who has saved him said it could be cured."

Noah felt as if he was riding a roller coaster when hearing the bad and good news. He said,

"Okay. Let's get in."

They stayed in a house in this town. There were a lot of family members in this house, but they were all out of town now. The whole house was empty.

They rented it.

After they had found Andrew, they took him to this house.

When Noah entered the door, he saw Andrew sitting on the chair. He strode over to him.

"Andrew..."

"Uncle Noah?" Andrew greeted him when hearing his voice.

Noah grabbed his shoulders, his hands trembling. "Good you are fine. I'm so glad.

Otherwise, I don't know how to explain it to your parents. And your eyes..."

"I'm fine," said Andrew with a smile. "Evelyn will cure my eyes for me."

Noah was stunned at the name.

He turned around to look at the girl standing behind Andrew.

"She is Evelyn. It's she who saved me," said Andrew.

"Thank you so much. Please let me know if you want anything. You've saved Andrew, so you are the benefactor of the Harris and Nelson families. As long as we can afford it, we'll satisfy your conditions."

Noah wanted to thank this girl who had saved Andrews.

"Uncle Noah," Andrew called him.

"I'm here." Noah reached out to grab his hand. "Since you were safe, why didn't you contact us? Don't you know how much we were worried about you? We dared not to let your mother know and hid it from her. We're afraid that she wouldn't bear it after knowing something happened to you."

"I was in a coma for a long time. After waking up, Evelyn said someone was looking for me outside. I thought it was the remnant of the criminal. Besides, I couldn't see anything, so I didn't contact you, afraid to bring you trouble and danger."

He also was afraid that he had become blind, which would worry his family, so he didn't contact them right away.

"Evelyn said my eyes will be recovered in a few days, so I decided to contact you when I've recovered.

Sorry for worrying you all."

"It's alright. It's alright. The most important is you are safe and sound. I'll call your father.

He has just left last night." As he spoke, Noah asked a man to pass him a cell phone.

"Did my father come over? How about my mother?" asked Andrew.

"Your father came here alone. Your mother didn't know what happened to you. We've been hiding it from him. You know she's quite fragile, so we're afraid she wouldn't be able to bear the bad news." He dialled the number and put it next to his ear.

"Don't tell them about my eyes. I don't want them to worry," said Andrew.

Noah looked at him and said, "Okay."

Meanwhile, the call was connected.

"Andrew has been found, Matthew," he said.

"When?"

"When you were leaving last night. He was safe and sound. Don't worry. We'll go back now."

"Ehn."

"We'll go back to City B first, then to City C," said Noah.

"Ehn."

Noah hung up the phone, looking over at Andrew. After a hesitation, he said, "Grandpa Kevin passed away."

Then he comforted Andrew, "It's a destiny for the old. Please restrain your grief."

Andrew knew it but he still felt upset. "Shall we go back today?"

"Yeah. We should set off now. Then we'll be able to attend his funeral," said Noah.

Andrew also thought so. They went back to City B together. Since Evelyn would cure his eyes, she followed them.

When Noah left City B, he told Chloe what had happened honestly, so she also know about Andrew's matter. Seeing him come back safely, Chloe felt quite lucky

“Your uncle has told me everything, Andrew. Take a rest. He’s arranging your trip to City C. We can set off tonight.” _____

Chapter 1031 Remuneration

“Okay. Thanks, Aunt Chloe,” answered Andrew.

“It’s been a long journey. You should be thirsty now. I’ll let you a glass of water.” Chloe went to get some water.

“Evelyn,” Andrew reached out his hand, “Where are you?”

Evelyn put her hand in his palm. He gripped her hand and said, “When we arrived at City C, you’ll meet my parents, younger brother, and younger sister...”

“Andrew,” Evelyn interrupted him. She had originally thought for real that he was from an ordinary family. However, since they came back, on the way, she could feel how well others treated Andrew. Also, when they mentioned Andrew’s father, she could tell that his father wasn’t ordinary. “You are not from an ordinary family, are you?” she asked.

“No worries, Evelyn. My mom is a gentle woman. She will like you.” Andrew didn’t want to give her any fixed impression first. He said, “You don’t need to worry. My family members are all easygoing. I like you, and do will they.”

When Chloe walked over with a glass of water, she heard what Andrew said and paused her paces, gazing at Evelyn. In the beginning, she had thought that Evelyn had just saved Andrew. However, now she realized that there was something between them.

She wondered if Evelyn had done something to Andrew when he was blind. Otherwise, how could Andrew like her when he was blind?

In Chloe’s opinion, Evelyn was just a country girl, who didn't deserve Andrew at all. She couldn't marry into the Nelson family.

She walked over, passing the glass of water to Andrew. Looking at Evelyn, Chloe said, “May I talk with you? I just want to know what happened after Andrew has been saved.”

“Of course,” Evelyn answered, not too humble nor too arrogant.

“Aunt Chloe, Evelyn is quite timid. Don’t scare her.” Andrew smiled. Evelyn had just arrived, so he was worried that she hadn’t got used to it yet

Chloe looked at him. "You brad, since when have you become so caring?"

She wondered if he was obsessed. Andrew had never cared about or been so protective to any other girl before.

He hadn't seen the country girl's look but he could be so protective, so Chloe believed that Evelyn must have done something to him.

"No worries. I don't eat humans," Chloe said with a smile.

Andrew couldn't see, so he couldn't judge Chloe's intention right now.

"Come on. Let me show you around." Chloe took Evelyn's hands friendly. "Although it's an old residential area, no ordinary family could move in here."

Evelyn pressed her lips in silence, nodding politely.

When they reached a place where Andrew couldn't hear her voice, Chloe put away her smile. "Do you know anything about Andrew's family?"

"It should be quite influential," said Evelyn.

She just felt it that way, but she didn't know any details

"It should be?" Chloe smiled. "It is indeed. His family is more than influential."

Evelyn smiled and said, "For real?"

"Of course," Chloe stopped beating around the bush. "A few days ago, his younger brother got married.

The bride's father was an important government official. You now know how good Andrew's family background is. I heard you are an orphan."

Evelyn was quite smart, so she understood what Chloe meant.

"His family is a super-rich and powerful family. If you have any evil intention, you want to climb up by marrying him." Chloe's words were quite harsh and awful. "You've saved Andrew. We do appreciate you.

No matter how much you want, we can give it to you. However, since you played dirty tricks to deceive Andrew. We won't allow you to achieve your goals."

"What did I do to deceive him?" Evelyn frowned and couldn't bear Chloe's sarcasm at all.

"He's blind now. How could he like you?" Chloe looked at her in disdain. "Tell me about it."

The Unique First Lady, Not Only Because She's Black

Evelyn was speechless.

"Even if he liked you, his family wouldn't accept you. To be honest, all our family members are quite important in either business or political circles. No one would accept a girl like you. Tell me how much you want directly. You'd better give up your evil intention now."

"I don't have any evil intentions," said Evelyn stubbornly. "I save him because I'm a doctor. I don't need your money."

"You are alone. I know it's difficult for you. Here's five hundred thousand." Chloe gave her a check.

Evelyn gazed at the check, feeling that her self-esteem was harmed.

"As I said, I didn't save him for money." Evelyn walked into the house, wrote down a herb prescription, and gave it to Chloe. "The herbs left are only for Andrew to have for one day. You can get more herbs according to this prescription. His eyes will be recovered in a few days."

After that, she turned away. She came here with Andrew alone without any suitcase. Hence, she was leaving without anything now.

When she passed by the entrance, she turned around and paused. She looked back at Andrew, who was in the living room. Although she liked this man a lot, she also has strong dignity.

At this moment, she wished that Andrew was from an ordinary family instead of an influential one.

Hence, they could fit each other.

"Keep this." Chloe chased after her, pressing the check into her hands. "We won't let you suffer any loss.

You deserve it. You also need an allowance to live alone. Just keep it."

"I can make money myself. Thank you." Evelyn returned the check to her. She wasn't willing to keep it and she couldn't.

She didn't save Andrew for money.

"Not all poor people dreamed to climb up. I didn't know he was from a rich family when I saved him. I saved him by the instinct of being a doctor. If I had known he had from such a family that only looks upon the family background, I would have tossed him out of my house long ago." After finishing her words, Evelyn turned away.

She was always a worry-free girl. She wasn't willing to lead a life that she must fawn on others.

As Chloe said, the family backgrounds of her and Andrew were too different.

Even if she could tell Andrew now that she wanted to be with him, she couldn't accept that others would look at her in disdain.

All Evelyn wanted was equality.

Even she was from a poor family, she hoped to be respected. She hadn't met his parents yet, but his uncle's wife had already looked down upon her.

She didn't have the confidence or courage to meet her family.
Chloe was standing at the door, frowning. For a moment, she was in a panic, wondering if Evelyn didn't accept it because the money was too little.
She returned to the house. Andrew felt the movements from the door. He asked gingerly, "Evelyn?"
"It's me." Chloe walked in. "Andrew, I'll make the herb soup for you."
As she spoke, she picked up the bag that Evelyn put on the sofa, in which there were herbs. She could make the herb soup by putting it into the pot.
At this moment, she guessed that she might have gone too far.
She shouldn't have said such harsh words.
However, Andrew couldn't see at all. He hadn't met Evelyn face-to-face at all. Chloe didn't believe that he would like Evelyn.
She still felt that Evelyn must have played dirty tricks on Andrew.
Hence, she felt less guilty.
Andrew didn't hear Evelyn's voice, so he asked, "Where is Evelyn?" _____

Chloe looked away. Although she knew that Andrew couldn't see, she dared not to look into his eyes.
"She said she needed to deal with something else, so she went back home," she said.
"What?" Andrew obviously didn't believe her. "She has no family. Why would she go home?"
"I don't know either." As she spoke, Chloe went into the kitchen.

Andrew was left alone in the living room. He couldn't see, so even he doubted something, he couldn't go to find Evelyn right away.
He didn't look as calm as earlier, and his face gradually darkened.
After two hours, Noah got everything arranged and they boarded the flight to City C. He didn't see Evelyn, so he asked, "Where is that girl?"

Andrew was sitting on the window seat. His eyes were as black as the night, expressionlessly. Noah asked, "What happened?"
Chloe answered, "She said she needed to deal with something, so she went home. Andrew might be unhappy because she's gone."
Noah frowned. "Why did she go back so suddenly? She has saved Andrew. We haven't thanked her yet.
How come she has left?"

Andrew was still expressionless.

Chloe thought for a moment. She believed that she must make it clear to Andrew. "Do you like that girl, Andrew?"

Andrew didn't answer, but he meant yes.

"She's an orphan. You can't see anything. What on her makes you like her?" Chloe asked again.

"Andrew, you don't fit each other. Firstly, you are from two different families..." she added.

"Did you say something to her?" Andrew suddenly interrupted her in a cold tone.

Chloe paused and answered, "I did say something to her. I told her about your family. Did I do something wrong?"

Noah frowned and snapped, "Who do you think you are to speak such words to her?"

"Am I an outsider?" Chloe asked.

"She has saved Andrew. She's our benefactor..."

"But she has evil intentions. Andrew even didn't see her. How could he like her? She must have played some dirty tricks." Chloe didn't think she had made a mistake, insisting that she had done something right.

"I did it for Andrew's good. I'm afraid he'll be deceived..."

"You are so stupid!" Noah snapped, "No matter what. You don't have the right to deal with this matter.

Doesn't Andrew have parents? Who do you think you are to deal with his matter?"

"I did it for Andrew's good. Do you want me to watch him be deceived without doing anything? Then I'll be so wrong!" Chloe still didn't realize her mistake. She believed that it was abnormal for Andrew to like a girl while being blind.

"If you like someone, you should like her appearance, right?"

"Can't he like her for her character? If people only like good-looking ones, do you mean all the bad-looking people would be lonely for all their lives?" Noah was so angry. "How could you be so shallow?"

Chloe was rendered speechless.

She was sitting there in a daze.

Noah heaved a sigh. He patted Andrew on his shoulder, "Please don't mind your aunt. After everything's settled, I'll go with you to find her back."

"No, thanks," said Andrew, "It might be my fault. I should have told her the truth at the beginning."

He knew that although Evelyn was an orphan, she was quite independent with strong self-esteem.

He guessed that she had known their family backgrounds were too different so she was upset.

He would find her later to make it clear to her.

“Just leave this matter like this. Please don’t argue for it and let me feel sorry. It’s all because of me,” said Andrew.

“How could it be your fault? It’s all your aunt’s fault. She spoke something to sent her away.” Noah knew his wife well.

“All right. It’s all my fault.” Chloe was still angry. Until now, she didn’t think she had made a mistake.

She believed that she did it for Andrew’s good.

“She’s just a country girl. How could she match Andrew?” she muttered.

If they were not in public, Noah would scold her. He didn't want to argue with her at this age, which might make others mock them. However, if he didn't scold her, he would feel quite frustrated.

“What the heck do you want?” Noah tried hard to suppress his emotion. However, he couldn’t calm down because of being too angry. “Why can’t you be more board-minded?”

“Do you mean I’m petty?” Chloe looked at him and asked, quite angry.

Noah knew that if they kept speaking to each other, they would start a fight. Hence, he closed his eyes and faked napping.

Chloe, however, didn’t give up. “Why don’t you speak?” she asked.

“I’m not in the mood.” Noah was so irritated. “It’s been so many years. Why can’t you change your character a bit?”

“I know you’ve lost patience in me,” Chloe said unreasonably, “You regret marrying me, don’t you?”

Noah felt that he was going nuts. “We’ve married for so many years. What are you talking about? Do you want others to mock us? Andrew is still here. Can’t you be more board-minded and care about my dignity in public?”

Chloe’s eyes reddened. She turned to look away. Obviously, she was still angry with Noah.

Noah hit his head helplessly. This woman was not bad usually, but she was still willful and petty inwardly.

Upon hearing them argue, Andrew felt quite awkward. He wondered if he should keep silent or mediate.

However, it was quite inappropriate for him to say something now. Hence, he kept silent. After the flight landed, they got down from the plane. Joshua and Bonnie came to pick them up.

Seeing them come out of the exit, Joshua trotted over. "Andrew!"

"Joshua?" Andrew recognized his voice.

Joshua hugged him. "I heard you got injured in your mission. Would you..."

"Not at all. I'll be fine. Don't worry," said Andrew.

Noah called them earlier and told them that Andrew was injured when carrying on a mission. Hence, he couldn't see anything for the time being.

He didn't mention Andrew's threatening experience earlier. Only a few people knew about it.

"Hi, Andrew." Bonnie was standing next to Joshua and greeted Andrew.

Andrew raised his eyebrows. "Bonnie?"

"It's me." She came over to take the other arm of his. "Let's go home."

Andrew said OK. "I couldn't come back for your wedding. Please forgive me."

"Joshua and I understand. We know you are busy."

"I didn't send you any wedding gift either," Andrew added.

Bonnie said, "As long as you come back safe and sound, it's the best gift to us. What will be happier than our family gathering together?"

"Bonnie, you have become a sweet talker. Has Jos taught you so?"

Joshua was speechless.

Bonnie covered her lips. "No one has taught me. I meant it from the bottom of my heart.

When they mention it, the atmosphere was silent. Originally, it was a good thing that Andrew, who seldom came home, came back. However, Kevin passed away. It wasn't a good thing since one of their family had passed away.

"Are Dad and Mom quite upset?" asked Andrew.

"The old will always have such a day. Dad and Mom are quite OK. They are sad but they also know it's a natural rule, which is inviolable," Joshua answered.

Out of the airport, Joshua helped Andrew walk to his car. There was another car with a driver. He turned to look at Noah. "Uncle Noah, Aunt Chloe, please sit in this car."

"Okay." Noah looked as if nothing had happened.

However, Chloe couldn't be so calm as him. With a long face, she handed over a bag, in which there were herbs and a prescription for Andrew.

"This is Andrew's medicine," she said,

Joshua took it over. He noticed that Chloe looked upset. With a smile, he asked, "Aunt Chloe, what happened?"

"She's mad at me. Just ignore her. Let's go. We'll follow your car." Noah held Chloe in his arms.

Chloe was still angry with him so she broke free from his grip, sitting in the car alone. All people at the scene could tell that she was quite angry.

Joshua smiled and asked, "Uncle Noah, have you pissed off her?"

Noah didn't want to lose his dignity in front of the juniors, so he smiled and answered, "Nothing serious.

She's in her menopause."

Joshua was speechless.

"Hurry and go! Don't waste time here." Noah got in the car.

Joshua knew that they were fighting and Noah wasn't willing to let others know. He didn't ask anything more. Instead, he opened the door to help Andrew sit in.

"Joshua, I can sit with Andrew on the backseat." Bonnie was afraid that Andrew was blind now and might have trouble, so she wanted to take care of him.

Joshua nodded in agreement.

Reaching out to rub her hair, he said, "This is my good girl."

"Fuck off!" Bonnie glared at him. "You are only one year older. Think you are quite old huh? You're always a kid in front of Andrew."

Joshua wasn't angry at all. He laughed out. "Andrew is truly much older than me, but he can't have a baby earlier than I will. His children are destined to be juniors to mine."

Bonnie was speechless.

She truly wanted to kick Joshua. He could speak anything in public without care.

"What are you looking at? I'm telling the truth. Andrew even doesn't have a girlfriend. I've got married.

How could he catch up with me?" Joshua had a cheeky smile. "Am I right, Andrew?"

Andrew knew him well. He said cooperatively, "Yes."

"Look. Andrew has admitted it." Joshua started the engine and took a look back. "Andrew, shall we have a bet?"

"On what?"

Joshua cleared his throat and said, "Just between us, the one who has a child later than the other will take over the family business. What do you think?"

Abbott would retire soon or later, so their family business needed to be managed. Joshua had been working in the company after graduating from college. Until now, he hadn't had any break yet.

Joshua was sure that he would have a child earlier than Andrew would. Hence, he wanted to make a bet with his older brother, who hadn't got a girlfriend yet.

Andrew smiled. "Are you so confident to win against me?"

Joshua was full of confidence. "Of course."

"Okay. I'll take the bet. If you won, you could leave all the heavy jobs to me. You can travel around the world with Bonnie, and I'll make money for you. On the contrary, if I won, you must take over all the family businesses and make money for me to spend."

"No problem." Joshua was quite confident. "You can't go back to your word in the end."

"A gentleman's word is irretrievable," said Andrew.

"Have you heard it, Bonnie? You must work hard," Joshua looked back at Bonnie.

Bonnie was silent.

She was so pissed by Joshua. If they wanted to talk about such a subject, they should avoid her. She felt so embarrassed when listening to them.

She inwardly cursed Joshua.

She glared at him fiercely.

Joshua laughed, "Stop glaring at me. Mind your public image as a gentlewoman."

Bonnie was speechless.

Andrew laughed as well, feeling that they got along very well, which was a good thing.

After a while, the car stopped. The short happy atmosphere was gone. Instead, there was a heavy and sad atmosphere.

The funeral would be held tomorrow, and the mourning hall was being decorated.

There were a lot of people at the scene.

Although the Nelson family hired a professional company to deal with this matter and they didn't have to do anything, there must be someone making a decision. The company had a lot of details to confirm with the host.

Kevin's closest family was Matthew, so Matthew was dealing with his funeral.

"Dad and Mom are both here." Joshua parked the car steadily. Then he walked to the back to open the rear door. Bonnie got off first. Then Joshua and she helped Andrew get down. The decoration of the mourning hall had already been finished. Matthew was wearing a pure black suit with mourning on his right arm. He was talking to someone decorating the hall. Joshua helped Andrew walk over. He called from afar, "Dad!" Matthew looked back. When he saw Andrew, his eyes darkened. He said to the man, "Please go back to your work first. Just do as I told you just now." "Okay, Mr. Nelson." Matthew walked over. Andrew released Joshua's hand and stood upright. "I'm back, Dad." Probably it was because Matthew was old. If such a thing happened when Matthew was still young, he would be quite calm. However, right now, his face was fulfilled happiness. He pressed Andrew's shoulder. "Good you're back." Noah has called him and told him about Andrew's status. Hence, he wasn't surprised when seeing that his son was blind. "Let's go in." "Do you need any help here?" Joshua asked. "Nope, thanks." Then Matthew asked them to go to see Dolores. They went to the lounge behind the mourning hall. Dolores had been accompanying and comforting Jessica all the time. Jessica and Kevin got married when they were old. They supported each other and spent several years together. Now Kevin had passed away, which was a heavy blow to Jessica. Knock. Knock-- Suddenly, there were a few knocks on the door of the lounge. Dolores stood up, only to find that Joshua was at the door. She poked out but failed to see Andrew. With a frown, she asked, "Haven't you gone to pick up Andrew? Where is he?" Joshua blinked. "I didn't see him." Dolores frowned deeply. "How come?" "Joshua, can't you be normal?" Bonnie came over while helping Andrew up. Joshua cast a glance at her. "I just wanted to give Mom a surprise. You know how much she misses her oldest son." Dolores patted Joshua on his back. "How old are you now? So naughty!" "I'm mature enough." Joshua bypassed her and walked in. "Hi, Grandma." Jessica's hair was completely white. She had wrinkles on her face and her eyes had become cloudy. She was quite skinny.

Jessica reached out to him. "Where is Andrew?"

"Outside the door."

Outside the door, Dolores walked to Andrew. She was prepared as Matthew had told her that Andrew's eyes were injured in his mission. He couldn't see anything for the time being. Now, she saw her son in person, but he couldn't see her. Dolores felt quite upset.

"Andrew, since your childhood, you always worried me," she whispered.

Chapter 1034 Country Girl

Although Dolores was blaming him, she didn't mean to blame him for real.

She felt so sorry for him.

"I'm back safe and sound, Mom." Andrew could tell Dolores's position upon her voice. He reached out to hug her and comfort her. Dolores reached out first. Andrew patted her on her back. "I won't worry you anymore in the future."

In the past, Dolores always held him. Now they were hugging each other. Dolores was held in his arms.

Andrew was pretty tall and strong. It seemed as if he was holding a petite girl in his arms.

"Have you been to the hospital yet? When will your eyes recover?" Dolores cared about this matter.

"I'm taking the medicine now. My eyes will recover soon. Don't worry." Andrew's tone was quite happy and relaxing. His attitude told her that he was pretty well. "I want to see Grandma."

"Okay." Dolores took his arm.

"Come over, Andrew." Jessica wave at him. Dolores led Andrew to her.

"Hi, Grandma," Andrew whispered, "I'm sorry for your loss."

Jessica pulled his hand. "I heard you are blind. I can donate my cornea to you."

All people at the scene fell into silence.

They couldn't help feel soreness in their noses.

Even Andrew was a strong man, his eyes reddened. If love was rare in this world, the family affectionate was more precious. It was selfish, sacrificing, beautiful, and touching.

"I'll recover soon, Grandma. I don't need the cornea." Andrew sat next to her and put his arm on her shoulder. "When I was young, you held me and brought me up. This time, let me accompany you more.

Jessie said, "OK."

In the past, Kevin was with her. Now he had passed away, Andrew believed that she must be quite lonely.

"Hi, Aunt Chloe," Bonnie saw Chloe come in and greeted her.

Chloe answered and talked to Jessica for a short while.

Joshua approached Dolores and whispered in her ear, "Aunt Chloe and Uncle Noah fought, Mom."

Dolores turned to look at him.

Joshua nodded. "When they landed, she was still angry with Uncle Noah."

Dolores patted him, glaring at him, hinting that he should stop gossiping about the elders.

"I've got married and I have a job. I'm also an adult," Joshua retorted.

"Oh, stop it!" Dolores couldn't do anything with him.

Andrew's expression slightly changed. No one would notice it without a closer look. Only Bonnie had seen it -- as soon as Chloe came in, Andrew's expression changed.

Chloe called Dolores out of the lounge, saying that she wanted to talk to Dolores.

Dolores ask her children to accompany Jessica here so that Jessica wouldn't feel lonely.

Chloe and Dolores went to a quiet corner. Chloe still felt aggrieved as she believed that what she had done was for Andrew's good. Noah didn't understand her and even argued with her. She felt that her self-esteem had been hurt in front of Andrew.

Right then, she was still angry with Noah.

"Dolores," Chloe said, "Has Noah told you everything on the phone?"

"What?" Dolores was confused.

"When they found Andrew, a girl has saved him."

Dolores didn't understand, because no one had told her about it. Noah directly called Matthew earlier.

Matthew only told her that Andrew was injured in his mission. Dolores noticed that Chloe mentioned that Andrew was found and saved.

"Tell me more details," said Dolores.

"Andrew encountered the danger during his mission. He was missing for almost a whole month. A girl who knows Chinese traditional medicine has saved him and come back with him. In my house, I found that girl had an evil intention to Andrew, so I sent her away. For this matter, Noah is angry with me."

Dolores listened to her but her expression didn't change.

It turned out Andrew was missing for a whole month.

If he hadn't been saved, he might not be able to come back.

Dolores's body shook a bit. She grabbed the handrail next to her to keep her balance.

"Dolores, do you think I've done something wrong? Andrew can't see anything now. How could he like a girl whose face he hasn't seen at all? That girl is quite good-looking, but obviously, she has played some dirty tricks. I heard she's an orphan. She's a country girl. How could this girl deserve Andrew?"

Dolores was shocked by the news, but she had a clear mind. "She has saved Andrew, so she's our benefactor. As other matters, Andrew isn't a child any longer. He has his own judgment."

"Then you mean I've made a mistake, don't you?" Chloe looked annoyed.

Dolores said, "That's not what I mean. No matter what, you shouldn't have sent her away. We must thank her."

"I tried to give her some money but she refused. She's young but quite stubborn. She lacks education so she's so rude." Chloe didn't realize how wrong she was so far.

Dolores didn't have time to deal with this matter now. She decided to wait until the funeral was over and Andrew's eyes recovered.

"Noah and you are not kids any longer. You are elders now. Why do you still fight? Do you want the children to mock you?" Dolores said in a deep tone. "You should be reconciled."

After that, she went back to the lounge.

Chloe was left alone and standing there motionlessly.

She had thought that Dolores would take her side. However, she didn't expect that Dolores was angry with her.

She had done it for Andrew's good. She couldn't understand that no one appreciated her. After Dolores entered the room, Bonnie pulled her to a corner and told her what she had found. "Mom, just now, when Aunt Chloe came in, I saw Andrew look quite annoyed. What did Aunt Chloe say to you?

Is it anything to do with Andrew?" _____

Upon hearing Bonnie's words, Dolores looked over at Andrew, only to find that he looked quite normal now. He was chatting with Jessica.

"Did Andrew have any conflicts with Aunt Chloe?" Bonnie believed that there must be some reason.

Dolores didn't hide anything from her, telling her what had happened.

"How could Aunt Chloe have done that?" Bonnie also didn't think Chloe had done something right.

They were in a modern era. How could she look upon the family background so much? Even a civilian has married the royal princess of England. Bonnie wondered why Chloe looked at the family backgrounds so much.

Dolores patted her. "Just pretend as if nothing happened. Or Andrew would feel quite uneasy."

Bonnie nodded sensibly. "I know."

In the evening, Dolores made the herb soup for Andrew. She felt quite uncertain. It wasn't because she didn't believe in Evelyn, but Andrew's eyes were injured. She wondered if the Chinese medicine would cure him.

She gave the bowl of herb soup to Andrew. "Let's have a checkup in the hospital after the funeral."

Andrew knew what she was worried about. He said, "My eyes were not injured. They were poisoned.

The western medicine wouldn't cure them."

Dolores was so panicked. "Poisoned?"

"No worries, Mom. I'll be fine." Andrew was afraid to scare her, but it seemed she was still frightened.

"How could I be so careless about my own eyes? Don't worry, Mom."

Dolores heaved a sigh. "Can you have a longer vacation now?"

Andrew nodded. "Of course. I haven't taken any break in the past several years. Now I have three months' vacation."

Dolores touched the bowl and ensured the temperature was low. She passed it to him.

"Drink the soup."

Andrew smiled and wanted to relax her. "Mom, please feed me," he said.

Dolores burst into laughter. "How old are you now?"

"No matter how old I am, I'm still your son." After Andrew grew up, it was quite rare for him to play at being cute to her. Dolores got a spoon and took the bowl from his hands. Then she started feeding him.

"Is it bitter?"

Andrew nodded. "This herb soup is extremely bitter."

He was telling the truth. It was bitterer than normal herb soup. That was why Evelyn would always give him candy after he took the soup.

"As long as it could cure your eyes, no matter how bitter it is, you should bear it."

Andrew couldn't see but he knew that Dolores was concerned about him although her tone was strict.

After finishing the soup, Dolores poured a glass of water for him and peeled an orange for him. "Have some orange to cover the bitterness."

Andrew took one petal over and put it into his mouth. With a smile, he said, "So sweet."

Dolores stood in front of him. She wanted to ask him about Evelyn but finally, she gave up.

She got him

some hot water to soak his feet.

"Mom, you can ask Joshua to help me." Andrew couldn't get used to it as he was grown up but his mother was helping him.

"When you a little, I bathed you. Why are you so shy now? Why don't you find a girlfriend?

Joshua has married. You are his older brother. You should be his role model in everything."

Andrew was silent.

He decided to keep silent.

Otherwise, he was afraid that his mother would nag about his girlfriend.

Seeing that her son kept silent, Dolores heaved a sigh inwardly.

She realized that Andrew was too good at hiding secrets.

She didn't expose him.

The next day. Funeral.

It was solemn and respectful.

All men who attended it were wearing black suits and women were wearing black dresses.

Guests gradually came here for grieving Kevin's death at noon. The funeral wreaths covered the whole road.

Matthew and Dolores were the closest family members to Kevin. They were standing on the right side of the mourning hall, receiving all the guests.

At the door, a man sitting in the wheelchair was pushed in slowly.

From afar, Dolores recognized him. Although they hadn't seen each other for several years, she was still quite familiar with him. _____

Convenient Marriage: Mr. Nelson's Love Trap

Chapter 1036 Not an Outsider for Me

As time passed, Charles also had wrinkles on his face and grey hair appeared on his temples.

He still looked quite spirited. Sitting in the wheelchair, he didn't get fat. He looked thinner than before. He was in a black suit. Tiana was wearing a black lace dress without any decoration, quite neat.

Pushing Charles over, she said, "Dolores, sorry for your loss."

Dolores nodded at her.

"I'm sorry for your loss. Please take care of yourself," Charles looked at Dolores and said. Dolores and Matthew bowed at them in unison.

"Thank you so much for coming over," Dolores whispered. Her voice was a bit hoarse because of crying.

"I must come here. He's not an outsider to me." Charles always remembered that Kevin was Victoria's older brother, and Victoria was his foster father's most beloved woman.

His foster father didn't get married because of her.

However, Charles didn't think he could compare to his foster father. He was in love with one woman but married another woman.

There were other guests behind them. Charles and Tiana went to worship Kevin with incense.

Almost all the family and relatives had arrived today. However, it was a funeral, so they seldom talked.

They all felt quite sad.

When Charles saw Andrew and Amanda, his eyes were darkened. He used to envy Matthew a lot, and so was he now.

Matthew had sons and a daughter. In the future, he would have grandchildren and enjoy the big family.

However, Charles had only Tiana only.

"Are you thirsty?" Tiana asked.

They got the news quite late, so they rushed to the funeral without preparing ahead.

Charles shook his head. "Tiana, if you are thirsty, you can get some water. I can stay here alone."

"Okay. I'll come back to you later." Tiana released the wheelchair.

Charles found a quiet corner, looking at the mourning hall. Kevin's photo was in the middle, surrounded by white chrysanthemums. There was only black and white in the hall, making people feel quite upset.

He wondered if all the people who had passed away reunited in Heaven.

The Criminal Minds Cast: Where Are They Now?

Suddenly, he became a bit sad. He hadn't known who his biological parents were. He wondered whom he would go to meet after he died.

"Andrew, Charles White is here." All the juniors were kneeling in front of the mourning hall.

Amanda was next to Andrew. She knew Andrew was blind for the time being, so she kept telling Andrew about the guests.

Otherwise, he wouldn't know anything.

Andrew was taken aback for a moment. "Charles White?"

He admired Charles inwardly.

Sometimes, he pitied Charles, as Charles couldn't win the heart of the woman he loved all his life.

"He doesn't have children, does he?" Bonnie approached them and asked.

Amanda said, "No, he doesn't."

Andrew and she knew that probably Charles had never touched Tiana.

"He's actually a good man," said Amanda.

Andrew grabbed her hand. He didn't know what had happened to Amanda until he came back this time.

He had been busy with his work and seldom have time to be with his parents. Such a big matter had happened to Amanda, but he didn't know about it. He felt quite guilty.

Amanda shed tears because she thought about her past.

They didn't speak anything but understood each other very well. It was said that the twins had tacit understandings, which might not be absolutely true.

However, they grew up together and knew each other very well.

"Did he used to have a crush on Mom?" Joshua was much younger than Andrew and Amanda, so he didn't know as many things as they did.

"Who told you so?" asked Amanda.

Joshua thought for a moment and told them it was Theresa. When Theresa was talking about it with Armand, he overheard them.

"I also heard my parents talking about it before," said Bonnie.

Convenient Marriage: Mr. Nelson's Love Trap

Chapter 1037 Marry and Settle Down

"So is it true?" Joshua was seldom so nosy. Looking at his brother and sister, he wanted to know if the rumour was true.

Amanda satisfied him. "Yes. He had a crush on Mom before."

"He should be quite obsessed in love. My parents said he has no children. When he married his current wife, it wasn't because he loved her." After finishing her words, Bonnie cast Charles a glance in secret.

Although time had changed his handsome face in his youth, she still could tell that he must be quite good-looking before.

He also emanated a pleasant aura.

"Is he always sitting on the wheelchair?" Joshua knew the least about Charles among them, so he always asked the shallowest questions.

"Yeah," Bonnie answered him.

Joshua looked at her. "Why do you know everything?"

"I heard it from my parents," Bonnie answered.

"What else have your parents told you? Tell me all about it," Joshua said.

Bonnie shook her head and said, "Nothing else." Then she added, "He's not a bad man."

"Oops, how did you?" Joshua would pinch her cheek if they were not in the mourning hall.

How could she not tell him anything about it?

"Did your parents say that as well?" he cast her a glance.

"Nah. I just feel so."

Bonnie said, "A man could love a woman for several decades. How bad could this kind of man be?"

Joshua found that he couldn't retort to her.

After a long while, he uttered, "Obsessing in love doesn't mean he has good character."

"Why? Do you dislike him?" Bonnie raised her eyebrows.

Joshua was different from Andrew and Amanda. He didn't know Charles at all. After he got to know that

Charles had a crush on his mother when they were young and he still loved her in the past decades, Joshua believed that Charles must be the rival in love for Matthew.

If his mother had chosen Charles back then, Joshua wondered if he could still be born in this world.

Standing in his father's shoes, he couldn't like Charles.

Standing in his own shoes, he couldn't like Charles either.

However, he admired Charles.

Joshua had to admit that he couldn't be obsessed with a woman for several decades.

He admired Charles for his persistence. After all, not many men could do it.

Charles was so obsessed, so Joshua wondered if his mother knew about it. After all, Charles loved her since he was young. After Dolores knew that he had spent almost all his life in love with her secretly, Joshua wondered if she would also have a different feeling for Charles.

As he thought of it, he looked over at Dolores at the door. She was standing next to Matthew, looking calm and elegant. Joshua knew how much his parents love each other in the past years.

He believed even if his mother had a special feeling for Charles, it would only occupy a small part of her heart.

Joshua was quite selfish. He wished that his mother's heart was fully occupied by his father.

"What are you thinking about?" Bonnie could tell that he looked a bit weird.

Joshua said, "Nothing."

However, inwardly, he wanted to do something to this cripple.

"Behave yourself." Amanda found his intention.

"What have I done?"

Joshua pretended to be innocent.

"I know what's in your mind. It's the matter among the elders. You don't have the right to meddle in. Do you not believe your father or your mother?" Amanda asked him sharply, rendering him speechless.

Joshua knew he should believe his father.

Charles was so obsessed with his mother, but still, his father had won his mother's heart.

They should truly love each other.

Joshua heaved a sigh inwardly.

He looked up at Kevin's portrait. He recalled that his grandmother passed away because of saving his mother and him.

He wanted Kevin to pass his message to Victoria after he went to heaven. "Grandma, I was born smoothly. Now I've got married and settled down." _

Chapter 1038 Hidden Anything from Me

Joshua was lost in thought.

Amanda was greeting the relatives and friends who came to grieve over. Since there were too many guests, the parking lot didn't have enough space. She had to find other parking places for them.

After the memorial ceremony, Kevin's coffin would be sent to the cemetery

Before that, the family and relatives would bid him the last farewell. Since they would part forever, the atmosphere was full of sorrow.

The host who presided over the funeral expressed his sorrow for the dead. He said, "Mr.

Kevin Forbis is going to Heaven today. Men have joys and sorrows. The moon could be full and crescent.

There are inevitably life, death, separation, and reunion in the world. Although he is far away from us, his voice and smile remain in our hearts forever.

"Here, I hope his family and relatives could restrain their grief and accord with inevitable changes."

Funeral music was played.

All people at the scene stood up and bowed at the dead three times.

In the sobs, Kevin's coffin was lifted and sent to the cemetery. The cemetery was located in the east suburbia in City C with the best location. It wouldn't be sent to White City because they had all settled down in City C. Later after Jessica passed away, she would also be buried next to Kevin. After the procedure was done, it was already in the evening. All of them were gathered in the villa. Theresa made some tea. Since none of them had meals today, she called a restaurant and ordered a few takeouts. After all, the dead had passed away, and the living ones should live well.

"The funeral is over. Shall we take Andrew to for a checkup?" Jasmine came here alone for Kevin's funeral. Boyce had a meeting with the top. Besides, because he had applied for early retirement, he was quite busy. Hence, he couldn't make it. Jasmine had to come here alone. After the funeral was over, finally they had time to talk with each other. Now, Andrew's eyes worried them the most. After all, it was a big thing. "Not necessary..." "You always refused, but we're worried about you." Theresa also thought that he needed a checkup in the hospital. Andrew could see blurred things now. Earlier, he could only see black. For easing his elders, he agreed, "Okay. I'll go to the hospital for a checkup tomorrow." "That's right. You can't always make us worried." Theresa poured him a glass of water. "You haven't eaten for a whole day. Have some water." Right then, the doorbell rang. Theresa went to answer the door. It was a delivery man. She asked others to help her carry the takeouts into the house, putting them on the dining table. After paying for the check, the delivery man left. Theresa put the lunchboxes out one after another. "Go wash your hands. Let's eat." Jasmine came over to help her. She filled a bowl with some soup and sent it into the bedroom. Jessica was quite upset, so she was lying on the bed. Dolores and Amanda had been with her all the time. Jasmine also brought her some light dishes.

"I'll accompany her. Why don't you go out and eat something?" Jasmine took the tray with dishes to Jessica and said.

Amanda stood up to take over the food from Jasmine. "Let me stay here with Grandma.

You should go to eat." She lowered her head and said to Dolores, "Mom, you too. Have some food."

Dolores still had something to tell Matthew. She patted Amanda and said, "I'll be back later."

"No worries, Mom. I'll sleep with Grandma tonight. You can go back to your rooms. Please rest assured."

Amanda wanted to ease their burden.

Actually, she was also quite closed to Jessica, who had brought her up.

"Are you afraid I can take care of Grandma?" Amanda asked.

"All right. I'll leave her to you." Dolores stood up.

They all sat at the dining table, having some food.

Joshua was responsible for taking care of Andrew. He fed Andrew with food.

"When I was little, have you fed me before?" Joshua asked.

"When you were only two months, he pressed such a huge candy into your mouth. You almost choked to death." As Jasmine answered, she gestured the size of the candy.

She remembered that she was holding Joshua that day. When she didn't pay attention, Andrew pressed a huge hard candy into Joshua's mouth. She was almost scared to death.

Joshua was so speechless.

"It seems I was so lucky so you didn't torture me to death," he said.

"I was showing my love to you," said Andrew.

"Please save it. I can't enjoy your love."

Dolores drank a bowl of soup. She didn't have any appetite to eat other food. It had been a long day, so everyone was quite exhausted. After dinner, the women chatted in the living room for a while and cleaned up the dining table. Since they didn't cook, it didn't take them much effort.

When it was about nine o'clock, all went back to their bedrooms. Dolores went to check on Andrew.

Joshua sent her to sleep. He would take Andrew himself.

They were quite close, so Dolores left Andrew to Joshua. After all, they hadn't talked for a long time.

Patting on Joshua's shoulder, she reminded him, "Don't bully Andrew."

"Gee, don't worry, Mom. I won't press a hard candy into his mouth." Joshua waved his hand.

"Good night."

"Okay. Good night."

Back to her room, when opening the door, Dolores heard the message tone on her phone.

She received a message from Charles. "Let's have lunch tomorrow. I'll leave in the evening. You were too busy today. I even didn't have time to talk to you."

"Okay," Dolores replied to him.

"Eleven o'clock, in Riverside Restaurant." Charles sent her the time and address.

"Ehn." She replied simply.

She put away the phone and pushed the door open and entered. Matthew had finished showering. He was wearing blue long-sleeved pyjamas made of silk. He lifted the quilt, sat on the edge, and was about to lie down.

Dolores closed the door and walked to him. Standing in front of him, she asked, "Have you hidden anything from me?"

Chapter 1039 Deliberately Hiding Something from Us

Matthew paused his movement, looked up, and raised his eyebrows slightly. "Pardon me?"

"You know what I'm asking."

"No, I don't." He lifted his legs and sat on the bed. Dolores grabbed his arm. "Matthew Nelson, I've found the older you are, the more shameless you've become."

Seeing that, he guessed that probably she had known what happened to Andrew. He heaved a sigh and said, "Isn't Andrew safe and sound now? Can you just forget about it?"

"You told me you were going to the company earlier. You went to find her, didn't you? When did you learn to lie to me?" Dolores was quite angry indeed. Her son had encountered danger and couldn't nearly come back, but she knew nothing about it.

"I'm his birth mother. Why don't I have the right to know about it?"

"I was afraid you would be worried." Matthew pulled her hand. "It won't happen again. It's been a long day for you today. Let me massage your shoulders."

As he spoke, he pressed Dolores to sit down on the bed.

Dolores tilted to dodge him. "Stop it!"

"What do you want me to do then? It has already passed. Even if I was wrong, you can't always be angry without forgiving me, can you?"

His words made Dolores angrier as he sounded like he had known that she wouldn't be able to do anything even after she got to know it.

"I'm not gonna forgive you." Dolores stood up abruptly. Matthew was off-guard. Her head bumped into his nose. He frowned in pain. Then he felt warm liquid dropped. Reaching out, he touched his nose, only to find that his nose was bleeding.

Dolores covered her forehead as she also felt pain.

"You..."

She still wanted to blow up. Seeing the blood above his mouth, she was startled. "What happened?"

Matthew raised his head. "My nose is bleeding."

Dolores immediately pulled tissues for him. "Go wash your face in the bathroom."

Matthew covered his nose with the tissue, looking at Dolores. "Did you purposely do it?"

"Ehn," Dolores admitted it recklessly in anger and grievance.

"Have you vented your anger yet?"

"Not really."

"Hence, what else do you want to do to avenge?"

"All right. Go to wash your face." Dolores pulled him.

He washed his face for a long time before getting rid of the bloodstains.

"Change your pyjamas." Dolores found him another set, as the former ones were stained by blood.

Matthew changed his pyjamas after he stopped bleeding. "The bedsheet was stained, too"

"We must change it." Dolores reached out to take it off. "If the kids have seen it, it's so embarrassing."

Matthew stood aside and nodded seriously. "Your youngest son has just got married. You must be a role model to show your daughter-in-law how to be a wife. If she knew you've hit your husband, she would learn from you and bully your son."

Upon hearing it, Dolores almost tossed the bedsheet from the bed. It was because he had lied to her, but now he sounded that it was all her fault.

She calmed herself down and adjusted her breath. She said in a steady tone flatly, "Charles invited me for lunch tomorrow."

Matthew, who was standing and watching her aside, immediately rushed over to help her.

"Have you said yes?"

Dolores looked up at him. "Why not?" she asked.

The Criminal Minds Cast: Where Are They Now?

Matthew was speechless.

"All of us are old now. Why do you want to meet him?" Matthew was quite unhappy. His face darkened.

"He invited me, and I couldn't turn him down."

"Do you want to piss me by doing so?" He raised eyebrows.

"I'm not that idle." Dolores took off the bedsheet and held it to the laundry room. She put it into a basin, aiming to rub away the bloodstains before putting it into the washing machine. Otherwise, it might not be cleaned.

Matthew followed her. "Have you truly agreed?"

Dolores squatted down and hummed indifferently.

Matthew also squatted down and helped her rub. "Can you not go?"

Dolores was silent.

"Honey, our children are all grown up. Why do you want to meet..."

"What are you guys doing here? Dad? Mom?" Joshua helped Andrew have the herb soup, bathe, and lie down on the bed. Then he was about to go upstairs, he found the door of the laundry room was opened and the light was also on. He came over to take a look.

Then he saw his parents washing a bedsheet.

"It's too late now. Why didn't you go to bed? Why are you washing a bedsheet now?"

"Your father can't sleep. I find him something to do," answered Dolores.

"I haven't seen your mother wash bedsheet before. She insisted on showing me," answered Matthew meanwhile.

Joshua was confused.

He wondered what was going on.

"You..."

"Go to bed. Good night." Matthew closed the door of the laundry room.

Joshua frowned and went upstairs.

Pushing the door open and entering, he found that Bonnie was still awake. She had just left Jasmine's room.

She opened the closet and found him the pyjamas. "Joshua, take a shower. Then let's go to bed."

Joshua sat on the bed. "Come here, Bonnie."

"Ehn?"

She held the pyjamas and walked to him, looking at him. "What's wrong with you?"

"I saw Dad and Mom washing a bedsheet just now when I came upstairs."

"Right now? The two of them?" Bonnie asked in surprise.

Even if the bedsheet was dirty, they could leave it to tomorrow. Kevin's funeral had just finished. All of them were supposed to be exhausted. She wondered why the two elders were washing the bedsheet.

Joshua was also confused. "What happened to them? They also spoke contradictory words. Mom said

Dad couldn't sleep so she found him something to do deliberately. However, Dad said he had never seen Mom wash a bedsheet again and she insisted on showing him."

“Are they hiding something deliberately from us?” asked Bonnie. _____

Chapter 1040 I'll Take You There

“What are they trying to hiding?” Joshua didn't understand.

Bonnie still sensed something wrong. “They are aged now. Do you think it's because they are sick?”

She didn't have an ill wish. It was just destiny for a person to experience life, old age, sickness, and death.

They couldn't avoid thinking about it.

After all, what was happening was quite abnormal.

“Well...”

Upon hearing Bonnie's words, Joshua was also uneasy. That was how a human was -- once he or she was bothered by something, the person would not give up until finding the answer.

So was Joshua. He said, “Is it truly the same as your guess? They got sick...”

“Would it be...” Bonnie covered her mouth in shock.

“What?” He looked up at her.

“They washed the bedsheet at night because the bedsheet was stained by something that they're unwilling to show us?”

“What do you mean?” Joshua soon understood what she meant. “You meant...”

Bonnie nodded hard. “I heard that diabetes and Alzheimer's disease will cause urinary incontinence.”

Joshua stood up and wanted to go downstairs.

Bonnie stopped him. “It's too late now. Tomorrow you can ask Dad out and talk with him.

Let's see who is sick.”

Joshua nodded. “Okay.”

They were quite worried.

They even didn't have a good sleep.

In the morning, Joshua woke up with dark circles under his eyes. They were quite serious because he hadn't slept well for Kevin's matter in the past few days.

When he went downstairs, he saw Amanda packing.

“Morning, Amanda. Why are you packing? Are you leaving?”

“I'll tell you when having breakfast.” Amanda helped Jessica come out.

Joshua didn't ask again.

While having breakfast, Jessica said, “I want to go out for a trip. Amanda will go with me.”

“Grandma, where are you going? Please wait for me. I'll go with you.” Andrew was worried about Jessica. "I have a long vacation this time..."

Jessica waved her hand to refuse. "No, thank you. I don't want anyone except Amanda."

"But..." Dolores was about to speak.

However, she was interrupted by Amanda. "Mom, I can take good care of Grandma. Please don't worry.

Actually, Grandma should go out for a trip than staying at home, isn't it?"

It seemed that Jessica and Amanda had made up their minds, so Dolores couldn't turn them down.

Amanda looked over at Matthew. After thinking a moment, she said, "Dad, for the job that you mentioned to me earlier, may I start a bit late? If not, please help me reject it. I want to accompany Grandma for a while."

"You can go there when you have time," said Matthew.

He inwardly supported Amanda and Jessica to have a trip.

Then Amanda could adjust herself by taking this chance.

"I'm still a bit worried about Andrew." Amanda looked over at Andrew, worried about his eyes.

Now, Andrew's sight had gradually recovered. He could see things now but not quite clear, just like a high-myopia person.

However, he could see much clearer than yesterday.

Andrew picked up his bowl and chopsticks. "My sight is gradually recovering. No worries, Amanda."

"Can you see now, Andrew?"

People at the table were all shocked by his movement. They surrounded him.

"Can you see things now?"

"Can you see my hand?" Joshua waved his hand in front of him. Andrew pushed it off. "Stop waving in front of me."

"Andrew, can you really see things?" Dolores asked, suppressing the happiness in her heart.

Andrew said, "Yes, I can, but not quite clear. I'll be recovered completely in two days."

"Good if you'll be recovered soon."

Jessica also felt quite delighted for him.

Since Andrew's eyes were getting better, the sadness about Kevin's death faded away in the house.

After breakfast, Amanda was about to leave. She asked, "Joshua, could you see us off later?"

"Are you leaving today?" asked Joshua.

"Yeah. I booked the flight ticket last night." Amanda pointed at her suitcase. "I've finished packing.

Please put it in your trunk."

Joshua obediently took her suitcase to the trunk. Amanda said to her family members, "You don't need to see us off. Joshua will do. Our flight is at nine o'clock. We should leave now. If you come to see us off, you'll only see us boarding the flight. Joshua could help us."

"Take good care of your grandmother." Dolores was still uneasy.

"Don't worry, Mom."

"No worries, guys. After Amanda and I finish our trip, I'll be fine," said Jessica. She looked a bit spiritless.

Amanda helped her go out. Dolores walked them to the car.

When arriving at the airport, Joshua helped them check in the luggage. Amanda and Jessica waited a bit for boarding.

Joshua didn't leave until he saw them board the plane.

"After coming back from White City, let's go to City B," said Jessica.

Jessica wanted to visit Kevin's hometown. She hadn't been back to City B for a long time.

She wondered how long she could live on. Hence, she wanted to visit all the places that she used to live in the past before she died.

Talking about City B, Amanda subconsciously thought about that man. Her heart slightly fluctuated.

Grabbing Jessica's hand, she said, "Okay, Grandma. I'll take you to City B." _____

Chapter 1041 Tell Her You're Pregnant

"Amanda, when will you have a baby? You've got married for several years, haven't you?" suddenly Jessica asked, "I've only seen you this time. Where is Stanford?"

Everyone except Jessica knew what had happened to Amanda.

It was because both Kevin and she were quite old, others in the family were worried that they might not be able to stand the blow, so they had hidden the news from them.

That was why Jessica didn't know what Amanda had experienced. She still thought Amanda and Stanford were married.

She thought that they had been married for several years. They should have children now.

Amanda creased her eyebrows awkwardly. For a moment, she didn't know how to answer Jessica.

"Why are you silent? Have you fought?" Jessica widened her cloudy eyes to look at her.

"No, we haven't. He's pretty busy. Grandma, have a nap. It'll take us a few hours before reaching the destination.” Amanda covered her with a blanket and let Jessica lean against her shoulder. Patting her on the shoulder, Amanda said, “You sent us to sleep in this way when we were little.” Jessica squinted, feeling a bit tired. “Yeah. With a blink, you all are grown up...” As they chatted, Jessica became sleepy, gradually falling asleep while leaning against Amanda.

On the other side, when Joshua came back after seeing Amanda and Jessica off, he didn't go back to his company. Instead, he asked Matthew out.

“Dad, I want to ask you something about my company business.” Joshua looked solemn.

“Can we have a private talk, please?”

Since his son wanted to talk business with him, Matthew couldn't reject him, so he walked to the study with Joshua.

“What do you want to know?” he asked while sitting on the chair.

Joshua pulled his chair in front of him. After thinking for a moment, he asked, “Dad, are you, or is my mother sick?”

Matthew was confused.

He wondered why suddenly Joshua asked him such a question.

“Last night, I saw you guys washing the bedsheet. Was it stained with something that embarrassed you and can't be told to us? So you wanted to wash it so late at night.”

Matthew frowned and asked, “What embarrassing things?”

“Well... It might be because of some diseases for the old... Then it could...”

Joshua didn't make it straightforward, but Matthew understood what he was saying. Then, he answered, “So, was it you or my mother?” asked Joshua nervously.

“Ehn...”

He felt upset no matter who it was.

“It was your mother.” Matthew slightly looked away to dodge his son's gaze.

Joshua was worried. “Has she checked up in the hospital?”

“Not yet. Why don't you take her to the hospital today?” Matthew suggested.

Dolores was still angry with him. Last night, she refused to talk to him. Today, she would have lunch with Charles. Thinking of that, Matthew was quite angry.

Hence, he wanted to stop her by using Joshua.

In that case, she wouldn't be able to have lunch with Charles.

Matthew knew that he shouldn't be jealous at his age, but he felt quite unhappy as soon as thinking about Charles. Charles had married already, but he still thought about the woman he loved. That truly disgusted Matthew.

“Don’t tell her so directly. Or she wouldn’t be willing to go with you. You should make an excuse first and take her there. Then let her have an overall checkup by the way.” Matthew had already thought about the method for Joshua.

Joshua was enlightened. “I see. I’ll take her to the hospital now.”

He wanted her mother to get treatment as soon as possible since she was sick.

He called Bonnie to the bedroom. “Dad said it was Mom who is sick. We must make an excuse and take her to the hospital.”

“What excuse shall we use?” Bonnie’s heart skipped a beat when hearing the news.

Joshua looked at his wife, reaching out to pat her on her shoulder. “This glorious task would be on your shoulder, honey.”

“Me?” Bonnie was taken aback, wondering what she could do.

“Yeah. You!” Joshua was quite certain. “You can tell Mom you don’t feel well, or you’re pregnant, so you want her to go to the hospital for a checkup. I don’t think she would refuse.” _____

Chapter 1042 Will It Work?

Bonnie pursed her lips tightly, slightly embarrassed as she asked, “Will it... work?”

“Why not? She’ll be excited to accompany you to the hospital once she knows you’re pregnant,” Joshua said, thinking it was a brilliant idea.

Bonnie felt that this could consider as a white lie that must be made for Dolores’ health and agreed to it,

Just as she was about to go downstairs, Joshua called her out, “I’ll go and tell her. You can go back and wait in the room first.”

Joshua gave it some thought and felt that Bonnie wasn’t in a great place to speak about that. He would be the best person to deliver the message instead.

Bonnie listened to him and went back to their room, waiting for Joshua to return.

On the other hand, Dolores was downstairs, preparing to leave the house. Joshua came over and held her hand, “Mom.”

“Yeah?” She turned back to look at her son, “You have something to tell me?”

Joshua nodded his head vigorously, then leaned into her ear and whispered, “Bonnie said that she was sick and would feel like vomiting from time to time. I wanted to bring her to her hospital for a check-up, but she was unwilling to listen to me. Could you try to persuade her and accompany her to the hospital?” Dolores understood the situation almost instantly and thought to herself that Bonnie might be pregnant. She said to Joshua, “I’ll go and take a look at her.” She ascended upstairs with Joshua following behind her.

Matthew, who was reading a financial magazine in the living room, glanced up. There was a hint of unknown shine in his eyes, which turned into returned to its usual calmness as he continued to read. Upstairs, Dolores pushed the door open and walked towards Bonnie, “Bonnie, are you not feeling well anywhere?” “I...” It was Bonnie’s first time lying to her elders. She was uncomfortable about it, slightly nervous as she stuttered, “I... I...” “I heard from Joshua that you’re feeling nauseous. When did it start?” Dolores asked. Bonnie glanced at Joshua, “It... It has been a few days.” “Then we should get you checked-up at the hospital,” Dolores said, then turned to her son, “Accompany Bonnie to the hospital.” “I told her that, but she doesn’t want to go. Why don’t you accompany her instead?” Joshua looked distressed, “Mom, I’m a man. It’s weird for me to accompany her to the gynecologist.” Dolores didn’t hesitate and said, “Sure, I’ll accompany her.” Joshua picked up his car keys, “I’ll drive the both of you there.” “Bonnie, let’s go.”

Bonnie followed Dolores downstairs.

Joshua, with keys dangling in his hand, looked towards the living room, “Dad, we’re going out for a while.” Matthew pretended to know nothing and asked, “Where to?” “Bonnie’s not feeling well. We’re going to the doctors,” Joshua answered. The father-son duo met gazes, and as if planned, both did not continue the conversation. “We’re leaving now.” Joshua opened the door. He only got a wave from Matthew before he continued to read his magazine. Dolores did not look towards Matthew and left right away.

Half an hour later, they arrived at the hospital.

After they registered, they waited for a moment before entering the doctor's office. Bonnie was embarrassed to speak. Joshua did all the talking instead, "She feels like puking."

"You are?" The doctor asked Joshua.

"Her husband," Joshua replied.

The doctor nodded, then gave Joshua forms for B-ultrasound and some other check-ups.

While waiting for Bonnie's check-ups, Joshua slid into the seat next to Dolores, "Mom, when was the last time you had a full-body check-up? Why don't you go for one today?"

The purpose of this trip to the hospital today was to have Dolores get a comprehensive check-up.

Dolores frowned, "My check-ups are annual. It's not time for it yet this year."

"He's right, Mom. I'll be fine here by myself. Both you and Joshua should go for a check-up." Bonnie tried to help Joshua.

"I'm fine. All my past results for the check-ups showed that I'm healthy." Dolores was still unwilling to go for a check-up. To her, she was here to accompany her daughter-in-law. Why should she go for a check-up out of the blue?

"Mom..." Joshua tried to persuade Dolores again, "Your eldest son isn't married yet, so you need to stay healthy and wait for the day he gets married. Although I'm already married to Bonnie, she could be pregnant. You need to be healthy to take care of our child, right?" ____

Chapter 1043 Come With Me

"But I'm fine. There's no need..."

"Mom, we're already here. We might as well use our time wisely." Joshua and Bonnie persisted.

Hence, Dolores was forced into getting a medical check-up.

The result that came out after showed that she was healthy. Joshua thought that the doctors might've made a mistake, and the results were wrong.

He quickly explained the situation to the doctor-in-charge.

Dolores couldn't sit by idly anymore, "Joshua, what did you say?"

"Uh, you guys were washing the bedsheets that night. Dad said you..."

"You bought that?" Dolores understood it all now, "You said that Bonnie was not feeling well. That was just an excuse to get me here for the check-up, right?"

Joshua admitted, "Yeah, but we did it because we care about your health."
Buzz. Dolores' phone, which was in her pocket, rang suddenly. She picked up the phone, and Charles' voice came through, "You're not here yet?"
Dolores looked at the time, then only did she remember that Charles had asked her out today, "I don't think I can make it today."
She was still in the hospital now. Plus, it was way past the time they agreed to meet. "Why not?" Charles chuckled, "That jealousy-filled man in your house won't let you meet me?"
"Nah. Something urgent came up and I can't leave now." Dolores knew Matthew's motives clearly. This was what he wanted.
Why else would he have lied to the kids that she wetted the bed, and made them trick her into coming to the hospital then? He didn't want her to have time to meet up with Charles.

"Mom, who's that?" Joshua had a hunch that it was Charles and asked deliberately. "I need to go. Talk to you next time." Dolores hung up the phone hurriedly.
"Who's that?" Joshua asked again.
"Just an old friend." Dolores pulled him, "Let's go and look at Bonnie."
Joshua didn't give up and asked again, "The Charles guy?"
Dolores looked at him, "Don't meddle in adults' matters."
Only to get a snarl from Joshua, "I'm an adult too."
"You'll always be a kid to me." Dolores was mad, not at Joshua, but Matthew.
'How could he say that to the kids?'
They found Bonnie, who was done with her check-up. It turned out that she wasn't pregnant.
Joshua was looking forward to the results, genuinely hoping that Bonnie was pregnant, but she was not.
Dolores could sense her son's disappointment and comforted him, "You guys are still young and have so much time for kids. Don't rush it, and most importantly, don't stress Bonnie out."
"I know." Joshua understood it.
"Let's go home." Dolores headed out first.
Joshua followed behind. He put his arm around Bonnie, whispering in her ear, "I was hoping you'd be pregnant for real."

Bonnie pursed her lips, "You want to be a dad this early? We're still so young."

"It's not early at all. I made a deal with my brother. Whoever has a child first doesn't need to care about the family's matters. There's so much stuff to manage. I don't want any of that."

"Think about it. How amazing would it be if we could travel the world together, and there's someone at home working to make money for us?"

Bonnie nodded, "That sounds good."

"That is why you need to work harder and get pregnant soon. My brother doesn't even have a girlfriend yet. He's going to lose so bad."

"Hey!" Bonnie pinched him, "Watch your words. We're out in a public place now."

"No one can hear us." Joshua, still had his arm circled around Bonnie, said, "Let's go."

After catching up with Dolores, Joshua ingratiated himself with her, "Mom, it's already 1.00 p.m. Let's have lunch before going home."

"We're eating lunch at home." Dolores was a little harsh. Yes, she was angry, but towards Matthew.

Joshua, upon seeing that his mother was unhappy, listened to her words, "We're relieved since you're healthy."

Dolores did not say anything.

"Mom, are you angry?" Bonnie held her hand.

"I'm not." Dolores patted her daughter-in-law's hand in return, "I'm fine. Don't overthink it."

A while later, they arrived home.

Everyone got down from the car.

Matthew was the only one at home at this time. The others had gone out.

"I'm going to prepare lunch." Bonnie pulled Joshua and said, "You're coming with me."

Joshua replied, "I need to tell dad about mom's health. He needs to know that she's okay."

"Are you dumb?" Bonnie glared at her husband, "I'm guessing they were washing the bedsheets the other day because of some other reason, and not because Mom isn't healthy."

"You mean... Dad is the sick one?" Joshua asked, widening his eyes, "Did he push the blame to Mom because he was embarrassed about it? And Mom got mad because of that?"

It was apparent that Dolores was angry earlier.

"I don't know either. You should clarify it later." Bonnie opened the door to the refrigerator, thinking of the dish she should make for lunch.

Joshua just stood there. He had always been quick to grasp a situation, but he was confused now.

He didn't know what to do.

On the other hand, Dolores was just sitting at the edge of the bed, staring at Matthew without saying a word.

“Why are you looking at me like that?” Matthew poured himself a glass of water leisurely and sat down on the sofa by the window.

“Matthew Nelson, did you have to do that?” _____

Chapter 1044 Only Cared For You

Dolores was annoyed, “How could you tell the kids that we were washing the bedsheets last night because I...”

She was too embarrassed to continue her words.

“I didn’t say it. It was his guess.” Matthew took a sip of water, “I was just going along with his words.”

“Really?” Dolores did not trust him.

“You can ask him later.” He put his cup down.

Why would Dolores do that and bring up the topic again? And to ask their son? She’d be nuts to do that.

“You did that because you didn’t want me to meet Charles. Don’t you think you’re childish?”

‘Can this man ever grow up?’ Dolores thought to herself.

Charles was the last person Matthew would ever want to talk about.

After all, Charles was still infatuated with Dolores after so many years. Matthew did not like that one bit.

“He isn’t a good person either.”

Dolores approached Matthew and sat on the sofa by his side, asking, “Why is that?”

Matthew’s voice was low, “First of all, he isn’t single. He’s doing it for his own selfish desires without caring about other people’s feelings. Could he be considered as a good man?”

That made Dolores silent for a moment because she couldn’t retort to what Matthew had said. It was the truth that Charles had betrayed Tiana.

Although Tiana wasn’t brilliant, she was a kind lady. Charles shouldn’t have taken her opportunity of being a mother forever.

If one were to be kind, they could call Charles loyal. If it were on the harsher side, he would be called a jerk.

“You’re still angry?” Matthew leaned over, only to get a glare from Dolores. Then, she asked, “Have you eaten?”

“Yeah.” There was no one at home, so Matthew had gone out for lunch earlier.

"I'm hungry." Dolores had been busy all morning. It was about time she got hungry. She told Matthew,

"Don't do such childish things anymore next time."

He responded, "I got it."

When Dolores entered the kitchen, Bonnie was about done with lunch, "I cooked noodles." Joshua stood at the side, "Mom, did you fought with Dad?"

10 Stars Who Got Excluded From The Hollywood Elite Club

The Criminal Minds Cast: Where Are They Now?

"I hope the noodles can make you shut up later." Dolores did not take a look at her son at all. She was helping Bonnie to cook lunch.

Joshua was persistent. He wanted to find out if his parents had a fight because of Charles.

"Mom..."

"Can you stop..." Dolores looked back, and before she could finish her sentence, she saw Andrew, who was at the kitchen door.

She thought Joshua had called her earlier, so she was a little harsh with her tone. Now that she saw that it was her eldest son, she had a change of expression. Even her voice became softer, "Are your eyes better now?"

Andrew nodded, "It's almost completely healed. You were angry earlier?"

"She's mad at me." Joshua interrupted, "Andrew, did you see that? Mom's so biased towards you. She cares so much about you, but she would only scold me."

"You've gotten the best benefit already."

"Mom didn't even find me a daughter-in-law when I was younger. Look at you. You have had your marriage arranged since you were born. You better be grateful."

Joshua chuckled. Indeed, he enjoyed the best benefit already.

While they were eating lunch, Andrew spoke after thinking for a moment, "Mom, I want to go out for a bit."

"Where to?" Soon, Dolores realized that he might want to look for the girl who saved him, so she did not stop him, "I haven't thanked her for saving you yet. It's good for you to look for her."

"I've got plenty of time to rest this time around. After I look for her first, then I'll spend more time with you." Andrew had spent too little time at home for the past years.

Joshua had been taking care of everything and everyone at home.

Andrew was grateful for his younger brother.

He was the eldest son of the family, but he did not assume his responsibility as he should.

"Joshua, care to have a drink with me?" Andrew got up to get a bottle of wine.

"Andrew, your eyes have just healed. Can you drink?" Bonnie asked in concern.

Dolores agreed with Bonnie too, "Andrew, it's better if you don't drink. Your eyes just recovered after all."

"It's been a long time since I had a heart-to-heart talk with Joshua. Since I have the time today, I'd love to have a drink with him. I'm fine, really." Andrew took the wine glasses, placing one in front of Joshua and the other in front of him. He opened the bottle of wine and poured it into the glasses. _____ Convenient Marriage: Mr. Nelson's Love Trap
Chapter 1045 Could Not Remember Clearly

Joshua knew his intentions and intentionally joked, "How could we just eat noodles with wine? You should make some more dishes to show your hospitality." "You should be contented with these noodles." Andrew topped up his wine glass. He looked at the wine glass filled to the brim and laughed, "Bro, aren't you afraid that I'll get you drunk?"

Dolores and Bonnie left the dining table after they were done.

"Mom, I'll cook some dishes for them to go with the wine," Bonnie said.

"Okay." Dolores placed the dirty dishes in the basin and asked, "How long haven't they met?" She had not seen Andrew for almost two years.

Bonnie pondered for a while but could not be sure, "It must be when we went to see you. It has been almost two years."

Dolores sighed within her. She really did not want her son to be doing such a dangerous job and he was always not at home. Then she thought that he had grown up and had his interests and career. She could not restrain him. Even if she continued to worry for him, she had never asked him to come back. She just felt that she had not taken good care of him. He left the home when he was rather young and soon had a career. Now he was also married.

"Bonnie, has Joshua ever said that he was frustrated with work?" Dolores asked as she was washing the dishes.

"No, he's young and is energetic," Bonnie said as she cooked some pepper beef cubes.

"You are with him now and should take good care of him. He left us when he was very young." Dolores said.

Bonnie understood Dolores's concerns and laughed, "Rest assured, mom, I will take good care of him. You had been very good to him and gave him a lot during our wedding." Bonnie continued, "You should rejoice. A lot of siblings would bicker due to money. Just look at them." Dolores looked towards the dining room. The two of them had arms around each other's shoulders and were having a good time. She indeed felt blessed and happy.

10 Stars Who Got Excluded From The Hollywood Elite Club

The Unique First Lady, Not Only Because She's Black

She rejoiced that Andrew was safe and the brother's relationship was so good.

On the other end, Amanda brought Jessica to White city. The Forbis family home was vacant but it looked like it was periodically cleaned.

Jessica was thin and frail and could not walk steadily. Amanda supported her towards the door.

"This all looked so familiar." Jessica looked around the courtyard.

Instantly she had a flashback and thought about the days when she was with Mr. Forbis.

They loved to sit under the tree in the courtyard. There was even a swing on the tree.

"Do you still remember this place?" Jessica said as she sat down on the chair.

Amanda was here when she was young but had not returned since. She sat on the swing and replied,

"Not too clearly."

She had some impression but the memories were hazy and not too clear.

"Let's stay here for several days before going to B city." Jessica touched the stone table and reminisced the time when she had meals with Mr. Forbis. She suddenly thought about the days when she spent with him and then became melancholy due to his passing.

Amanda replied, "Okay."

She got off the swing and walked to Jessica, "Grandma, did you love my grandfather?"

Jessica and Mr. Forbis were old when they decided to be with each other. They only spent their waning years together. Amanda wanted to know if they were together because of love or just companionship.

Chapter 1046 Don't Wish To Hurt You

Jessica's dull eyes sparkled for a moment but then she became sullen for a while as she was pondering her relationship with Kevin Forbis. She then said, "I don't know." She only knew that she felt very contented when she was with Kevin although he was not a very homely person. Neither was he detailed but he was very dependable which made her feel safe and assured.

“Amanda, do you think that there is life after death?” Jessica asked. She did not believe this in the past but now she began to hope for it.

“If there is, I wish that I can meet him earlier and spend my youthful days with him, bear him children and live my life with him,” Jessica said softly as her voice began to crack. She could no longer hide her emotions. But who has a life without regrets?

“I saw something on the internet which said,” Amanda held onto Jessica’s hand, “A man’s current wife was someone he buried in the previous life. So that meant that since you buried grandfather, he would become your husband in the next life and repay your kindness towards him.”

Jessica pondered for a while before she understood what Amanda said and started to laugh, “You’re an intelligent child!”

They stayed there for three days and were about to leave on the fourth day when they met Charles.

“Have you been cleaning this place?” Amanda asked. The place was very clean when they came.

Although no one stayed there, it was obvious that someone must be cleaning it regularly.

Charles lived nearby and had some connections with the Forbis family. He should be the one who maintained the place.

“Yes, I had been.” Charles admitted but he was curious why was she here and asked, “Why did you come suddenly?”

“My grandma would like to have a look,” Amanda replied.

Charles understood that because of Jessica’s age, she could not be sure when she would pass on. Making a trip would put her heart at ease.

Amanda replied, “We had already stayed for a few days and are preparing to leave.”

Charles nodded, “I just came back from C city. If I had known that you’re coming, I would have returned earlier.”

He noticed the bag which Amanda was carrying and asked, “Are you leaving now?”

The Criminal Minds Cast: Where Are They Now?

No Money Could Ever Give You Access To Any Of These People

Amanda confirmed.

“I’ll send you off,” Charles called out to the driver.

“No need.” Amanda rejected, “I rented a car.” She then pointed to the car parked outside, “That car.”

The Forbis family home was rather remote. With a rented car, she could take Jessica out for meals instead of cooking.

“I’ll send you to the airport. Just leave the car here and I will settle its return.” Charles felt that he needed to do something for them. He would feel bad if he did not do anything. She was Dolores’s daughter and he should take care of her when she came to that area.

Amanda pondered for a while and then agreed, “Okay.”

She had intended to return the car before taking a taxi to the airport. Now with Charles’ offer to help, she would save some time. Thus, they got into Charles’ car.

Along the way, Charles asked, “Do you intend to return to C city?”

“No,” Amanda replied.

“Then...” Charles asked again, “To B city?”

Amanda nodded.

“Okay, let me know if you need anything.” Charles offered.

He knew the situation between Amanda and Charles. He pondered for a moment and then said, “A person who loves you would never hurt you. Someone who does will not hesitate to hurt you.”

Chapter 1047 Is She Calling Me

What Charles said was to remind Amanda not to soften her heart when she met Stanford. He was unworthy of her lifelong commitment.

Jessica was asleep at this point as she was fatigued from the travelling.

It was silent for a moment the car before Amanda replied, “I know.” She was appreciative of Charles’ advice and concern.

“How long will you stay at B City?” Charles asked.

She looked at Jessica and then replied, “We’ve not decided, it depends on the situation.”

They remained quiet for a while. The car sped along the highway and Amanda was deep in her thoughts.

After a while, she turned to look at Charles and asked, “Can I ask you a question?”

“Please go ahead,” Charles replied.

She pondered for a moment before asking, “Do you regret meeting my mother?”

Charles was puzzled and asked, “Why did you ask this?”

“Hmm... Isn’t it better to not have met the person who you loved but could not be together with?” In that case, a person would not be hurt.

Charles did not think so and replied, "It's better to have loved and lost than to never have loved at all. It's better to have met someone who you can fall in love with. Otherwise, you would not have had that opportunity to truly love. Of course, it would be unfortunate not to be with the person but it is better than not meeting her at all."

Amanda respected Charles as he was a decent person. At the very least he was a person who valued love.

They arrived at the airport and Charles directed the driver to carry the bags. Amanda helped Jessica down the car and said, "Just leave us here, we'll find our way." The driver took out their bags and helped with the wheelchair. Charles then said, "I'll see you to the aircraft." He was very insistent and Amanda did not reject his offer. They waited a while till it was time to board the aircraft. Before boarding the aircraft, Amanda looked back and saw that Charles was still looking at them. She waved farewell to him. She sat next to Jessica and before long the aircraft was airborne. Jessica started to mumble to herself, "Perhaps I'll never have the chance to come back again." Amanda missed it and asked, "Grandma, what did you say?" Jessica shook her head and answered, "Nothing." The further she left that familiar place, the more unsettled she was. She could not even take a nap as her mind was filled with memories that she should have forgotten. "Amanda, what are you thinking of?" Jessica asked as she was herself in a partial daze. "Nothing." Amanda covered Jessica with the blanket and said, "Grandma, have a nap." Jessica already slept for a while in the car and did not feel like sleeping now, "I've not seen Stanford for a while." Amanda was stunned for a moment before she replied, "He is very busy." She did not want Jessica to worry about her affairs.

"Yes, you are all so busy." Jessica leaned onto her shoulder and continued, "Will I be able to see your baby?"

Amanda could not reply and remained quiet.

Jessica said.

Amanda replied, “Yes, he has a good relationship with Bonnie.”

The aeroplane landed.

They arrived at this city again and although the city did not change much, Jessica felt that it was like a homecoming as she had not been there for a long time.

Amanda went to collect the bags as Jessica sat on the bench to wait. She then saw someone who looked like Stanford and remarked, “Stanford?”

Stanford did not hear the call as he was talking to Atwood.

“Send George away and those two would start to behave,” Atwood said.

Stanford had lost some of his memories but his mind was still sharp. The two from the James family wanted to capitalize on Stanford’s memory loss to let George manage the company so that they seize authority and the assets. However, Stanford did not let the James family manipulate him because of his memory loss. He sent George overseas to further his studies. Once back from his studies, he would still have a position at the company.

Without George, the two elder James would be more subdued.

“Hey, Stanford.” Jessica slowly staggered towards Stanford called out to him.

Stanford noticed someone calling him, turned, and saw Jessica. However, he did not know who she was because he had lost his memories of her. So he did not reply and continued to walk away.

“Stanford, are you here to pick us up?” Jessica yelled again.

Now he was certain that he was not mistaken and even Atwood heard. Atwood’s expression changed as soon as he saw Jessica.

“Mr. James, we have a meeting this afternoon, let’s go.”

Stanford did not budge and asked, “Was she calling out to me?”

“I didn’t hear.” Atwood shook his head.

“Was I mistaken?” Stanford frowned.

“Perhaps, let’s go...” Atwood hurried him.

At this point, Amanda had picked up the bags and noticed that Jessica was no longer sitting at the bench.

She noticed Jessica not far from her and hurried over.

Atwood was stunned when he saw Amanda and wondered why she was there. Immediately, he looked at Stanford’s expression. _____ Convenient Marriage: Mr. Nelson's Love Trap

But Stanford’s expression did not change significantly. It looked as if he could not recognize the two women not far away from him.

“Grandma, didn’t I ask you to wait for me? Why did you come this way?” Amanda was upset and worried that Jessica strayed off without telling her.

Jessica grabbed her hand and said, “I saw Stanford. Was he here to receive us? I called out to him but he did not hear and walked off.”

When Jessica said this, Amanda raised her head and saw Stanford. She suddenly seemed unnatural and perturbed.

‘Why was he here?’

She sized Stanford and Atwood up. They did not appear to have returned from a business trip as they did not have any luggage with them.

Jessica shook her head, “I did not, isn’t he Stanford? I’m not senile yet!”

“He’s not.” Amanda tried to avoid the matter and now Jessica began to falter, “Did I see wrongly?”

Amanda definitively said to Jessica, “Yes, you’ve made a mistake.”

At this moment, Stanford walked briskly over to them and asked, “Do you know me?”

Amanda did not turn to look at him but replied, “No.”

Jessica wanted to prove that she did not make a mistake and asked, “Are you Stanford?”

“Yes, I am.” Stanford was doubtful as there could be a coincidence and this old lady could have mistaken him for someone else. After all, this other lady kept denying.

“Mr. James, we have a meeting. We need to go now.” Atwood came over to remind him.

‘Even Atwood did not recognize them so most likely this old lady was mistaken.’ Stanford thought.

He did not persist and left with Atwood.

When Stanford got into the car, Atwood made up an excuse that he needed to use the restroom and told the driver to leave first. He would catch a taxi later. Stanford agreed and Atwood got out of the car.

After Atwood ensured that the car had left, he ran back into the airport terminal. However, the car moved a short distance and stopped. Stanford noticed Atwood’s actions from the rearview mirror and became suspicious.

“Shall we return to the office?” The driver asked.

“No.” Stanford opened the door and exited the car. He wanted to see what was going on as Atwood’s behaviour was very suspicious.

Atwood found Amanda inside the airport terminal.

"Mrs... Ms. Nelson." Atwood almost addressed her as Mrs. James. But she was no longer Stanford's wife.

Additionally, Stanford had lost his memories and the two of them were effectively strangers.

"Can I help you?" Amanda sounded cold.

Atwood said, "Mr. James had not recovered his memories. George, the doctor, and I told him that he cannot recover." They did not want him to recall his past.

After all, Amanda also would not forgive him. Since all the memories would only hurt him, he might as well forget them and start afresh.

"Recently, I've been encouraging him to make some friends of the opposite sex..." Atwood wished that Stanford could get married again and start a family.

Amanda was puzzled by Atwood's actions and asked, "Why did you tell me these?" She then scoffed, "Do these have anything to do with me?"

"No..." Atwood simply felt the need to tell her since her hatred for him was so deep. Now she should know about Stanford's condition.

"I'm afraid that you would misunderstand and in case you meet him, I'm afraid..."

"Say no more." Amanda waved her hand, "I understand. I will not look for him.

Furthermore, regardless of how he is in the future, it has nothing to do with me. I'm back because I have something to attend to.

After all, this is a free country and I can come to this city as I wish."

"Of course." Atwood was still respectful of Amanda and offered, "Shall I get a taxi for you?"

"No need. I've already called for one." Amanda rejected.

Jessica could not understand the conversation and asked, "Amanda, what are you saying?"

"Nothing." Amanda led Jessica away and continued, "Let's go. The taxi is here and waiting for us."

Atwood looked at them leave and sighed as he left the airport. He did not notice Stanford leaving from another end.

Back at the office, Stanford continued to recall Atwood and Amanda's conversation. The women did not appear to be strangers. On the contrary, they seemed familiar and the conversation kept referring to him.

He was certain that this had something to do with him and Atwood was keeping something from him.

Atwood did not want him to know something.

He picked up the phone, dialled and the call was swiftly answered.

The call ended and someone knocked on the door. Atwood came back to the office and reminded Stanford that he had a meeting.

Stanford pretended that he did not know anything and went to the meeting.

Amanda and Jessica checked into the hotel and rested for the day. They would start their plans tomorrow. She bathed Jessica and ordered room service.

Amanda put Jessica to bed, took a shower, and was ready to rest when the doorbell rang and she went

Chapter 1049 I Was Joking

Amanda opened the door and it was Joan. She was shocked and asked, “How come you’re here?”

‘How did he know that they were staying there?’ She thought.

Joan seemed nervous when he asked her, “Are you alright?”

“I’m fine.” Amanda was puzzled.

“Then how come I received a message from your brother that you’re in danger? He even told me the address and asked me to come to rescue you...” Then Joan seemed to realize something.

Amanda was shocked by this. How did Joshua know her travel details and address?

“Come in.” She said. He had rushed over from so far away and she should not keep him waiting outside.

Joan entered the room and she quickly poured a glass of water for him and said, “Have a seat.”

Amanda went into the bathroom and called Joshua, “What’s happening?”

“What?” Joshua quickly realized what was happening and asked, “You’ve met Joan?”

He leaned back into his seat and placed his feet on the table and said, “How can I be at ease knowing that you brought grandma out? Of course, I needed to know your itinerary. Now that you’re in B city, you may meet someone that you should not. I asked Joan to go, firstly because I am helping him as he likes you. I’m giving both of you a chance to get to know each other better. Secondly, I’m helping you in case you’re conned again.” Joshua explained.

“Joshua, I will settle my own things...” Amanda snapped back at him.

“Don’t refuse me if you don’t want mom and dad to worry,” Joshua said mischievously.

Amanda was speechless. She could not rebut him.

“Can you inform me of your plans in the future and not give me a fright?” Amanda demanded.

“Okay, I’ll inform you in the future.” Joshua gave an empty assurance. Now that Joan was there, there was no way Amanda could demand that he left.

Joshua laughed gleefully. He agreed with Bonnie that Joan was a good man. Furthermore, he could not accept that Amanda and Stanford had any future together. He wanted to make sure that there was no possibility of them getting back together. Tragedy could only happen once and not be repeated!

Amanda kept her phone and came out of the bathroom.

At this moment, Joan also realized what was happening and asked, “If it’s inconvenient that I remain, I’ll leave first thing tomorrow.” Initially, he also felt odd that Joshua asked him to come instead of Joshua coming personally. Now he realized that Joshua did this to set him up with Amanda.

Yes, he indeed liked Amanda but he did not want to force anyone. He also did not want to impose. Even now, he would consider Amanda’s standpoint.

“Wait a minute. I need to change.” She said.

“I’ll wait outside.” Joan was about to leave when Amanda called out to him, “Just sit on the sofa and give me a minute.” Joan obliged and sat on the sofa.

He took out his phone and stared into the screen and did not let his eyes wander.

Amanda changed and wore a simple dress. Her hair had just been blown dry and she did not put on any makeup.

“Let’s go.” She said.

Joan quickly stood up. His suit was slightly creased. From the looks of it, he came to look for Amanda as soon as he came into the country.

“I know a place which serves great coffee. It’s not far from here.” She said.

They walked over to the café not far from the hotel. It was a prime location and the street was very crowded.

“Did you come without taking anything?” Amanda noticed that he did not have any luggage and his clothes seemed untidy.

“Yes.” He answered truthfully.

“Since you’re back in my hometown, I must take care of you. Afterwards, we’ll go and get you some sundries and clothes to change into. Since you’re already here, you might as well spend a couple of days here. Do you have the time?” Amanda asked.

Joan was very busy but he instantly replied, “Yes.”

They arrived at the café. They sat down and Amanda asked, “What do you like?”

“Anything,” Joan replied.

Amanda ordered two cups of coffee.

“I intend to take my grandmother out sightseeing. Shall we go together?” She started the conversation to avoid any awkwardness.

“My grandma misses the villages and we should be going to the place where we lived and walk down memory lane.” She laughed.

Joan replied, “That’s for sure. We should go.”

“Why?” Amanda was puzzled why he was interested in going.

“To better understand you,” Joan said factually. He was also very direct in expressing his feelings for Amanda.

Amanda pursed her lips and did not know how to continue. Some words could not be said too many times.

“I won’t pressurize you and will never force you. There is no need to repay me for anything. We are both adults and know what we want.” He looked at Amanda and continued, “If my presence brings any inconvenience to you, you must tell me immediately. I will not make things difficult for you.”

“This way please.”

A woman entered at this moment. She was wearing the latest Chanel collection. She walked by and left a trail of scent from the perfume that she wore. She sat at an empty table next to them.

“I won’t order now. I’m waiting for someone.” She said as she placed her Louis Vuitton bag on her lap and twirled her hair. The waiter acknowledged and left.

The woman did not affect them.

Joan’s admittance that he liked her but would not pester her made her feel positive about Joan. She then said, "Okay. If I decide to reconcile with him, it would definitely be inappropriate for you to remain.

When that happened, I'll let you leave."

Joan was startled and he appeared to be disappointed. However, Amanda saw this and laughed, "I'm only joking." _____
