Thankfully, nothing happened the following day. Then Harry, who was gone for two days, suddenly turned up near the palace again. He looked ghastly pale and haggard. Rumors in the palace had that Sylvia would use Joanna as a scapegoat.

This would ultimately put Harry and Sylvia's friendship at stake. I told the guards to keep an eye on Harry and not let him in.

My gaze shifted to the person being pinned on the ground by Rufus, and I felt my heart ache. Even though I was already prepared for this, I still couldn't help but break down.

Maya looked flustered. She knelt on the ground and began spouting incoherent words.

Rufus took out the shackles and locked Maya's hands together. Then, he glared at her and coldly asked, "Do you still want to defend yourself?"

I was stunned when I heard what Rufus said. My eyes flew between Maya, who was lying face-down on the ground, and Rufus, who looked grim and cold. I didn't understand what he meant.

"This isn't Maya? Who is she then? Didn't Maya commit all those terrible acts because Noreen was controlling her?"

Rufus shook his head and stared at the person on the ground with unfathomable eyes. "Maya has been with me since she was only eight or nine years old. I am the one who is most familiar with her. Even though she is about my age, she has always treated me as her child, forever wanting to protect me and take care of me. When you came to the palace, she behaved the same way with you."

Rufus' POV:

"It's a good thing she's dead. She was useless to me even when she was alive. When I wanted to control Maya, I failed halfway, and my plan almost got ruined because of that. Luckily I still got Layla's identity as backup at that time, or I wouldn't have succeeded in this plan of mine," Noreen said.
