Victor's passivity at all.

If he didn't act now, he would act in the future.

"Shh, I'm here," Victor embraced her.

Feeling his embrace, feeling the familiar warmth, hearing his voice, Nero instinctively hugged him as silent tears fell from her face.

Victor sighed, his heart aching at the sight. He knew it was necessary, and the outcome spoke for itself, but it was still Hearing the word 'home', Nero couldn't hold back anymore and cried even harder as she hugged him.

Seeing this scene, Ruby approached slowly behind Nero and gently touched her shoulder. "You're home, Nero... You're Kali, who was oating, looked at this scene with loving eyes, but at the same time, she watched with caution the 'chaos' that surrounded Nero.

Her divinity was utterly out of control, and if it weren't for Victor suppressing the entire area with his in uence, ensuring that Nero's powers didn't in uence anything, the apocalypse might have already happened around her.

This understanding made a cold sweat break out on Kali's face because even if she tried to somehow stop Nero by 'destroying' her in uence, the damage would still occur in the same way. You can't prevent the Apocalypse from happening; you can only lessen its in uence. Unless, of course, you were Victor with his abnormal powers.

Kali sighed. 'The more time I spend here, the more I regret making that contract.' Did she become stronger? Yes, she did. She progressed more in the time she spent with Victor than in the 2000 years she spent merely meditating, but at the same time, her sanity began to deteriorate slightly. She saw things... Things she couldn't share with her pantheon.

She sighed a second time in resignation. Despite not interacting much in it, she still loved her pantheon; it was her home, after all. She would very much like to warn her pantheon not to provoke the Emperor in any way, and if he does something to her pantheon, they should immediately surrender to the Emperor's will.

There's a ne line between arrogance and pride. And usually, the gods don't see that line.

'Fortunately, there is Shiva. Although he is very proud, he can still see reality.' Kali was not naive and did not believe in

Even though the pride of the gods hurts with this action, it's better to do this than to be served as food for the Emperor.

Victor was a man of action, and he wouldn't be limited by a 'deal' made at the meeting of supernatural beings. The incident in Asgard was a good example of this.

One could say that Victor was being quite 'kind' for not having done anything so far. But Kali didn't believe in this passivity.

And to be honest, he is entirely correct. The other gods wouldn't remain passive if they were in his position. If Shiva, Odin, the late Zeus, or another God King were in Victor's position of power, they would do everything to control the supernatural

She was betting he would act before the sector shifted to a higher level. From everything she had observed so far from Victor's family, this was the most natural conclusion she could reach.

"I can't just stay passive. I have to somehow engage with him..." Her face turned slightly red as she entertained these thoughts, but she didn't dismiss them immediately. "To ensure the future of my pantheon, I need to do something."

Kali didn't know what this 'something' would be. The most obvious answer was to become one of his 'wives' and try to was very sensitive to emotions, and he would know when someone was trying to manipulate him, and she couldn't fake her love for him.

She had to genuinely love him for him to move. Although she 'liked' Victor, she didn't 'love' him yet. She found him intriguing, she respected him for his power and for helping her with something no one else could, but that's it.

persuade him in some way not to harm her pantheon too much during his conquest. But that was a risky idea because Victor

Perhaps, if she were to transform into a primordial, she would stand a chance in the ght against Victor, but even with

"Ugh." Kali felt a headache coming on as she thought of several things at once before she sighed again. "It would all be Victor's help, the process of fully transforming into a primordial was very lengthy. You were literally becoming the very concept of an aspect of the universe. In her predictions, it would take at least another 5 or 7 millennia to reach this stage, a much shorter time compared to before, when it was expected to take over millions of years.

Therefore, this idea was discarded. In seven millennia, Victor himself might become a monster even greater than a primordial. She didn't doubt his potential, as he had proven time and again that he could always exceed beings' expectations.

Not to mention, she didn't have all that time. The sector's shift would happen in 100 years and this was a prediction that Kali must work with the present. What strategies should she use? What plans should she employ? What could she do to change his mind?

Artifacts? Victor didn't need those. He could literally create whatever he wanted as a god of creation, and with Hephaestus happen sooner than everyone expected. She could feel it; her connection with the universe told her that much.

'Honestly, I don't even know how I'll live again in my home without these comforts.' It seemed like this entire mansion was living 40 millennia ahead of the current present; the technology was just that superior.

The technology Velnorah provided was just... out of this world.

Unlike Ophis, her process of awakening divinity was more turbulent and mentally exhausting.

'She probably won't wake up for a few weeks.' Victor thought as he assessed her soul. Her soul was strong and robust, much more than before, but at the same time, her soul needed time to readjust to its new existence, he could clearly see

After some time, she stopped crying and just continued hugging him until she slowly fell into the realm of unconsciousness.

'She has a nightmare form as well.' Focusing his gaze on her core of existence, he saw that as an 'Eldritch' goddess, her nightmare form was not massive like his but rather more humanoid, much like when he used his in uence to maintain his humanoid form.

An Eldritch Chaos like him was not limited to any form. He simply remained like this because he identi

It wouldn't be an exaggeration to say that Victor's true soul form now was just a formless 'something' that could transform Brie y pondering this, Victor realized that the Eldritch pantheon has the same concept as other pantheons. 'Azathoth and I are both Chaos, the beginning of everything, then come the primordial gods created by us like Yog, after Yog come the normal goddesses who draw power from me like in the case of Nero and Ophis.' He felt amused to think that he was essentially creating a whole new creation from scratch.

'But of course, this comparison is just me contemplating. Eldritch gods are fundamentally different. We really have no limits,

"...Darling..." Ruby spoke as she stroked Nero's white hair, which stood on end. 'Her hair looks like a lion's mane.' She chuckled silently with that thought as she looked lovingly at Nero.

"Let's take her to her room." Victor said.

"Mm." Ruby nodded. "I'll stay by her side."

"Are you sure? She'll probably take days to wake up."

"... Oh, don't let my daughters know about this." Victor wouldn't hear the end of it if his daughters knew this information.

"Fufufufu, you underestimate your daughters, Darling. They already know."

"Yeah, she's got a soft spot for kids, and some of them take advantage of that to get information out of her."

"Please don't compare me to him." Victor rolled his eyes, making Ruby laugh a little more. "I was already planning to do that Victor narrowed his eyes slightly. "I thought they had stopped that." It might seem strange for Victor not to know this, but he's not monitoring everyone 24/7 as if it were a reality show. He only did so when necessary.

"Don't give me that look; they'll be upset, you know?" She smiled gently. "They're not doing it on purpose, and when it happens, whether intentional or not, us mothers always make sure to teach and punish those involved."

After all, privacy was important... He only did it every 8 hours, but that was just to check on how his family was doing, and "Haah... I'm so lucky to have you all in my life." Victor sighed and displayed a smile that made Ruby's heart melt.

"Wrong, Darling. We're the lucky ones to have you in our lives." Ruby smiled with the same smile.

Ruby spoke seriously. "Family should take care of each other, not exploit each other."

Kali physically recoiled at this scene. It was so sweet, so loving, that she felt physical disgust! She felt so disgusted that she
