

Concubine 33

Chapter 33: Full Marks for Two Categories

The test results were posted in the hall, where most students walked by every day.

Nowadays, most schools would require students to check their results by logging into the student dashboard, but Kyokushin Art School still retained the most primitive method to announce test results.

This showed how perverted the school was when it came to grades.

“Xuefang, you’re amazing. You’re first again.”

“If someone takes a picture of this and posts it online, it’ll definitely be a hot search.”

“Not only did Xuefang rank first in her major, but she also scored more than 600 points in cultural studies.”

In the crowd, Zhou Xuefang, who had ranked first in both her specializations, was like the moon surrounded by the stars.

These words were definitely a compliment to Zhou Xuefang and at the same time, it was also an insult to Su Ji.

However, in Zhou Xuefang’s ears, there was more to it.

Nancheng City was a very small city in the country. The reason why it produced so many top students was because it was difficult to stand out otherwise.

“Su Ji will definitely be at the bottom again...huh? She wasn’t in the last place? I saw her taking the exam today.”

The girl’s voice was very soft, and the surroundings instantly became quiet.

The other three members of the Fallen Note subconsciously started to look for Su Ji’s ranking.

They looked up from the bottom of the list...

There were more than 40 students in total. This time, they only found Su Ji when they reached the middle.

The test was very detailed. For example, dance alone was divided into flexibility, sense of rhythm, movement completeness, and many other criteria.

Su Ji’s singing and dancing tests had a total of ten points. Some of her scores were high, while some were low, but the combined scores were just enough to pass and she had successfully obtained 10 credits.

With her as the dividing line, the students below her were not so lucky.

For the first time, she's not last?!

Su Ji looked at her results and stroked her chin with her fair fingers. She nodded in satisfaction.

"What?" Pan Lian blinked her eyes in disbelief. "Baby, you're so lucky today!"

Not only Pan Lian, but almost everyone thought that Su Ji was just lucky to make it today.

She was lucky because she was tested on the dance and music that she was familiar with.

Zhou Xuefang didn't think much of it. She had barely passed the test. As the number one, she couldn't compare with her.

"Nana, Pan Lian, let's go. We still have to film 'Hello, Sunday' tomorrow. I think the three of us should practice a few more times."

Upon hearing "Hello, Sunday", everyone's attention was immediately diverted.

This was the most popular variety show recently. Every episode would feature different celebrities and was heavily promoted.

As a newcomer, it would be a good starting point if one gets the opportunity to perform on this show.

There was a limited quota for this episode. At most, three people could participate. Chen Jing did not hesitate to kick Su Ji out.

"Alright, I won't be able to sleep early tonight again," Pan Lian replied with her head drooped.

Zhou Xuefang took two steps forward and turned around to find Meng Na staring blankly at the board. She had no idea what she was looking at.

"Nana?" Zhou Xuefang furrowed her brows.

"I'm talking to you." Meng Na only came back to her senses when Su Ji whistled at her. She responded absentmindedly and left with the others.

Just now, she had been looking at Su Ji's scores for various subjects.

In the beginning, she had also thought that Su Ji only passed because she was lucky. However, after a closer look, she realized Su Ji scored low in most easy-to-pass categories for most students, such as getting the dance moves and lyrics right. On the other hand, Su Ji had scored full marks in both flexibility and pitch, which even Zhou Xuefang had failed to score full marks in...
