"It's perfect," Laurie squealed as she finally stopped bouncing long enough to cover Heather's face with kisses. Then she started bouncing again. "Oh my god, oh my god! You bought 'us' jewelry." She grabbed Heather by the hand and drug her back towards the main house, apparently intending on making a big display, which was the one thing that Heathe

Christmas morning . . .

Everyone had awoken the next morning to the smell of cinnamon rolls, scrambled eggs and hash browns wafting up the stairs. Despite their claims the previous evening, all the girls were suddenly hungry again. Breakfast was lively and everyone seemed to be i

New Years Day . . .

It was another sad day when the girls had to pack their bags and head home. They had another week until school started again, but Heather and Alice were both going to be looking for jobs, so they wanted a head start. They thanked Jane's parents again for letting them used

"Listen, it just didn't occur to me. You've never really shown much interest in my previous love life, so I never brought it up."

"Your previous love life? I thought . . . I just never pictured someone like her."

"Listen. I'll tell you the whole story, but you have to relax. And just remember I love you, not her." Laurie glowed with joy, and was

Before they had all met, Heather had gotten together with Liz at a local coffee place and explained her concerns regarding Alice. She told Liz about how Alice had come to grips with her sexuality, her time down on the ranch, her issues dealing with a conservative family, and she also discussed what had happened with Jamie. This of course pissed Liz

Heather laughed. "Hey, she enjoys it and I thought it might be fun. I can't top what she did for MY birthday, so I thought I might at least try and make hers a little romantic. I'm expecting mayhem to ensue, though. I'm barely learning to navigate water when it isn't frozen," she said with a smile. Laurie and Jenny, who apparently was a certified I

"That's a good girl," Liz said. She released Alice's hands, but the younger girl seemed too nervous to drop them. Liz took a step back. She seemed transformed in Alice's eyes. She was more than a biker chick with pale eyes and pale hair. She was a goddess . . . a power to be reckoned with. She started to speak again.
