Chapter 47 Her Plans

The hand that was against her skin was growing warmer. Ran Xueyi thought that if they were in the middle of a snowy land, she might not need a heater. His hand and body temperature alone was enough to warm her body up till her cheeks and ears reddened.

"W-we can't..." she muttered as she looked at Song Yu Han with wide eyes.

"Are you still angry at me because of what I did?" Song Yu Han looked at her with a quizzical look in his eyes. He paused his actions and waited.

"Of course not..." Ran Xueyi quickly dispelled any doubts that could grow within himself and continued to add, "I just think that everything is going too fast. Besides, I need to tell you something."

Song Yu Han got off on top of her and sat beside her. He narrowed his eyes and asked, "What is it?" Was she going to reject him? But his wife already said that she was no longer mad at him. Did she lie to him because she pitied him? Song Yu Han had several thoughts rolling in his mind within just a few seconds of silence.

Ran Xueyi shifted her position and also sat up. She silently stared at him, not knowing what he was thinking inside his head. After a long pause, she finally said, "Earlier, I told you I received a call from the clinic, right?"

Song Yu Han nodded his head. "Yes, and that's how you found the truth."

"That's right. But that wasn't everything."

Song Yu Han raised his head and a deep crease appeared on his forehead. He waited for her to finish speaking as her face told her that something wasn't right.

Ran Xueyi released a deep and long sigh as she uttered, "They told me the procedure failed." She took a pause and continued. "It seems that I am not pregnant. Are you disappointed?" she told him.

As far as Ran Xueyi knew, Song Yu Han must have wanted a child through artificial insemination for surrogacy. She didn't know the reason why her husband wanted to do it when he could just find a woman to marry and have her give birth to his child naturally. He had both the money and looks to make any woman agree to any of his demands. Yet, her husband, Song Yu Han, decided to go to a clinic and let the clinic keep his seeds.

Although she didn't want to force him to say his reasons as to why he wanted to do it, Ran Xueyi still wanted to know. Did he do it because of the same reason she had when she decided to go through an IUI? Ran Xueyi wondered if he was disappointed. He married her because she carried the seeds he let the clinic keep and yet, her womb didn't get any result. Will he change his mind about her?

Ran Xueyi was now a little bit afraid. She was upset at him because he lied to her and even deceived her into marriage because she received his seeds. However, now that even the seed that was implanted inside her womb didn't bloom, the thought of him being disappointed and leaving her scared her a bit.

After all, even Ran Xueyi felt a bit disappointed when she heard that it failed.

The pair of obsidian eyes that looked like two black diamonds slightly widened at her words before it narrowed. The next moment, he was right at her face, only a few inches away from her.

Ran Xueyi tensed up and caught her breath.

"I am," he echoed, his eyes never leaving hers. Ran Xueyi's heart was caught in her mouth as soon as his reply entered her ears. She blinked her eyes and frowned. But before she could say anything, she heard his husky and masculine voice speak again.

"I am disappointed. But not to the point that I will divorce you," his voice was unexpectedly calm and though he said that he was disappointed, any hint of it was not heard in his tone. "I am also saddened that we can't have our family sooner. But let's not think of this too negatively. We have a lot of time in our hands, we can still wish for a child if you want. But this time, no more clinics or artificial insemination."

Ran Xueyi gulped. Her mouth opened and then shut. She didn't know what to reply to him. She understood his meaning when he said there was no need for them to go to a clinic or go through the troublesome procedure of artificial insemination. The two of them could do it naturally without the help of science and they didn't have to worry about it failing. They could try no matter how many times, and if it fails, they will try again until they succeed.

However...

There was something else she had to tell him.

"There's another thing I haven't told you yet," said Ran Xueyi as she looked away from his burning gaze.

His eyes narrowed once again. He reached out his hand and gently grabbed her chin towards him so she couldn't turn her gaze away again and could only look at him. He pinched her chin until her eyebrows furrowed. "Say it, Xueyi," he whispered.

The mellowness of his voice had a hint of danger buried within it. Ran Xueyi felt fear, but she braced herself and stared back at those obsidian eyes that could enchant anyone like a siren stranded on land.

"I p-plan to postpone the pregnancy for now." Ran Xueyi dropped the bomb first. She continued to tell him what she had planned and make him understand what she wanted. "I'm returning to the entertainment industry and I know it would be selfish for me to do this to you. But just wait until I announce our marriage to the public, then we can plan for a child."

Life of an artist was never easy. Especially to those who wanted to start or restart their journey.

And Ran Xueyi wanted to restart her life with Song Yu Han while pursuing her dreams.

Chapter 48 A Devil's Whisper

Ran Xueyi was unsure whether Song Yu Han would agree to her plans. However, she didn't want to keep them from him. And so, she decided to come clean before any misunderstanding could grow.

"It's not that I don't want to have a child. Truly, I really want to have at least one or two. But..." Ran Xueyi looked down and sighed.

Song Yu Han suddenly patted her head after being too silent for a bit: "I know. You wouldn't have gone through that procedure if you really didn't want a child. And I understand why you must have felt this way right now."

Song Yu Han already read through the information that his special secretary had handed over to him. Ran Xueyi's information was in there. Of course, Song Yu Han also saw several pictures of the two lovers who deceived his wife.

Thinking about how Yang Baihua almost married his wife and would continue lying to her, Song Yu Han was filled with deep anger and disgust for Yang Baihua and his secretary. If he could, he would have already thrown them somewhere where no one could find them.

However, Song Yu Han wouldn't raise a hand and help Ran Xueyi unless necessary and she asks for it.

He knew that his wife was an independent woman, capable of anything if she put her mind into it. He wouldn't underestimate her abilities just because of her past.

"But what about you?" Ran Xueyi asked.

"I am not in a hurry and I can wait for you." Song Yu Han answered.

"And what if it'll take years?" Ran Xueyi frowned.

For her to climb up to the top of the entertainment world, it would probably take Ran Xueyi a few years.

"Even if it takes 10 years, 20 years. I can wait..." Song Yu Han didn't want her to worry about useless things. A child doesn't define their marriage. It will strengthen their relationship and make their lives even happier. However, Song Yu Han wouldn't force her.

Ran Xueyi sighed in relief.

Song Yu Han pinched her cheeks and said, "Go to sleep. I will wake you up when morning comes."

"What about you? Don't you need to sleep?" Ran Xueyi asked.

Song Yu Han shook his head. "I already had enough sleep earlier in the airplane."

"Alright."

After a few minutes, Ran Xueyi finally fell back to sleep. Seeing her eyes closed, Song Yu Han leaned over and kissed her on the forehead. He was being careful and gentle not to wake her up.

Song Yu Han shifted his gaze to the bedside table, his eyes lingered on his phone. Then, he put aside the reports in his hands and reached for his phone.

He called the old lady from his mother's clinic. The phone call was quickly answered by the other.

"Auntie Jiu, did I disturb your rest?" Song Yu Han's voice was cold yet there was a hint of gentleness in his tone.

The other side answered with a laugh. "Xiao Han, do you think this old lady will have time to rest when I'm working in a maternity clinic? Why did you call anyway?"

Song Yu Han heard the loud noises from the other side of the phone and guessed that a patient had arrived so he didn't prolong the conversation and said, "I called to ask for a favor. Can you take my sample from the clinic and send it back to me?"

"Why?" Aunt Jiu gave a slight start at the sudden request.

Previously, she was also quite surprised when Song Yu Han came to the clinic a month ago and asked to look for a surrogate mother for his child. At that time, Aunt Jiu was deeply saddened and disappointed, thinking that the young man gave up all hope to find true love and create a family because of what happened to his mother.

In the end, the old lady didn't stop him and even hoped that the child would bring happiness to him, but Song Yu Han suddenly changed his mind! Why did he ask for this favor...

"Did something happen? Are you alright? Xiao Han, if you don't feel good, your Uncle Zhan has time to accompany you to the hospital." Aunt Jiu was worried for him and even ignored the nurse, who was calling her over to the operating room.

"I'm alright and nothing happened. I just don't want to continue the surrogacy process anymore." Song Yu Han's answer was simple and clear.

After saying a few more assuring words and after he calmed Aunt Jiu, Song Yu Han hung up the call. However, instead of going back to read his reports, Song Yu Han dialed another number. The number belonged to his Special Assistant Guo.

Suddenly the entire room was plunged into coldness as their conversation continued. When the call ended, Special Assistant Guo, who was abruptly woken up by his boss's call, fell into a trance and wondered if he was being haunted by a vengeful ghost.

No, it wasn't a ghost. A devil whispered to his ears during the devil's hours!

The next day, Ran Xueyi had breakfast with Song Yu Han before she was ushered by Liu Ran to meet the broker who would handle everything for her to set up her company. Brokers have a very important role in the business world. They connect each businesses and businessmen and businesswomen together through them.

Of course, there are some brokers who couldn't resist money and thus, would only stick close to one person or two. They also cost a lot more than you think. One broker could amount to millions and some even tens of millions. There were also some cheaper brokers, but if you don't want to be scammed and given a useless connection, one must avoid them at all cost.

The broker that Liu Ran introduced to Ran Xueyi was called Celeste Chang. She's of Filipino-Chinese descent and has been in the brokering industry for five years now. But don't underestimate her just because she played in the industry for only five years because she already has several big shots in her lists of clients and has been in contact with them ever since.

When Ran Xueyi met Celeste Chang, she was in for a bit of a shock. Celeste was younger than she thought and a bit of a smaller height around 5'1.

And when they first saw each other, the first thing that Celeste said to her was, "I'm not a middle schooler."

Ran Xueyi wanted to laugh, but she couldn't. Not in front of the person in concern.

It was true that Celeste was small and really looked like she was a middle school student. But Ran Xueyi didn't look down on her. This woman was the one Liu Ran chose as her broker, of course, she should be quite useful.

"Nice to meet you... I am Ran Xueyi."
