Chapter 811 Knight's Love

Alina's POV:

By the time dawn broke on the horizon, I had already freshened up.

Title of the document

Outside the room stood a row of servants carrying all the things needed for the Alpha Ceremony.

The crown, made of pure gold and designed like a peacock's tail, was recently unearthed from the pack's museum. The feather designs, among other details, were realistically carved. When I was born, the best craftsman in the pack crafted this for me to wear on the day I became the Alpha. It was also a great blessing from my father.

I touched the ruby on the crown. Thinking of my father, my heart suddenly stopped.

It was a pity that my father wasn't around to watch me take over his position.

Alina's POV:

Warren became very chatty when Flora was mentioned. But I was suddenly bored. So I excused myself, saying that I was tired. Then, I asked him to leave.

The make-up artist helped me fix my makeup and left too. I sat alone on the sofa in a daze. My breathing was the only sound in the empty room.

The sun came up gradually, and the area where the light filtered into the room became progressively wider. The dust motes in the air looked like flying moths.

I reached out to catch the dust as I did in childhood, but I was still only met with air.

Alina's POV:

As I watched Rufus and Sylvia, who had suddenly appeared in front of me, I subconsciously touched the ring I'd just worn. I was inexplicably flustered all of a sudden.

Every time I saw Sylvia, something bad happened. Besides, she and Rufus were eyeing me very aggressively. They didn't seem to be here to celebrate the ceremony.

I forced a smile and tried to look calm. "Prince Rufus, what suddenly brings you here? And your mate..."

Speaking of Sylvia, I paused and then chose the word mate because I really didn't want to mention the name that made me instinctively sick.

Rufus was still so handsome. It would be better if he didn't speak. Every time he opened his mouth, I wished he could have just been a dumb handsome man.

I knew that I was completely doomed this time. I would lose everything—everything!

It wasn’t until I heard a familiar female voice that I came back to my senses. She was calling me crazy!

With tears streaming down my face, I looked at Flora, who had cursed me just now. Her cheeks were as ruddy as a ripe apple, and she held her round belly calmly. Warren stood in front of her protectively, eyeing me in disgust.

Chapter 817 Chaos

Sylvia's POV:

I refrained from saying anything while Alina was busy lashing out. In fact, I even felt a little strangely relieved. Never before had I believed that I could keep this secret forever. If the opportunity now presented itself, it might be best for me to take it. If they found out that I was a witch, it might actually make it easier for me to leave in the future.
