Chapter 821 Repentance

Sylvia's POV:

Both Alina and Blair were locked up in dungeons, but their living conditions were vastly different. I heard from Rufus that Blair still had access to food and drinks in his cell, as well as books and games to K*ll time. People who didn't know about his situation might've thought he was simply on vacation.

Chapter 822 Gossip Behind the Master's Back

Sylvia's POV:

After leaving the dungeon, I set out towards the pack's castle. Rufus said he would wait for me there.

Title of the document

Countless rose manors surrounded the castle, all built by Leonard when he was still alive. Like my mother, he was fond of roses.

When Leonard didn't have to work, he often retreated to the manors. When we visited the pack last time, he specially arranged for me and Rufus to live in a white rose manor, next to the manor he usually lived in. Back then, he would come to visit us all the time.

Sylvia's POV:

"When will you get married?" I curiously asked Flora. "Soon. I originally planned on holding a wedding after I give birth. Then, I'll have the perfect figure to wear a beautiful wedding dress. Anyway... we now decide to hold the ceremony early." Flora's eyes lit up in excitement as she touched her belly. "I can't wait to see the baby, and I want to hold a wedding as soon as possible."

"Are you sure Warren is your Mr. Right? Have you made up your mind?" I tilted my head to the side and flashed her a playful smirk. "I remember hearing someone say that even if Warren was the last werewolf in the whole world, she would rather die than marry him."

Flora's cheeks instantly flushed bright red. "I've made up my mind. Besides, I'm pregnant now. What else can I do?" Seeing how shy she looked, I just chuckled and nodded. "That's right. Now that you two are going to have a baby, you can only put up with it."

Chapter 826 Warren Took Over The Position Of Alpha

Sylvia's POV:

Warren was shaken up. "But I never once thought that the position would be mine, nor have I ever dreamed of seizing it. Besides, the task is so intricately heavy that I doubt I would even survive the first week upon taking the position."

Title of the document

"No," Edwin interposed, "I understand where you're coming from, but what you think is wrong. The potential to lead is only a bonus a leader must possess; the principal ingredient the position comes with is the will of the people. You grew up with the pack being aware of your abilities and achievements, Warren. What I'm saying is that you're not a stranger to the pack. All things considered, I cannot argue that you're indeed more suitable for this position than Sylvia is. It's not just me who thinks so. I see eye to eye with Leonard," Edwin finished, sincerity apparent on his face.

I stood still and silent, curtailing my presence as much as possible. As Edwin capped his confidence for Warren, I nodded in agreement. There was nothing about what he told Warren that I could refute. Even if I chose to stay, I would still put Warren forward to succeed the position. Leonard had trained Warren to be his heir ever since he had probably started to talk. All those preparations he had gone through were done in anticipation for this day. As compared with me, Warren was a more suitable person to supersede as the pack's Alpha.

"Leonard had been training you as the successor to the spot and treated you like his own son. You may not come to acknowledge this yet, but you're simply not a knight tasked to just guard Alina. At least, not the way you think it is," Edwin added.

Owen drew a long sigh, but it was without words. He lifted his hand and offered Warren a gentle pat on the shoulder, as if to let him lay down the decision by himself.

I could tell that she was getting anxious. She probably thought that we really were going to sentence Harry to death. "In that case, tell us everything you know so we can prove Harry's innocence."

As expected, she began to waver. She wanted to say something but decided against it when she glanced at Rufus beside me.
