THREE LOTUS BLOOMS

Lucia

No matter how quiet Gabby was, she was, at the very least, reasonable. So I guess that forty-eight hours would be enough time for her to hear me head around what I'd done and be willing to talk about where we stood.

Right?

When I arrived at the house Friday night, I nervously waited on the front porch for her to answer my knock and text me to...I hoped to a much fun time as the last night that we'd had things and got back to our happy place. But when she opened the door, and I saw all of the luxury full of stuff, my stuff, my heart dropped. She was moving me out.

"Thank you for knocking and waiting, I appreciate that." Gabby told me before she stepped aside and ushered me in. Just two days ago, this had been my home, but now I felt like a visitor...an unwelcome one at that.

"Sure."

"Is this happening? We're going our separate ways?" I asked, looking down at the box marked 'Lucia's Books,' on the sofa before me.

"I think it's for the best. Your curse makes it so hard for me to think straight when you're around, and that's not like...I love you, but if I decide to forgive and forget, I want to be because I see what our future can be and decide that is something I can live without. Just having you standing in front of me now is making me second guess the decision and question why I haven't already forgiven you, and again, that's not fair."

"Gabby..."

"You want me to leave, Princess?"

"Don't do that!"

"Do what?" Ask a question?

"Look at me like that, call me 'Princess,' smell the way you smell! You're not giving fair, Lucia, how do you not see that?"

I can't control how I smell, just like you can't control the scent of honeysuckle you grow in the garden. I can't help how I look—how you and the I'm not that I'm just you. I don't know how else to look at you. I just do."

"This was a bad idea. I've packed all of your stuff, and someone will come to move it to the penthouse for you tomorrow. Your books are already in your car, and I made sure that they weren't damaged."

Gabby knew how much I loved to read, and the fact that she took special care when it came to my novels meant that she wasn't as done with me as she tried to let on. I wasn't here mastering the when she took this extra step to find the right boxes, and that was all for me.

"I can't blame not. Let me. Tell until we talk about the curse more. Please, Gabby. I'm so sorry that I broke your trust, and I know that it's going to take a miracle for me to gain it back, I believe in miracles, and I know you do too. We have to work at this. Even if I'm the only one doing the gifting, I can't give up on us yet."

I cautiously reached out my hand and breathed a sigh of relief when this beautiful woman took ally on the and took it. It might have been too much, too soon, but I missed the connection that we had, and I wanted it back more than anything else in the world right now. The open of my left hand buzzed themselves in her hair, and I felt my cock with her incredible scent.

With the placement of her head on my chest, I know she heard the pounding of my heart underneath. It made my horn fire brought me more excitement than the entire time I'd spent with Rachel, and I was an * for answering things so.

"I never thought you'd do this to us, Lucia. Never. And now, I don't know what to do or how to feel. I don't know what you do when your world stops spinning?" she asked, still in tears against my chest.

"I don't know, sweetheart. But I'll never hurt you like this again. I'll regain your trust and get us back to where we were. I'll never rest or pass or two years, so that you can see it's mate and thank you. Just give me this one chance. I'm begging you."

Gabby removed herself from my embrace and took a step back, creating some distance between us.

"I don't know if you deserve another chance, but I know that I deserve to love my mate by my side forever. So, we'll start all over from the beginning, and we'll try dating. I can't tell you how long it's going to take for me to move on, or you're going to have to be patient, but I still believe in us, as stupid as that is."

My wolf...Jackson, howled with joy in my mind as I closed the gap between our bodies and kissed Gabby with everything I had. She wasn't moving me out, she was moving me in, and I couldn't stop myself. The woman who held dominion over my every heartbeat still believed just as we could fix. It seemed that my consistent prayers over the last two days had paid off.

"I said we're dating, Lucia. You can't kiss a woman like that before you take her out for the first time. It's not even up through her tattoos and clothes."

"I know, and I'm sorry. Gabs. You're just so beautiful, and I love you so much. Thank you for doing this, you've literally saved my life because I don't think I could go on much longer without my girlfriend."

"Pause. I'm not your girlfriend. I thought I made that clear on Wednesday. I said we are dating, which means going out and spending time together. Besides Yuleka, we don't have a title, you have to earn that back."

"What? Who's ever heard of mates who weren't in a relationship? Boyfriend and girlfriend, amulet, husband and wife, that's how it goes. "I said.

"Maybe, but those are extenuating circumstances, and you put your as somewhere it didn't belong. Now we have to make adjustments, take it or leave it, Lucia."

"This is crazy, Gabby. You're mine, the Moon Goddess made you for me and only me, what are you trying to prove here?"

"I'm not trying to prove anything. You already know that what you did was wrong and that it ruined what we had, and you know that we're being somewhat gone me the ability to forgive you right away. I'm not trying to be difficult, I'm not. I just need you to know me that you're worthy of me succeeding myself to you, that's all."

"I guess. Since we're only dating each other, I don't see what the big deal is for us to have a title, but whatever makes you happy, I'll be."

"I never said I was only dating you."

"What?"

"Would you stop yelling? I have a headache." Gabby said as she walked into the kitchen.

"You're dating someone else, and I'm getting ticked out? How is that fair?" I asked when I followed behind.

"I'm not sleeping with Beau, we had lunch. And dinner tomorrow. It was done after I broke things off with you, so I'm not doing anything wrong here."

"Beau? Beau?" I shut down and charged out the back door of the cottage, heading straight for the penthouse. I didn't want to hear anymore and knew that if Gabby kept going, I was going to lose up.

"Did you know that the dragon had a thing for Gabby? What the fk. Can't find now she's dating him?" I texted Chris and Levi and scowled.

"What are you just say?"

"I said that Gabby is dating Black. He took her out for lunch this afternoon and asked her to dinner tomorrow. And she said yes! I'm going to fing murder him!"

"Gabby and Black are dating? Black. He took her out for lunch this afternoon and asked her to dinner tomorrow. And she said yes! I'm going to fing murder him!

"Whoa, calm down. You're getting yourself way worse! I wanted to you, Lu, but you're going to have to work harder than you ever have for this relationship. Put in the work."

"Did I really screw things up that bad that she's already looking for someone else?"

"Are you serious? Yes! You did! Sleeping with someone other than your mate is not a small thing. It's major."

"But what does she even see in him? He's a dragon, and probably a dk." I sat on the couch and said.

"Black is a dragon, so he's mysterious, he's not at all a dk, and Gabby shares this experience from the Bullbeds, and if that's not enough, if you ever talk to him, you'll immediately understand. The guy has got the gift of gab, and it's impressive," Cin replied.

"So he's talking her into doing st she probably doesn't want to do. That has to be it."

"Do you think Gabby is some clueless, helpless, damsel in distress? She's not stupid, Cin, and if she's hanging out with Blake, it's because she genuinely wants to. Maybe she wants to see what else is out there, and you can't blame her for that considering that you're the one that screwed up much about Maria, once, once, a month. You now that she's not to get some competition with him throwing his hat in the ring, but don't look at it like that. Let him know that he's the one with the competition. You're a damn Divine, act like it, and go get your girl back."

...

After I'd calmed down and took a shower, I headed back over to the cottage and again knocked on the door and waited for Gabby to answer.

"Are you done with your bedroom?" she asked when she opened the door.

"My mate is dating someone else. I think my reaction was warranted, given the circumstances. May I come in?"

She turned around and walked into the kitchen, where she'd opened a bottle of wine and had poured her way through half of it. I knew that I'd have a agony headache the next day, and it was probably why she had one earlier, so I context it and put it back in the cooler.

"I haven't done with that, Lucia."

"It's for the best, we both know it. What have you eaten today?"

"A patty melt from Celeste's and some grapes."

"Celeste's? You went out with Black to our favorite diner?" I asked, trying to contain my anger.

"Yes. It's casual enough to give off the friend vibe I was going for with great food. Where else would I go?"

"A trash heap seems like a better option, in my opinion," I mumbled while pulling food from the fridge.

"What are you making, and what makes you think I want you to make anything for me? I can take care of myself."

"I know you can, Princess. But this stash has been marinating for a few days and needs to be cooked before it goes bad. Is that alright?"

Of course. It was. Gabby loved red meat; she was a damn werewolf, she'd never turn down a steak.

"I see what you're doing. I want you to understand that," she replied as she reached around me and poked out her wine again. Obviously, she was going to sit down over this bottle, so I just prepared myself for how she would feel in the morning.

Gabby returned to the table, and as she fed her glass, her phone rang with an incoming FaceTime call.

"No. This isn't uncomfortable at all," she quietly said before answering.

"Hello, darlin'. You haven' a good night?"

"It's getting better. How about you?" Gabby replied with a smile. Jackson growled deep in my chest, making her lift her eyes from the screen and look at me.

"I'm sorry, I didn't mean to interrupt your evening. I just wanted to see those beautiful eyes of yours one last time before the night ended." Black answered.

"For fk's sake! Could you not talk to him with me standing right here? I don't want to hear this st," I yelled.

"Lucia Shine, I guess that's you in the background. Sorry to intrude, man, How you doin' tonight?" he heavily asked.

"Is this guy for real?"

"He's very friendly, so I'd say yeah, he's for real." Gabby sipped her wine and replied.

"I couldn't believe this. I had to be trapped in an episode of The Twilight Zone. I picked up the sheets and walked out the back door to the yard. It wasn't hot, but it's much either so out here and wait than inside hearing some other man sit with my mate.

While I waited, I pulled out my phone and called Matt. If anyone could help with this, it would be him.

"This is Matt, Matt! All I want to do is drive down there and challenge the guy, but I don't want to add any extra drama and stress to the already stressed up situation."

"Use this to your advantage, Lu. Blake is making Gabby happy in a way she's not quite ready to let go of yet. Once her heart heals, she'll be open to commitment again; you need to be patient."

"Why is he so fkg Stable?"

Matt laughed into the phone. he probably agreed, even if he didn't want to say it.

"So, I've been told. What if I have to share?" I don't know if I can."

"Then don't. There was a time I hated Tyson far more than you currently hate Blade, and I thought I'd never be able to share my mind and with gift with him. But he made my Tawny smile, and he made her happy, and to me, that was more important than the hate. And once I let go, I learned that Tyson wasn't as bad as I'd made him out to be. He was the perfect mate for Tawny, and I'm glad that I was able to see that before it was too late. Again, I'm still thrown the pitch where I stand my wife. It's mostly an hour commute and I'll given up four amazing kids for to share. I wouldn't change a thing. But if that's not how you see your situation playing out, then say something. Saying quiet has already gotten you into trouble once, don't make the same mistake twice."