Chapter 801 Cajole His Wife

Rufus' POV:

I felt a headache coming on, but I had no choice. It wasn't easy for Sylvia to find something that she would enjoy, and I didn't want to disappoint her.

Rufus' POV:

The speed of the white wolf surprised me. She seized the opportunity and bolted down the corridor. When she was about to reach the stairway, I instantly transformed into a wolf and pounced on her, knocking her head to the floor. Then I bit the back of her neck and dragged her back to the room.

Frustrated, the white wolf flopped helplessly onto the carpet. A few wisps of her red hair on her head drooped. She didn't look as lively and energetic as before.

After assuming my human form, I locked the door behind me. I lifted the shackles on the ground to have a look and saw the wolf's skinny legs.

Sylvia's POV:

Rufus stood up as well and pulled up my collar that had slipped down my shoulder. "What is it?" he asked softly. "This time, I returned to the pack and obtained my mother's inheritance, but many things are still to be tested. A crystal ball is one of the things included in the inheritance. With the ball, I can look into the past and present of any given individual. I want to try if I could see Leonard again."

As I spoke, I hauled Rufus out of bed and into the study. It was a separate room attached to the bedroom and as big as the latter. In it was an enormous bookshelf packed with books that reached all the way up to the ceiling. At night, the warm yellow wall lamps that hung from the edge of each shelf cast a cozy glow. On the large desk sat Rufus' unfinished documents.

With bare feet, I walked across the study and reached into a drawer for a sheet of paper and a pen. After dragging Rufus over to the leather chair, I perched on his legs while writing down the things I needed.

Blair was also terrified of Noreen. When he realized that she had probably come to Sylvia again, he finally stopped joking and told me everything Sylvia had done. If I looked things from Sylvia's point of view, her behavior was actually quite understandable.

She had gone to the black market to find someone powerful to learn more about witchcraft, and then returned to her pack to obtain her late mother's inheritance. All these incidents were based on the fact that she wanted to awaken her power as a witch after learning that her mother was once a witch. I could totally understand that.

What puzzled me was that she seemed to be in a rush to finish these tasks, and she hid it all from me.

"I don't know why she is keeping it from you. Maybe she is afraid that you won't like it." Blair's lips quirked up and he laughed gloatingly.

Chapter 807 The Crystal Ball

Sylvia's POV:

I swayed freely in front of Rufus, holding the purple crystal ball in my palm. "Look, I spent the whole afternoon making this. I was waiting for you to come back so you could see it."

Title of the document

Rufus asked in surprise, "You made it that quick? How well did that go?"

"I don't know. I haven't tested it out yet." I was giddy with excitement. If I succeed, I could learn my mother's love story with Leonard. Oh, right, I totally forgot that Leonard had lost his memory regarding that part, so he didn't remember my mother.

Hearing him say that just amused me. Rufus was so sweet and considerate. He always paid attention to my feelings even though it wasn’t really a big deal.

“It’s okay. Even though Leonard didn’t say it often, he actually loved Alina very much. I’ve always known that.” I smiled. “That doesn’t mean he didn’t love me, though.” I didn’t actually mind it. Even though I wasn’t that important to Leonard, I could totally understand it.

Rufus' POV:

The scene on the crystal ball shocked me to my core.

Title of the document

I actually doubted Alina once, but Sylvia kept telling me that no matter how menacing a person was, they would never cross the bottom line of K*lling their own parents. She believed that Alina was no exception and that she wouldn't go as far as to murder her father. After all, Leonard had raised her, and he loved her so much.
