that time, she must have been residing in her pack, and even if she was visiting the capital, she wouldn't was a little astonished. As soon as Adela entered the palace, someone helped her behind the scenes. I tried to recall the most obvious suspect, but my mind was muddled for the time being. Since Rufus became the lycan king, no one has had the courage to play dirty tricks on him. Alina is the most likely suspect. But she is imprisoned in the dungeon and has no means of

I sat at my desk and massaged my temples. Too many issues had bothered me lately, and each one of them was responsible for my current headache.

The vampires had managed to infiltrate the werewolf pack, and had even murdered and manipulated an Alpha for a long time, but no one had noticed it.

Such a serious matter didn't come to light until a few days ago. The situation had become graver than expected.

What was more annoying was that even though I was carrying out the investigations myself, I couldn't pinpoint the purpose of the vampires right now.

As a result, my only option was to declare curfew across the entire country, strengthen patrols and investigate suspicious people.

Chapter 1093 Food Was Terrible

Rufus' POV:

As usual, Adela brought dinner for me. She would prepare something different each time, and she had never served me soup again. It seemed that my sudden burst of temper that day had scarred her.

"Your Majesty, please try this beef stew. I made it myself." Adela's voice was overly sweet as she set the dish and table ware in front of me.

Besides the stew, there was also a small array of exquisite pastries. I eyed them blankly, vaguely thinking that they were all my favorite. My restless heart slowed its pace. Even though Adela was weak, she was earnest. She must have studied the things that I liked in order to cater to me better.

Maybe Omar was right, and I should be more patient. Adela was my destined mate, after all, brought to me by the Moon Goddess herself. Maybe I just wasn't used to having her around yet, just as Omar had said.

Rufus' POV:

The girl's presence immediately calmed my pouncing head. Even my soul felt warm just by having her close.

A faint voice inside my head told me that it was time to wake up.

And so, I opened my eyes, only to flinch and squint from the bright light that flooded the room. It took me a while to finally get adjusted and take in my surroundings.

The clock on the wall said that it was just a little after eight in the morning. I had no idea how it happened, but I was back in my former palace. Despite my slight confusion, I felt refreshed and at peace for the first time in as long as I could remember.

Chapter 1095 Focus On The Important

Rufus's POV:

"Rufus, you are distracted," the she-wolf whispered teasingly in my ears. She naughtily licked my earlobe with the tip of her tongue, immersing me in my dream again.

An irresistible desire seemed to be burning in my lower belly. Unable to withstand this fire, my d*ck stood up straight, as if it would tear through my underwear in the next second.

Her small hand slid into my trousers and directly grasped and stroked my d*ck. The she-wolf smiled seductively and murmured, "Rufus, you're so hard." As she spoke, she lowered her head and sucked on my nipple.

I felt a tingling sensation in my private parts. I gasped loudly and curled my fingers into the bed sheet, a lust-filled groan escaping my lips.

I felt comfortable in my position and it seemed the she-wolf felt the same way, too. Allowing my p*nis to rub against her vagina, she twisted her waist with such flexibility. Her breasts swayed along to the rhythm with which we moved.

Adela's POV:

I never imagined that Rufus would suddenly get a headache and pass out. The thought that something was wrong with the food crossed my mind, terrifying me.

Title of the document

But later, I discovered that Rufus only had a headache, and there was no sign of food poisoning, so I felt greatly relieved. I wanted to call the doctor, but Rufus quickly reined himself in and fell asleep.

Rufus' POV:

My mind was a complete mess, my clothes damp with my sweat. That dream just now felt so real that I almost believe it had really happened.

Title of the document

And, to my utter frustration, as I tried to comb back to the details of the dream, I was hit by another memory block. I couldn't remember anything. All I knew was that my heart was beating furiously from the desire coursing through my veins, and that I was at the very end of my tether.

I was taken aback by the sound of a child's voice. I turned around and saw a gorgeous little girl standing in the doorway. Her white dress and lustrous blond curls made her look like a cherub.

She looked anything but angelic at the moment, though. The little one stood with her hands akimbo, her teeth bared as she glared at me in unmistakable animosity.

Crystal's POV:

I was furious. I was playing with Beryl at the royal kindergarten, when Laura called and said that Adela was pestering Rufus again. So, I persuaded Beryl to come search for him with me. As a result, I arrived at that scene.

Title of the document

If I had reached a little late, the shameless couple would probably have started having sex.
