Chapter 91 The Only One In The Dark

Silently observing, Sam saw the astonishment on John's face. He smiled with relief. 2

"That's a good idea," Sam praised Jake. It was his idea to give John the divorce agreement after all. 2

"Henry told me that John asked Nina to marry him. But she said she would only marry him as his legal wife. She couldn't have any relationship with him otherwise. Now that they have fallen in love with each other, it would be perfect. If we give the divorce agreement to John now and let him see who his wife is, they won't get divorced. They'll probably have a closer relationship in fact."

"You're right. Look, he didn't sign and he left with the divorce agreement." Sam's smile widened. He couldn't help but think about the future. 'It seems that I will have a grandkid soon.' 12

Chapter

Jake was happy to see Sam grin from ear to ear. This was soon replaced with worry though. What about Vivian's party?

"Sir, Vivian's birthday party is coming soon. Jessica has been trying to setup John and Vivian for some time now. If they find out that he's been married to Nina, I'm sure there'll be some problems."

"How can there be any problems? Who will question me? I chose Nina as my son's wife." Sam was very satisfied with his daughter-in-law.

"Jessica attaches great importance to John's marriage. She's wanted him to get married to someone of equal social status and she's been pushing for him to marry Vivian. Ye family also values family background. If they find out about John and Nina's marriage, I'm afraid they will ridicule her."

“Indeed, they are not from families of equal social rank. But it’s not that Nina doesn’t deserve John, but the opposite. Ye family can’t hold a candle to Nina’s family. Vivian — Chapter was just a mistress’s daughter before she was accepted by her family.” Sam snorted. He looked down on mistresses most of all. 8

Jake didn’t know much about Nina’s family background, so he wanted to pry a little more.

“Sir, Nina is from C Island, where everyone is either rich or noble, but our family is far beyond that. So why does our family not match up to hers?”

“Who said that Nina is just from some ordinary family in C Island? She is a princess.” Sam smiled proudly. He was so pleased with the fact that he actually managed to get her as his daughter-in-law. 17

‘Now let’s see if John can really make Nina his real wife.’

Back at the North Yard, John leaned against the sofa and lit a cigarette.

He exhaled a cloud of smoke while staring in anguish at the divorce agreement on the table. Right beside it was Nina’s self-criticism report.

Chapter

The handwriting on the two separate documents were exactly the same. It was undeniably Nina’s.

Was Nina really his wife?

He was shocked.

It was so surreal that it felt like he wasn’t even in his body. He felt like he was watching someone else’s life. John wasn’t sure whether to be happy or sad.

His beloved little girl was his wife so it had to be worth celebrating, right?

He didn’t know so there was no possible way that he could have fulfilled his duty as a husband. He stopped every time and looking back, regretted it.

What was worse was that he had insulted her husband on multiple occasions. I

What did he say?

A eunuch? Impotent? Something wrong with his brain? Something wrong with his mind? Something wrong with his body? 47 He was just insulting himself, right? He was

Chapter furious.12

He puffed the cigarette, then threw it on the floor and stomped on it, as if he was stepping on his own face. He was so upset with himself.

What the hell was going on?

If he had known that Nina was his wife, she could have been pregnant by now.24

Then he puffed out a mouthful of smoke and picked up the self-criticism report and the divorce agreement. After comparing the two signatures, he was still slightly in doubt. He had to clear it all up today.

He called Sam and asked, "Dad, who is my wife?" It was the first time that he called his father in two years.

"Nina, the girl who you're with all the time. She is 20 years old, the most beautiful girl in L University and majors in psychology. Are you regretting it? Do you not want a divorce? You were the one who wanted the divorce. Well I've given the divorce agreement to you so you can get it done now."

John hung up the phone.

He couldn't listen to Sam's smug voice anymore.

Helen entered the living room with a cup of coffee. It was strange seeing John at the North Yard around noon. Most days he'd stay at the company and only come back home at night.

She didn't know what happened to John. He looked worried.

"Mr. Shi, would you like a cup of coffee?" Helen bent down to put the coffee on the table and happened to see the divorce agreement. She was so scared that her hand trembled, almost spilling the coffee.

"Mr. Shi, why do you have a divorce agreement?" Helen put down the coffee in a hurry, grabbed the divorce agreement and held it in her hands. 'I If Mrs. Shi has done anything to make you angry, you have to forgive her. She is still a young girl. It's inevitable that she'd have a little bit of a temper. You should try to persuade her to stay. You can't get divorced on a whim."

Listening to Helen's earnest words, he keenly took note of some useful information. Helen said that she was young. Was she referring to Nina?

"Do you know that Nina is my wife?" With a hint of confusion, he stared straight at Helen. He could feel his anger about to explode. 3

"Yes, I know," Helen replied sincerely. She didn't notice that John was getting angry.

"Why didn't you tell me?" His cold voice was low and gloomy. Helen had taken care of him for more than ten years and had always been hard-working. She was getting old these days so he found it in himself to restrain his anger. 2

Helen was the one who was confused now. "Mr. Shi, I thought you knew. I've called her Mrs. Shi for so long and you've never objected.

I thought you knew she is your wife so you let me call her Mrs. Shi."

John was stunned. Was it his fault? 8

At this moment, Adrian rushed to the North Yard with Henry, who was wearing a patient gown. Adrian came seeking some form of justice for Henry. However, as soon as they stepped into the living room, they felt that there was something wrong.

Seeing them enter, Helen looked as if she saw her savior. She grabbed the divorce agreement and went to ask for help. 'I ML Song and Mr. Yet you came at the right time. Please persuade Mr. Shi not to divorce Mrs.

Shi."

"Divorce?" They were stunned.

Adrian asked, "Mr. Shi, when did you get married?"

Henry took the divorce agreement and knew it was from Sam. He didn't know what to do.

"Mr. Shi, has your father agreed to you divorcing Ms. LUI?" 2

How could Sam give John the divorce papers?

"Ms. Lu?" A cruel smile sprawled across John's face as if he just thought of something dastardly.

"Well..." Henry froze. He felt like something was wrong.12

"Do you also know that Nina is my wife?" 5

It seemed absolutely everyone knew that Nina was his wife except for himself. 15

Chapter 92 This Is The Person I Love

Adrian wanted nothing more than justice for Henry. Henry had been in a car accident a few days ago and John's reward was to give him a pile of work to do.

As Henry's new boss, he thought it was necessary to ease Henry's workload, so he brought him here from the hospital.

He certainly wasn't expecting to be thrown into some massive secret.

John was married?

He hadn't heard about any of this from anyone or the media so they were definitely hiding it.

The most important point was that the only girl who beat John was the same girl who had married him.

It was truly something else. It was fate!

“Is Nina really your wife? No wonder you asked me to call her Mrs. Shi. Did you know she is Mr. Shi’s wife?” Adrian looked at Henry with a playful smile, which just made things worse.

“Adrian!” Henry barked.

He turned his head mechanically to look at Adrian, who was reveling in his misfortune. His face turned red as he suppressed the impulse to hit Adrian.

Out of the corner of his eye, he saw John frown. His throat dried up as he envisaged his impending doom.

“Mr. Shi, please let me explain. In fact, I...”

“What?” John’s eyes darkened as his voice blared through the room. His enraged figure sent shivers down everyone’s spine.

How dare Henry even try to explain? What did he know?

Henry’s heart trembled. Whether he explained everything or not, it wouldn’t end well. He just needed John to know that it wasn’t his fault.

“Mr. Shi, in fact, I wanted to tell you so many times that Ms. Lu is your wife, but every time I would say something, you interrupted me and told me to keep quiet. I just need you to know that. I’ll accept whatever punishment you see fit.” Henry braced himself and bent down, letting out a heavy sigh. His future lay in the hands of John now.

John narrowed his sharp eyes and thought about all this carefully. It seemed that every time Henry tried to talk about Nina, John would tell him to shut up.

“Get out! You’re not getting paid this year.”

1 It doesn’t matter. It was still Henry’s fault!’ John thought.18

“Right away.” Henry nodded and turned away quickly. 7

Turning around, he felt tears start to fill his eyes. This whole year was a waste. 1

“Well, Mr. Shi, I’m leaving now as well.” Adrian thought it was better for him to leave as well, so he turned around and caught up with Henry. 5

As soon as the two of them came out, they met the assistant who sent Nina back to L University. As soon as she saw Henry, she grabbed his arm and said grievously, “Mr. Yet why didn’t you tell me that Ms. Lu is not Mr. Shi’s legal wife? I almost couldn’t control myself when I heard it today. I could have lost my job or even my life. Is that what you wanted?”

“Ms. Lu is Mr. Shi’s legal wife,” Henry said seriously. 2

“Then what happened today?”

“It’s just that both of them didn’t know the truth. Well Mr. Shi just found out now.” 7 John found out, but at what cost?

Being John’s assistant was really frightening. In the noon, she got to know that John and Nina had their respective partners. Not long after, the situation changed. Then she learned that they were a couple, but they didn’t even know.

It was quite an intense situation with a lot to deal with.

Looking at the depressed look on Henry’s face, the assistant assumed that something must have happened inside. She asked gingerly, “What’s wrong? Should I go in and tell Mr. Shi that I have sent Mrs. Shi back to school safely?”

“Of course you have to go. Remember, things concerning Mrs. Shi are always urgent and of the utmost importance. You have to make them top priorities.” This was always what he did when he still worked for John. 4

“Okay, I’ll go.” The assistant looked at Henry gratefully and then walked inside.

In fact, there was another thing that Henry wanted to remind her about. John was in an awful mood now, so she better be cautious about what she said.

In Adrian's mind, Henry was just reluctant to leave. 'I didn't expect you to have that type of unique taste in women,' he said.

Henry pressed his lips and glared at Adrian. He didn't understand why Adrian always targeted him. With every jab and dig, it always had something to do with women.

The weird thing was that he didn't even have a woman. 4

And on the other hand, Adrian was the one with different women every night.

The more Henry thought about it, the angrier he got. He sneered and said, "Different people like different things."

Then he turned around and left, turning his back on Adrian.

"Hey..." Adrian's leisurely standing posture gradually changed, with the cheeky smile quickly disappearing. A flash of panic flooded his body, making him frown. He shouted at the back of Henry, 'Do you really like that female assistant?'"

Henry stopped for a moment and left angrily.

Seeing that he didn't answer, Adrian followed after him intently. He put one hand on Henry's shoulder, raised his eyebrows and whistled, "I don't think that female assistant is any good. How about I introduce some women to you. I'll find someone that deserves to be with you. That assistant doesn't deserve you."

Henry's face darkened. He shook off Adrian's arm and continued marching off.

"I'm just being honest. She really doesn't deserve you!" Adrian stopped and shouted out. He watched Henry drive away with a playful smile.

As the car disappeared on the winding road, the playfulness on his face seemed to be nailed, stiff and unnatural. 8

At last, it disappeared and he soon became upset. Adrian picked up his mobile phone and called his own woman, and then drove away as well.

He began flirting with other women again.¹³

Henry sat in Adrian's company, with his head buried in the documents with gauze on his forehead. His face was as dark as ink.

The office was barren, with only a mountain of documents to keep him company.

Chapter

The quieter it was, the more amplified the surroundings became.

Henry felt his hand holding the phone, trembling.

A chat box from Adrian popped up. Adrian had sent him dozens of pictures of beautiful women, and told him to choose one of them.

His fingertips turned white slightly. After hesitating for a while, he picked up a blurry photo from the photo album. It was difficult to tell the gender of the person in the photo, but the only clear thing was the long black hair and the most attractive pair of eyes.

After sending the photo, Henry typed, "This is the person I love."

The smile on Adrian's face froze when he received the reply. He withdrew his hand from the beautiful woman's shoulder and clicked on the photo. The photo was so blurry that the face could not be seen clearly, but the long black straight hair made him think that Henry did have a woman after all.

"Adrian! Come on!" The beautiful woman wrapped her arms around his waist like a snake, but Adrian still pushed her away. "Get out!" he ordered. ⁹

Embarrassed, she stood up reluctantly. Before she left, she stamped her foot and said sarcastically, "I've heard that you've got sexual dysfunction and you only hug women but do nothing else. I didn't expect it to be true." ¹⁰

"Didn't you hear me? Get out!"

Chapter 93 Tear Up The Divorce Agreement

Adrian and Henry left together. The assistant also left after reporting.

It became peaceful again in the North Yard.

Although John looked calm, his heart was still hammering in his chest.

His eyes were focused on the ashtray in front of him, which was almost full of cigarette butts, indicating that John had smoked a lot today. And the ashes were scattered on the table, which looked a little unpleasant.

John had lived the past thirty years of his life in a place he had built for himself. He was never out of place. He was like an arrogant emperor no one dared to disobey. The people around him always tried their best to please him, and no one had the guts to act superior in front of him.

But one day, he met a girl who was not afraid of him at all. A girl who rushed into his place, broke some of his constraints, as well as his peaceful life

Since then, he had always thought of making Nina his woman.

But fate must be playing him because it turned out that Nina was his wife he had never met before.

If he had known this earlier, he would have brought her to the North Yard and kept her at home so she could never get away. Just imagining that he would be living with Nina every day made him smile.

Therefore, he made up his mind that his wife should live in the North Yard.

With this thought, he put out the last cigarette and was about to stand up when his eyes fell on the divorce papers.

In an instant, his mood shifted and his face darkened.

How could she want to divorce him?

No way!

So, he sat back again and flipped through the divorce papers to read every page, and stopped when he saw the term which stated that she would need to compensate him twenty million if she had an extramarital affair.

An evil glint crossed his dark eyes as he stared at this term, knowing that he could use this to make Nina stay with him. This was the perfect time for him to be a real man and fulfil his responsibility as a husband.

After memorizing all the contents of the divorce agreement, he slowly tore it up. The corners of his mouth rose.

By the time the divorce papers were torn into pieces, his face was already full of smile. He was confident that Nina would become his woman.

'It's impossible for us to divorce.'

Meanwhile, Helen, who had been observing secretly, saw how John tore up the divorce papers. After breathing a sigh of relief, she turned around to tell Sam the good news. 5

Sam, who was on the other end of the phone, almost laughed himself to death. Jake was so frightened that he immediately called the family doctor, only to find out that it was just a false alarm.

As soon as the call ended, Helen looked at the clock and rushed to John.

"Mr. Shi, it's already two o'clock."

John glanced at his watch and smiled when he remembered what day it was. "Today is Wednesday. I'm not going to work."

He had to teach at L University every Wednesday afternoon, so he would go there instead of going to work.

Besides, he needed to teach his wife a lesson.10

“Not going to work?” Helen’s brows furrowed in confusion when she heard this. Wasn’t John a workaholic? How come he didn’t want to work today? If he wasn’t going to work/ could it be...

“Mr. Shi, are you going to take Mrs. Shi to the North Yard?”

Without hesitation, John replied, “Yes.” He changed his clothes and went straight to the university. I

Today, the classroom was full of students.

There were only a few male students, and most of them were girls, which made Nina raise her brows.

They were all well-dressed and some of them were even refining their makeup while looking at the compact mirrors in their hands. It was as if they were contestants in a beauty contest.

What was going on?

Her eyes surveyed the room but didn’t find any vacant seat.

Luckily, one of her male classmates stood up from the crowd with a friendly smile. He waived at her and pointed at the empty seat beside him.

Il Nina, here, here ...Il

Looking at the direction where the voice came from, Nina realized that this guy was the same guy who had helped her in the elective class, so she smiled back and nodded to greet him.

It was not hard to understand what he meant when she saw the empty seat beside him.13

Therefore, she decided to walk towards the empty seat. But as she walked, the girls threw unfriendly glances at her and some even whispered.

“Why is she here? People say she is aloof and looks down upon all boys. Why does she attend this course?”

“It’s not that she looks down upon boys. She just chooses boys who she thinks are good enough. Look at the boys she has been with. Albert used to stay with her and now James is often seen with her.”

“Then she must have heard that the teacher of this course is handsome, so she came here. What a shame! We came here because we’re really interested with this subject.”

They laughed like the person they were talking about wasn’t there.

Instead of arguing with them, Nina turned a deaf ear and stayed calm. She didn’t stop walking until she heard a completely different voice.

“How didn’t you know that Nina also chose this course? I never thought that the students of L University are so shameless.”

A girl interrupted the conversation. She was wearing a sophisticated floral dress, which emphasized her perfect figure and her fair skin.

A few strands of her curly hair were gently swaying in the breeze, and every time she moved; her fragrance smelled.

Her curly eyelashes trembled slightly when her lips formed into a smile.

By just looking at her side profile, Nina could already tell that she was beautiful, and she felt her elegance. When she turned to Nina, her almond eyes were filled with calmness and confidence. 2

However, the girls looked at her with resentment for interrupting their fun.

“Who is she? What did she mean by saying that? Did Nina choose this course?”

“Yes, she did.”

The girl who had been whispering shut up and dared not to speak again.

“You’re not from L University?” Based on what she had said, Nina easily figured out she was not from L University. 2

With a smile, the girl stood up and nodded at Nina. “I’m Emma Lin, a junior student from L Communication University.”

“Emma?” As far as she could remember, she didn’t know such a person. In front of a stranger, Nina was a little cold and indifferent.

“Emma? The straight-A student?”

“Is she really Emma? The talented girl? She looks more beautiful in person than on TV.”

Through what other people had said, Nina had a hunch who Emma was, so she smiled back at her. It l’rn Nina Lur a sophomore majoring in psychology.”

“I’m here for you.” Emma took out a mobile phone and a handwritten letter from her light green bag and handed them to Nina. “This is what Michelle asked me to give to you. She gave me your phone number, but I couldn’t contact you. So I had to wait for you in the classroom.” I

Looking at the phone case with a pattern of a pink rabbit, Nina knew that it was Michelle’s phone. She reached out her hand and took it.

Just as she was about to ask why, John came into the classroom, causing a commotion.¹⁰

Chapter 94 Punishment

Seeing the teacher coming, the students sat down at once. Emma also sat down and Nina went to an empty seat.

The boy who saved a seat for her blushed and scratched his head when he saw Nina walking towards him.

As soon as Nina reached the seat, she realized that all the boys in her class were gathered here. She sat in the middle, which seemed a little conspicuous.

People began to gossip about her again.

“Hello, campus belle. My name is Colin Jiang, from chemistry department.” It was already the second time that he talked to the campus belle, but he still trembled in front of her.

Not knowing how to calm him down, Nina slightly nodded at him and smiled. "Thank you for saving a seat for me, and also for helping me last time. The teacher promised not to deduct your credits."

In exchange of it was a condition which might put her in danger.

It was indeed dangerous for her to accompany John to his fiancée's birthday party. Vivian would definitely make things difficult for her.

"NO need to deduct credits? Thank you, campus belle. I don't know how to repay you." Colin Jiang became more embarrassed that he didn't dare to look at Nina's face.

"No, you don't have to repay me. This is what I should do. After all, the teacher wanted to deduct your credits because of me." The truth was, Nina didn't want anyone to help her at all. It was really troublesome to owe someone a favor.

And it seemed like once you had one, it would never stop. Troubles came one after another.

"Nina." The moment John saw her in a crowd of boys, a flame of anger rose in his heart.

"Yes?" Nina's voice pierced through the whispering crowd and made the whole classroom quiet.

"Didn't you know that the class is about to begin? What are you guys talking about?" Then he cast a sharp glance at Nina. His eyes were like cold knives that could pierce her. 5

Did I speak so loud?'

No, she had been talking in a low voice. The other people's whispers were even louder than her.

What was wrong with John? Did he deliberately make trouble for her?

Just this noon, he made a scene at the restaurant, and now he was doing it again. 3

Although Nina's eyes were filled with resentment, she couldn't argue with him in class so she tried her best to be tolerant.¹⁴

"I'm sorry, sir. I'll punish myself by standing outside the classroom." Anyway, she didn't want to take John's course. She would rather get herself tired from standing for a long time than staying in his class.

The classroom was in an uproar. They thought how Nina had the guts even asked for a punishment by herself. The campus belle was really different.

"Punishing yourself by standing outside?" As smart as he was, John figured out that she just didn't want to take this class. No one could skip his class. Especially her.

"Yes, sir." A smile appeared on John's face when he heard Nina's resolute answer.

Since she wanted to be punished, he decided to satisfy her.

"Stand by the platform." ⁶

"Platform?" Needless to say, Nina was stunned, so she looked at him in confusion. ⁹

If that was the case, then she would rather sit in the class and listen to his discussion.

Their eyes locked; as if they were two armies in a stalemate. John had always been calm and expressionless, but a simple glance from him could kill a person.

On the other hand, Nina didn't have such a strong aura. Besides, this was a class, so she had to keep a low profile. In this room, John was a teacher while she was just a mere student.

The platform was built on a half-meter high concrete platform. If one walked up, they had to cross two stairs. John, who was 1.9 meter in height, stood on the platform, facing the students. Nina, who was less than 1.7 meters, stood below the platform, which made her look shorten

Even when she spoke, she had to raise her head to see the complacent face of John. Seeing Nina standing there,

John looked away and began the class. In the process, he stood at the edge of the concrete platform from time to time, and his tall figure reflected a huge shadow, covering Nina's face.

It made Nina feel that he was putting pressure on her on purpose, and she got really annoyed. Her face didn't show any emotion, but she was already cursing him in her mind.

He was so domineering that he l d better be alone all his life.

After class, Nina thought she could finally return to her seat. To her dismay, before walking out of the classroom, John ordered, "You should also stand there until the next class is over."

Hearing this made Nina so angry that she wanted to punch him in the face. She glared at him and clenched her fists.

But this was school, and the students who beat their teachers would break the school rules. That was why she couldn't even lay a finger on him, no matter how much she wanted to beat him up. I

"Yes, sir." If he was not a teacher, she would beat him.

'John. Just wait and see!

I will make you pay for what did you to me!' 5

John found another weakness of his little girl, which was that she always maintained proper respect for teachers.

"See you next class." John walked out of the classroom while staring at her.

This was the punishment for her asking for a divorce.²⁹

When John left, Colin Jiang immediately ran over from his seat and said worriedly, "He has left. You can take a seat now."

“No.” She couldn’t let John look down upon her.

It would just take two classes and ten minutes’ break to stand. Back then, when she practiced martial arts, her master often asked her to squat for half an hour. So it was easy for her to stand as a punishment now.

“Hey, campus belle, do you personally know our teacher?” Confusion was written all over Colin’s face.

“No, I don’t.” It would be nice if she really didn’t know him. She didn’t want to know John at all. Ever since she met him, her life had been like a roller-coaster.

“Did you offend him? He seems to be targeting you on purpose.” 3

“Humph!” All Nina could do was snort.

She didn’t dare to offend John. Since she began to call him by his name, she had never thought of offending him, especially when she saw him cutting off someone’s hands without blinking.

Now it was John who picked on her deliberately.

Sooner or later, she would take a revenge on him.

‘Bastard!’

What she really wanted to do right now was to rush up and beat him up, so that he could know her who was endowed with civil and material virtues.

Emma, who was standing next to Nina, noticed her stubbornness. With her keen observation, she had guessed that there was a close relationship between John and Nina. She couldn’t help but smile as she stared at Nina’s red face.

“Thank you,” Nina said as she took the letter from Emma.

“You’re welcome. I’m leaving now.”

“Bye.”

Nodding her head, Nina flashed a gentle smile. She had a feeling that she would see Emma again.

As soon as she left, Nina opened the letter and saw four densely packed sheets of paper. But only three messages were relevant for her.

First, Paul took Michelle to their headquarters in Spring City to train for a month. She was not allowed to bring any communication equipment with her.

Second, Emma was Michelle’s cousin. She was Michelle’s favorite relative besides her parents.

Third, Michelle suspected that Emma’s boyfriend had an affair and asked her to help Emma at the critical moment, such as beating that man to bleed.¹⁴

“Isn’t it too much to beat the man until he bleeds?” After reading this, Nina put her hand on her forehead as she laughed.

As soon as she put the letter away, one of her classmates said, “Nina, the teacher asked you to go to his office.”³

Deep Affection: Honey, Come Back To Me

Chapter 95 1 Don’t Like You

Just mentioning the office was enough to remind Nina of her incident there. She thought back to the time that John pressed her behind the door and wanted to take advantage of her. Luckily she was quick enough to bite him and get away.

Nina had a real fear of offices now.

She never knew what trick he was going to try to play next.

Nina knocked at the door.

“Come in.” A deep voice came from the office. When Nina pushed the door open, she smelled a faint smell of tobacco. She looked inside to see John putting out his cigarette butt.

He tucked his hands into his pockets and stood beside the window. It was open so the tobacco smell wafted out the room.

Nina stood by the door, leaving it open. She didn't want to give him the opportunity to take advantage of her again.

“Sir, I'm here,” Nina said reluctantly. She didn't want to acknowledge him as her teacher because he just didn't seem like one.¹⁵

Thankfully Jason told them that he'd be back next week so today was John's last class.

Realizing this, Nina felt a little better.

She still wasn't happy about how he carried her this noon.

“Sir, did you want to talk about what happened this afternoon?” Nina asked, seeing him stand silently.

“Yes,” he answered blankly, raising his eyebrows and staring at Nina's frozen smile.

It seemed that Nina still didn't want to be his woman.

But it didn't matter. After all, she was already his wife.

Hearing his powerful voice, the smile on Nina's face froze.

“John, you saved my life and wanted me to become your woman. I can accept that but I won't be your mistress. Are you willing to make me your only partner?” Nina said it on purpose. She thought it would be impossible for John to leave Vivian. His marriage with her would bring him so many benefits that he wouldn't abandon.

He was a businessman so he naturally would always try to maximize his benefits.

Why would he give up Vivian for her, a girl who had only a pretty face but not family background?

Besides, she was also a married woman.

“Make it public? Like my wife? Il he said casually in low voice. The smooth and seductive tone gave Nina goose bumps.

He wasn't planning on telling her that they were actually married. It was more fun to keep her in the dark for the time being.¹²

“Yes. Are you willing to do that?” she questioned. Her bright eyes were beautiful and a wisp of hair brushed across her face. She was delicate, pretty and incredibly attractive.

“It seems that you really want to be my wife.” He was thrilled that she was desperate to be her wife. He didn't have the heart to punish her anymore.

‘Impossible!

Who would want to be your wife?

Only Vivian would.’

Nina screamed in her head but she didn't dare say anything to him. She held some unknown expectation in her, though she didn't know it herself.

“Since you want to be my wife, I'm willing to do that.” As he approached, a meaningful smile crept across his mouth as he took more and more notice of how lovely Nina looked.

She slowly shuffled backwards. John adored how cute was.

“Don't come over. The door is open.” Nina stretched out her hand to stop him. She clenched her right fist slightly and was ready to defend herself.

He paused and tilted his head slightly with a smile on his face. John wasn't afraid of her at all.

He wasn't capable of withstanding her strikes but he knew that she was too well behaved for that. She wouldn't dare attack a teacher at school and especially not with the door open.

"Do you mean that I can come over to you if I close the door?" John couldn't resist the urge to flirt with Nina. He put his hands in his pockets again, staring at her.

Nina tensed up and was alert while John was the polar opposite. He stood and smiled, completely calm.

"Close the door and I'll beat you." Nina clenched her fists tightly, cracking her knuckles.

The cracking sound made him flinch slightly. He thought that he best start getting some martial arts training from Richard very soon.²³

He didn't want to get beaten up before she knew that they were actually married. It would be so demoralizing. I

I want my wife. I can sacrifice my pride if it means I can have her.' ³

"Put your fist down. I'm not going to force you into doing anything."

Nina thought he was not restraining himself because he wanted to, but rather because he was too terrified. His voice was a lot more high-pitched so he was definitely scared. I

Nina was reasonable, so she slowly put her hands down. She wasn't going to get what she wanted if she aggravated him.

"John, I won't be your woman unless you make it public." Nina tried to deter him again. ⁵

"Sure," he answered affirmatively.

She was astonished. How was this actually happening?

Did he have the final say in his marriage?

Nina couldn't believe it. She knew that a family like his was not so simple. He couldn't just decide his marriage.

That was why she fled from her home after all.

From the time she was eighteen, her parents began to search for a husband for her. She had absolutely no say in the matter.

With her inquiring eyes falling on the resolute face of John, Nina asked, "Are you going to refuse to get engaged to Vivian?"

'Vivian?

Get engaged?'

"Who told you that I was going to get engaged to Vivian?" John was shocked. He had already been married and his wife was right in front of him. Why would he get engaged to another woman?

"Isn't Vivian your fiancée?"

Outside the Time Group, she heard Jessica telling Vivian that she wanted her as John's wife.

Was she just hearing things?

She was only twenty years old, her hearing couldn't be that bad. If anyone's hearing was going wrong, it would be John's.

John realized something. "You said we both had partners. Were you referring to Vivian?"

"Of course." What else could she be talking about? Was it possible that John also had a wife that he hadn't seen before? 8

That was impossible!

There was no way that both her and John were married to people they didn't know.14

Every time she thought about his engagement to Vivian, she felt her heart crack. She lowered her head and couldn't even bring herself to look at him. 6

John stared at Nina's sad face and gave a playful chuckle. He joked, "Are you jealous?"

"Jealous? Why would I be jealous?" Nina raised her head and a hint of uncontrollable panic flashed through her eyes.

"How can I be jealous? I don't like you at all." Nina turned her head, ignoring every single feeling she had for John. She was doing it so well that she genuinely believed she didn't love him.

She had asked others what love was and constantly pondered about it. Because of the conclusions she came to, she didn't love John.

"You don't like me?" The expression on John's face changed. I

If she didn't like him, why did she express her love to him? Did she think he didn't know the meaning of 520?

John didn't expect such an innocent girl to be such a liar. 15

Deep Affection: Honey, Come Back To Me

Chapter 96 Vivian Is Not My Fiancee

"Yes, you are right. I don't like you. Vivian is the one who likes you. And she is your fiancee." Every time Nina mentioned Vivian, there was a faint hint of jealousy in her tone. 15

She wasn't aware of it herself, but John could easily tell from her words. 7

Sure enough, his little girl was jealous.

The thought put him in a good mood today, so he patiently explained to Nina, "Vivian is not my fiancee. Stop thinking of such nonsense."

"Huh?" Without opening her mouth, Nina couldn't utter a sound in total confusion.

'What did John just say?

Wasn't Vivian his fiancée? she thought.

"How could that be possible? I heard it with my very own ears."
Obviously, Nina didn't believe him. Maybe, John just wanted to use her to avoid the political marriage between him and Vivian.

He didn't have anything to hold her now. She didn't want to get herself involved with them.

John must definitely be lying to her.

"You heard it yourself? Who told you that?" The cautious look in Nina's eyes made John feel confused. Her amber eyes rolled in annoyance, and she was thinking about something. Her facial expression seemed a little funny to John.

When did he ever lie?

How could she not believe him?

John calmly explained, with emphasis on each word, "Vivian is not my fiancée. And she won't be in the future."

Since he said it so clearly and decisively, Nina should believe it now.

As the president of the Time Group, he was called Mr. Shi by everyone out of respect. Every word he said was the truth and no one had ever dared to doubt him.

However, Nina was the only person who either shamelessly lied to him, or downright doubted the authenticity of his words.

She really needed to be taught a lesson she would not easily forget.

"Come here," John ordered in a serious tone.

Nina blinked her eyes innocently, her eyebrows slightly curved, and her eyes were intently fixed on John. She was both surprised and hesitant.

His low voice lingered in her ears. It was a little cold, like the sound of water flowing through the green stones in the mountain stream, and slowly flowing into her heart.

“Vivian is not my fiancée. And she won’t be in the future.”

What he said was etched in Nina’s mind word by word and she was deeply touched. 3

The two of them were in a very quiet office. It was so quiet that as long as Nina looked at John intently, she seemed to be able to hear her own heartbeat, which gradually became irregular. At time, it would speed up, and on other time, it would miss a beat.

Unconsciously, she was mesmerized when John called her over. She walked absentmindedly closer to him, until the distance between the two of them was less than half a step. I

The light smell of tobacco on John’s body was mixed with his very own unique fragrance. It always made Nina feel somewhat special and pleasant, as if it had the effect of calming down her senses.

“John, did you really just say that Vivian isn’t your fiancée?” Nina raised her head. In fact, she had believed it the first time John said so, but she just wanted to hear it again.

In the face of suspicion, John chuckled softly and affirmed, “Yes. You can marry me anytime if you want to.”

“No, I can’t,” Nina denied as she shook her head reflexively. Now that she had confirmed that Vivian was not his fiancée, he could marry her as he wanted.

However, Nina was unwilling to marry him. I

She was still in a marriage with an unknown man, and the marriage was like a grave to her. Why would she jump into another unknown grave? I

No, no, no! She was still young and had just turned twenty years old.

John was already thirty years old. 9

He should really get married as soon as possible. Otherwise...

No, no, no! What was she thinking about? What had John being middle-aged anything to do with her?

Nina vehemently shook her head and shook these thoughts off. She must have gotten crazy, and that was why she was thinking about John's marriage.

What did his marriage have anything to do with her? 5

Nina sloppily raised her hands, rubbed her cheeks with force, and gave herself a warning to be sober.

After having rubbed her face fiercely, two lumps of scarlet red could be seen on her fair cheeks. She meekly lowered her eyebrows and stood in front of John. She looked like an innocent girl who would easily blush at the sight of her sweetheart.

Coincidentally, this scene was personally witnessed by James. He quickly covered his eyes, and shouted excitedly, 'I didn't see anything!'

In spite of his words, a pair of mischievous eyes peeped through the gaps of his fingers. 2

He couldn't help but sigh and think that his uncle was truly awesome!

He could make even the usually cold and aloof Nina blush like a teenager.

"What are you doing here?" John asked as he noticed James standing at the door. John reluctantly looked away from Nina's flushed face, and brushed past her, at the same time blocking her.

Only he was allowed to see Nina's adorable face

James put down his hands in defeat and smiled obsequiously. "Uncle John, I have some good news to tell you, but I want to make a deal with you."

"Oh? Really? That will largely depend on whether the information you have is important or not." John slightly raised his eyebrows, indicating for him to go on.

Knowing that Nina was still standing behind John, James whispered in John's ear, "Uncle John, Michelle has gone to Spring City and she won't be back until a month later. Now that Aunt Nina is alone in her apartment, it's time for you to make your move. Besides, before Michelle left, she told me that Aunt Nina had never seen her disabled and stingy husband. She is about to file for a divorce. Uncle John, you must work hard to woo her." 7

James elbowed John and raised an eyebrow. "What do you think, Uncle John? Is the news enough to make a deal with you? Can I ask you for a condition?"

"Go ask my assistant for the thing that you want." John gave in, his long and narrow eyes darkened a bit. It was indeed good news that Michelle would be staying away from Nina's side for a while.

"Okay, see you again, Uncle John. Bye, Aunt Nina." He cheerfully bid both of them goodbye and left cheerfully. His tone was much brisk than usual, and he returned to being the unruly James.

"What did James say to you?" Nina was trying to eavesdrop on their conversation just now, but James' voice was too soft for her to hear. She could vaguely hear a few words here and there, but couldn't make much sense of what it was about.

John slowly turned around, reached out his hand, and affectionately stroked her hair. After a while, he said leisurely, "Michelle said that Michelle will be going out of town and you will be living alone in the apartment. He asked me to take you to the North Yard."

It was John's idea to take her to the North Yard, not James'.

"You want to take me to the North Yard?" Nina asked incredulously. She didn't want to live with John.

"No, no, I have been living alone by myself for two years before I knew Michelle. I'm fine by myself and you don't need to worry about me. Anyway, I have something urgent to deal with. I have to go now." Nina really didn't want to live in the North Yard. She had been there a few times, and she had been kissed by John every single time.

She didn't want to be taken advantage of. 2

When Nina turned around and was about to leave, John reached out and grabbed her wrist. The scorching temperature of his body penetrated into her skin through her thin clothes. She stopped in astonishment, and her wrist was awkwardly itchy.

“John, let go of me!” Nina admonished and turned around. When she looked at the mesmerizing deep eyes of John, she felt as if he was about to suck her in their depth.

“Why are you refusing?” John inquired.

If she were to stay in the North Yard, she would be taken care of by the maids, and she didn't have to endure the hardship in her small apartment.

“I just refuse to do so,” Nina challenged and raised her chin. In addition, she thought, ‘What can you do to me?’

John sneered with malice. Did she really think that he wouldn't be able to do anything to her?

“Twenty million.”

“I'm a decent person. I won't give myself in exchange for twenty million,” Nina countered. She wrongly thought that John was going to buy her off with twenty million. She was so angry.

“If you have an affair, you have to give your husband twenty million as compensation.” John believed that she would be intimidated if he mentioned the clause in the divorce agreement.

“How did you know about it?” Nina stuttered. She was terrified to death to hear

John mention the clause. 6

Did he know who her unknown husband was?20

Chapter 97 He Has Something On Her

“I can find out whatever I want to know.” His cold and arrogant tone made it sound like he was telling the truth, although he just learned it when he was about to sign the divorce agreement.

Now he finally knew why he couldn't find any information about Nina. Sam indeed hid it well.

When he didn't know the truth yet, he thought her husband was a powerful man, because he knew that a person who could hide her identity well was not an ordinary person.

But it turned out that he was Nina's husband.

It was somehow funny yet he still felt bad, especially when he saw the fear Nina had for her secret husband.

“Have you found out who he is?” Eagerness easily replaced the panic in Nina's eyes. I

She had done everything to know who her husband was, but she didn't find anything, not even his name.

How did John find out?

This was the best news she had heard so far.

“Who is he? Who is my husband?” Due to the excitement she felt, Nina grabbed his wrist. “Tell me now so I can file a divorce.”

Her sparkling eyes made John smile, but it soon disappeared after hearing her say the word “divorce.” So instead of telling her the truth, he kept a stoic face.

Sure enough, Nina was thinking about the divorce.

What did she regard him as? Did she think that she could marry and divorce at her will?

“I'll tell you as long as you are obedient.” Slowly, he drew closer to her face and habitually reached out his hand to curl up a wisp of her hair. An evil glint crossed his eyes as he stared at her.

"If you disobey me, I'll tell him about what happened to us in the hotel. Twenty million dollars is a large amount of money."

"Are you threatening me?" Gritting her teeth, Nina raised her head and glared at John.

He was once again threatening her using what happened to them before, like he did about the video.

It did work.

Because there was no way she would compensate twenty million dollars. Besides, she really wanted to know who her husband was, so she had no choice but to agree to him.

John clearly knew how to manipulate her. 3 What a cold and ruthless man he was!

"I'm not threatening you. I'm just informing you." The two of them were so close to each other, she could almost feel his breath. His gentle and deep voice showed his deterrent, which proved that he was born to give orders.

From a different angle, it seemed very intimate, even when they were really arguing.

"Sir, Nina, what are you doing?" It had been a while since Nina and John left the room but none of them came back, so Collin rushed to the teacher's office.

What he was worried about was that John would punish Nina, so he came to find her. When he entered the office, he found John leaning close to her. As a man, how could he let Nina be treated obscenely?

"Sir, stay away from Nina." To Nina's surprise, Colin went up to pull her away from John.

Even though Colin was tall and strong, he was still frightened.

His aggressive eyes met John's, but the latter ignored him and turned to Nina with a warning look.

"I'm fine. Mr. Shi just wanted to have a talk with me about... life." If she didn't say anything, Colin would be in a big trouble.

Then she would also get into big trouble.

After all, John had something on her.

She had to be obedient and please him to get what she wanted.

“Really?” There was still doubt in Colin’s eyes when he looked at Nina. He was gentle to her, while he was hostile to John. 7

But John didn’t mind Colin’s hostility towards him.

What bothered him was how Colin stood like a knight in shining armor beside Nina. 6

“She won’t like you. Don’t waste time on her.” Just like stating a fact, John added casually, “She’s my woman.” 5

“John!” Nina roared in anger. “We are at school. Can you stop talking nonsense?”

“Aren’t you my woman? We have done what couples do.” They had been intimate and even got their marriage licenses. 4

How dare she say that she was not his woman? 5

“You...” Speechless, Nina could only stare at him. She couldn’t say anything to deny what John said because he was telling the truth. She really had slept with John.

What John said was enough to shatter all the illusions in Colin’s heart.

‘Do you love each other?’ Bitterness was written all over Colin’s face.

Il Yes.” A single word from John gave Collin a heavy blow.

“Sorry to bother you.” In an instant, Colin’s eyes turned red, and he ran out of the office. 6

For the second time around, John felt victorious.

Colin would have to retake the course next year because John had decided to deduct his credits as a punishment.

With a smug look, he looked back at Nina who was stunned with what he had told Collin.

“Do you know what you were talking about just now?”

A while ago, Colin asked if they were in love and he said yes.

What did he mean?

‘I just helped you refuse an admirer who is not good enough. Shouldn’t you be thankful?’ Of course he knew what he was talking about, but at the same time, he just wanted to have fun. 6

After all, he was not the type of person to express his love.

As far as he could remember, he was the one who always received confessions.

“Well, thank you.” Trying to hide the slight disappointment she felt, Nina raised her voice.

It turned out that he just wanted to refuse an admirer for her.

It was not a bad thing. She should really thank him.

But why did she feel a little dejected?

Since she couldn’t figure it out, she just shrugged it off.

“If you don’t have anything else to say, I’ll leave nOW.ll

She was about to walk out of the office when John stopped her. ‘I You must move to my place today.’”

Nina squinted at him and was about to refuse, but John threatened, ‘I Twenty million.’”

Left without a choice, Nina held her words back and forced a smile. “Yes, I’ll move into your house now.”

Look how things had changed after she said that she wouldn’t give in to twenty million.

After school, under the strict supervision of John, Nina packed her luggage. 9

From the two whole boxes, John turned his attention to the rabbit ornaments all over the apartment. "Won't you take them with you ?

I l don't like rabbits." She liked the elk, which had guided her home.

Frowning, John asked, "Why are there so many rabbits?"

"Mimi is like a rabbit, and I like her. These are all hers." As soon Nina was done packing her things, she stood up. "We can leave now."

John said abruptly, 'I l hate rabbits.'"23

Chapter 98 Move In

Nina was lost for words. 'Why did he say he hates rabbits? Does it have anything to do with me?'

They both seemed uncomfortable at this point and didn't talk until they arrived at the North Yard. John finally said, "Well, we're home."

The North Yard was the house John built for himself, and now the host ess was here.

He was quite grateful to his father as the latter had arranged this marriage for him.

"I know," Nina said flatly. She wasn't blind. She knew they had arrived. Obviously, she didn't get his point. After they got out of the car, someone came to pick up her luggage. Nina followed John inside. As soon as s he entered the gate, she felt that something was wrong. This wasn't he r first time here so she — Chapter 98 Move In already knew that most of the time only Helen a nd John were around.

However, now there were several new faces.

Two tall guards stood at the gate. When they saw the two of them, they greeted respectfully, "Mr. and Mrs. Shi."

They were quite resolute figures with puffed out chests and steady breathing. Nina could tell that they were good at fighting. Passing through the garden, Nina took note of two maids. They were tending to the flowers and plants. They worked in tandem, trimming the branches and watering the plants. Simple but efficient.

They looked like they were good at martial arts too.

"Mr. and Mrs. Shi," the two maids greeted them.

As she stepped into the living hall, Nina saw Richard and she remembered how he saved her not long ago. She said gratefully, "It's you. I didn't get a chance to thank you for last time."

– Chapter 98 Move In –

"You're welcome, Mrs. Shi. I was just following orders though," Richard said humbly. He turned around and said to John, "Mr. Shi, everything is ready." "Take my wife's luggage upstairs."

"Yes,"

Richard replied and then marched off. Even John was calling her his wife. Nina was absolutely perplexed. She knew other people seemed to make this mistake and there was no point in correcting them, but this was John.

It was easy for people like Helen to get it wrong. 3

Seeing Nina's baffled face, John chuckled and tried to distract her. He calmly said, "Your shoes are here."

"What? Oh, Okay." Nina came back to her senses and looked at the ladies' slippers on the shoe rack. "You just came back at the right time. Dinner is ready. You two can have dinner – Chapter 98 Move In – now." Helen came out of the kitchen with a dish in her hands. She smiled kindly and amiably at the sight of Nina. Sitting at the table, Nina couldn't shake this feeling that something was wrong. It seemed as if she had been living here for ages. The servants of the North Yard respectfully called her Mrs. Shi, and even prepared slippers for her. Even the furniture around this whole place had changed and looked similar to her apartment now. If she didn't know any better, she would think that she lived here her whole life.

After dinner, Nina began worrying about where she was going to sleep.

John basically threatened her to live here so she was the furthest thing from comfortable. She just didn't trust him anymore and she kept thinking that he had ulterior motives. 1 "Helen, where do I sleep tonight?" It was going to be far too embarrassing for her to ask John so she asked Helen the question in a hushed whisper.

– Chapter 98 Move In Helen was clearing up the bowls and chopsticks when she heard Nina's question. She was surprised. "Mrs. Shi, you will stay with Mr. Shi in the master bedroom. Did you have a fight with him?" 14

It wasn't outrageous to think that they had a fight. She saw the divorce agreement this noon.

She thought that Nina must just want to sleep in a separate room.

When were they going to have a baby then?, "Mrs. Shi, couples always quarrel but it's important to make up quickly. Even if you are angry with him, you can't sleep in separate rooms. Mr. Shi is very busy every day and he doesn't know girls well. It's inevitable that he'll piss you off. Please forgive him," Helen advised earnestly. 2 Nina was completely confused by her words. Why did everyone think that she was John's wife?

Where did this come from?

"Helen, I think you misunderstood. John and

— Chapter 98 Move In

I aren't together," Nina explained seriously. Helen's eyes opened wide as she thought about Nina's words. This fight must have been worse than she imagined. "Alas..." Helen sighed and left. It seemed that John and Nina had a serious quarrel this time. After dinner, John went straight into the study to deal with his business while Nina still wanted to sleep in a separate room.

Before Nina could do that, she had to figure out a plan first.

Helen had left so Nina's only choice was to ask John. He was sitting in the study hosting a video meeting with the company's senior executives.

Nina gingerly walked up to the door which was slightly ajar. She lifted her hand to knock but hesitated. The door wasn't locked. With a gentle push, the door opened.

There was a computer on the table and – Chapter 98 Move In John leaned back on the chair, looking very serious.

"Are you busy?" Nina guessed that he was working.

John glanced at his computer and the several faces on the screen. The senior executives who were giving the lecture opened their mouths in shock.

"No." John slightly angled his body to the side, facing Nina. "What's wrong?" Nina pursed her lips and asked, "Where do I sleep?"

Everyone on the screen took a deep breath and looked at each other in shock.

There was a woman in John's house!

"The master bedroom." John smiled. She was his wife so his bachelor life was finished in his mind.

Master bedroom?

Did he mean that they would sleep in the same bed?

— Chapter 98 Move In – No way.

Nina didn't want to do that by any means but she couldn't anger him. She said innocently, "If I sleep there, where are you going to sleep? It's inappropriate for you to sleep in the guest room since this is your house."

She was half in the doorway, leaning in while holding the door open. Her head tilted to the side with her innocent eyes blinking like stars in the night sky.

John knew that she was just playing dumb. He couldn't help but let out a chuckle at how good her acting was.

"Well, there's nothing wrong with me sleeping in the master bedroom as well." John folded his leg over the other. His teasing voice was devilishly charming. The smile on Nina's face froze as her mouth twitched awkwardly. She decided to play along and see what would happen.

"Okay. I'll wait for you in the room." 'You'll get a big surprise when you come upstairs,' – Chapter 98 Move In – Nina thought.

After she had processed what just happened, she turned around slamming the door, a little annoyed.

John didn't get that angry. His wife just slammed the door. What was the big deal?

When he turned around and looked back at the screen, his employees so stunned that it looked like his screen were frozen.

After the video conference, someone in the WeChat group asked Henry and John's assistant who the woman in John's house was.

Henry replied, "The president's wife." The assistant added, "They have gotten the marriage licenses."

Almost instantly, all the senior executives of the Time Group knew that John was married and his wife's surname was Lu.

Back then, John said he had been bitten by an elk.

It turned out he was just kidding.

He had been bitten by Nina

Chapter 99 Trick John

John hadn't seen the news in the company's WeChat group, so he didn't know that his image was tarnished.

After the meeting, Helen walked over with a cage in her hand. Inside the cage, a little rabbit with red eyes was eating carrots.

“Mr. Shi, here is the rabbit you want.”

John stared at the rabbit, flashing a murderous look. “From now on, no rabbit is allowed in the North Yard. Get rid of it.”

“Rid of it? Didn't you buy it for Mrs. Shi?” Earlier in the afternoon, John told Helen to get a rabbit for Nina, and he was going to give it to her as a gift when she moved in. When she learned of their conflict, Helen quickly called someone to get a rabbit for John. She hoped that it'd be enough to put their quarrel to bed.

What changed?

– Chapter 99 Trick John “Mr. Shi, don't be angry with Mrs. Shi. You said that she likes rabbits, so why do you want to get rid of it? Isn't it going to upset Mrs. Shi?” Helen was worried. She really cared about the well-being of Nina and John's relationship.

She was not so anxious when she tried to find a wife for her son. "She doesn't like rabbits." He only found out this afternoon. He was a little annoyed with himself that he misunderstood it.

However, he was angrier at the fact that the rabbit that Nina liked was actually Michelle. He made a new request. "She likes Tibetan Mastiffs. Tell Richard to go and find a snow-white Tibetan Mastiff."

"Yes." Helen turned around and left.

John looked up at the porch on the second floor. The little girl was definitely setting a trap for him and eagerly waiting his arrival. She was far too pleased with staying in the master bedroom. John knew that she had some tricks up her sleeve.

– Chapter 99 Trick John He just had to wait and see what she was going to do.

John made his way up to the room about half an hour later. The door was slightly open and the beaming light shone into the hallway. As he got closer, he could hear a faint rustling coming from inside.

John reached out his hand and pushed the door open. He didn't quite want to go in just yet. He saw Nina sitting in front of the dressing table. She supported her head with one hand and looked at him sideways. The smile on her face was filled with malice.

"Why are you standing at the door? Come in." Nina seductively blinked and stared at John charmingly. She lifted her hand and tucked a wisp of hair behind her ear. 2

John glanced around the bedroom scouring for anything unusual. Then he walked inside hesitantly.

They were both smart people so they didn't let each other know how they were feeling. They both put on a facade of calmness. Whoever could win their battle tonight, held

– Chapter 99 Trick John all the power. 10

Naturally, they had their guards up.

“Go take a shower. I’ve already finished having one,” Nina said calmly, glancing at the bathroom.

The calmer she was, the more abnormal she seemed.

“Okay,” John replied calmly too. Before going to the bathroom, he strode over to Nina, bent down and kissed her on the lips.

Then he swiftly left for the bathroom.

“John! Why did you kiss me?”

Nina covered her mouth with her hand and looked vigilantly at John. Her face was completely flushed as she sat flustered. “Because I like it.” John looked at her flushed face for a long time before turning away. He turned around and went to the bathroom. After entering, he checked everywhere from the bath towel to the bath water.

– Chapter 99 Trick John After searching for ten minutes, he was pleased that nothing was wrong.

Ten minutes later, Nina heard the sound of water and smiled proudly. She didn’t touch anything in the room at all. She had her plans.

John came out, wrapped in a bath towel. Hearing the footsteps, Nina turned around. His straight and slender figure reflected in her eyes. Water dripped from the tips of his hair and his body was still slightly wet. His upper body was firm and muscular with his fair skin looking tender. She seemed to be attracted by his six-pack stomach.

She had flashback to the first time they met. He hadn’t changed at all.

He was exactly the same at the Four Seasons Garden Hotel.

She swallowed and almost choked because of her dry throat. The image of his naked body, flooded her mind.

“Have you seen enough?” John asked again, but in a different tone this time.

– Chapter 99 Trick John The first time he asked the question, his tone was cold and riddled with sarcasm, but now, he had a devilish grin that was enticing to say the least.

“No,” Nina answered keenly. She stood up and walked over, licking her lips. “Let me just touch it. Okay?” She had been thinking about his muscular body for far too long.

She could never get enough so she wanted to make sure she got all she wanted today.

Before John could respond, Nina’s hands were already all over his muscular body. The heat on his skin made her want to pull away slightly, but she still ran her hands lightly over him.⁶

Nina’s hands were soft and delicate. As she moved her fingers, John began to get nervous. His Adam’s apple rolled in his throat between his heavy breaths. His lips were getting dry the longer this went on. John’s ears turned red. He had no problem flirting with her but he – Chapter 99 Trick John never thought he’d get this flustered.

Embarrassed, John looked away and grabbed Nina’s hands. “Don’t move,” he ordered in a hoarse voice ³ “Shh, don’t say anything. Let me feel it again.” Nina pursed her lips. Her soft voice was like a feather, tugging at John’s heart and tempting him to let go. ³

As expected, John let go of her hands. Then Nina touched him again. He couldn’t help but raise his hands to grab Nina’s shoulders, his fingers digging into her skin. His devilish eyes attractively shone brightly.

“Little girl, you asked for it.” His voice was powerful and he was about to push Nina away.

Nina flashed a wicked grin. She reached under the quilt, took out a plaster and slapped it onto John’s calf.

Once she was satisfied that it stuck, she ripped it off.

– Chapter 99 Trick John Whoosh!

John was stunned. He frowned and fixed his eyes on the girl who was in front of him. The stabbing pain from his leg made him open his mouth and heave in a deep breath.

Before he could close his mouth, Nina took a piece of lemon out from under the quilt and shoved it in his mouth.

This particular lemon was covered in mustard.

John's face twisted after tasting the sour lemon, while the pungent smell of mustard made him frown and cough.

"Ahem..."

Nina hurriedly broke free from his shackles. She stood aside and watched him. "Ah, what's wrong with you? Are you okay?" She pretended to be worried, but she made no active attempt to help.

"You..." When John realized what had happened, he cast a fierce glance at her. His throat burned so much that he couldn't

Nina was so proud of the job she was pulling off. She rushed to get a glass of milk and handed it to him considerately. 2

"Come on, have a glass of milk. It'll make it better."

John stared at the milk in front of him, wondering if there was anything else in it. With a malicious look on his face, he said, "You drink it first."

Nina understood his hesitation. She had to drink it to make sure it was okay.

"Okay, I'll drink it." Nina drank a large mouthful of milk and handed it to him again kindly.

Only then did John take it and drink it. The milk was still warm. Just enough to relieve the spicy taste in his throat.

After he swallowed the milk,

Nina nodded happily. She reached out to take the cup back, bowed her head and

It turned out she didn't swallow it at all.

John was astonished.

He was really duped. 12

John's shins were still red, and he could taste the sourness in his mouth. His face was twisted as if he could kill right at this moment while staring at Nina.

"What's in the milk?" Forcing her to answer, John pressed Nina on the bed.

"Nothing. I just don't like milk." Nina was not afraid of him at all. Her innocent eyes were filled with grievance as she looked back at him.

Clenching his teeth, John asked, "You don't like milk?"

It was impossible for him to believe the little liar.

Regardless of what was in the milk, he would have to punish her. Therefore, John leaned closer to Nina until his cold lips swept across her cheeks, teasing her.

“Wait...” A hint of panic flashed through her eyes. Nina turned her head away, and her forehead creased when she glanced at John’s belly.

Why was it taking so long for it to take effect?

Was it expired? If that was the case, then her effort from searching the kitchen for a long time and being almost caught by Helen would be wasted.

How could her plan fail? While she was busy thinking about this, John’s stomach suddenly churned. Nina smirked inwardly. “Purgative?” In an instant, John’s face turned pale. As he felt his stomach stir up, he figured out what was going on. “I told you it isn’t expired yet. If it is, then it should’ve been more effective.” Looking at John’s crumpled face, Nina slowly smiled. At this moment, John wished he could strangle her to death.

Mastiff – But he was unwilling to kill her, so all he could do was glare at her.

This little girl was really naughty. Anger rose in John’s heart but he chose to stand up and leave. “Ah, John. Don’t go!” With one hand supporting her head, Nina smiled charmingly and gently flipped her hair. She was exceedingly fascinating, and it was impossible for any man to ignore her. Her delicate voice made John stumble. When he looked back, he saw the woman with a curvaceous figure lying on the bed and smiling smugly, provoking him.

However, no matter how much he wanted to give her the punishment she deserved, the diarrhea forced him to leave.

When he reached door, Nina shouted, “John! You want to leave by yourself. From now on, the master bedroom belongs to me. You can sleep in the guest room.” What Nina said made John pause. He turned around to say something but his

A Tibetan Mastiff It went on like that for the rest of the night, and if he hadn’t been in good health, he would have been dehydrated.

Therefore, John was sleepless the whole night while Nina slept soundly in the master bedroom.

On the next morning, Nina was woken up by something slimy on her face which made her frown. When she opened her sleepy eyes, she vaguely saw a mass of white. "What's this?" Nina murmured.

The dog barked, as if protesting that it was not a thing, but a young Tibetan Mastiff. "What?

A dog?" Nina came to her senses. Her eyes went wide when she realized that there was a snow-white dog in front of her.

Frightened, she wrapped herself in the quilt and rolled down from the bed.

She was so scared that she ignored the pain she felt on her butt when she landed on the floor. In a hurry, she lifted the quilt and ran outside.

– Chapter 100 A Tibetan Mastiff It was a dog! She was really afraid of dogs!

"Ah!" Nina ran downstairs barefooted, and the Tibetan Mastiff ran after her.

Not daring to look back, Nina ran as if she was running for her life, while the dog ran after her leisurely.

It could be seen on her pale face how terrified she was. Why was the dog chasing her?

As she quickly went downstairs, she automatically called out John's name. "John! John, help!"

As soon as Richard heard someone crying for help, he hurried in, only to be stunned when he saw a woman and a dog confronting each other in the hall.

"Mrs. Shi, what's wrong?" "Take the dog away!" With trembling hands, Nina took the magazine from the table. She rolled it and pointed at the dog.

Nina had never seen a dog in C Island because the people there only raised cats at – Chapter 100 A Tibetan Mastiff home.

The first time she had seen a dog was when she moved to Lexingport City. It looked cute but the dog Nina met was a stray dog. When she passed by his territory, the stray dog lit its tusks as if it would pounce on her. Although the dog didn't pounce on her, it still traumatized her. Since that day, Nina didn't dare to come near any dog again.

Now there was a Tibetan Mastiff in front of her, whose fur was white and soft. Its slightly opened mouth didn't seem dangerous but Nina was still scared.

"Mrs. Shi, are you afraid of dogs?" There was a hint of surprise in Richard's eyes. Wasn't it said that Nina had beaten up John?

She was not even afraid of John. How could she be afraid of a Tibetan Mastiff?

To Nina's delight, Helen came back. Nina ran like she had seen a savior and hid behind her. But the dog also followed her, which made her tremble.

– Chapter 100 A Tibetan Mastiff "Helen, take it away!" Tears began to form in the corners of her eyes as she held onto Helen.

Patting Nina's hand on her shoulder, Helen said with a smile, "Mrs. Shi, don't be afraid. It's a surprise sent by Mr. Shi. It's a young Tibetan Mastiff. It's not fierce at all."

"Surprise?" Even after hearing this, Nina still felt frightened. "Wasn't it fierce?"

"It ran after me just now." The dog barked, and its bright eyes seemed to be explaining something. This only scared Nina more, so she shrank again and tightened her grip on Helen's shoulders.

"Don't be afraid, Mrs. Shi. His name is Nine, and he's very docile. If you don't believe me, you can touch him." To prove her that the dog was harmless, Helen squatted in front of the dog and touched his head. Indeed, it didn't resist or react aggressively.

ely. It only stared at Nina expectantly, like it knew that she was its owner.

– Chapter 100 A Tibetan Mastiff Nina swallowed and asked, “Wait, what’s its name?”

“Nine. Mr. Shi picked it himself.” “Nine?” It was easy to say that John was the one who gave this name. After all, Nine was close to her name Nina.

He did it on purpose.

“Mrs. Shi, don’t you like it? Mr. Shi said that you liked Tibetan Mastiffs, so he asked Richard to find a gift for you overnight. He cares about you so much. Please don’t let him sleep in the guest room.”

Nina’s mouth opened to explain but she didn’t know what to say. “I’m not...”

“By the way, Mr. Shi specifically asked me to tell you that Nine is worth twenty million.” This order actually confused Helen. Why did she have to tell Nina the price? But who could guess what was on John’s mind?

On the contrary, it was not hard for Nina to guess the reason why. As soon as she heard the figures, her face – Chapter 100 A Tibetan Mastiff stiffened, knowing that something bad was going to happen.

Last night, she was so happy that she had forgotten that John had something on her.

She was trying to please him, but why did she play a trick on John last night?

But no one could blame her. She really wanted to beat John up! “Yes, I like it.” Of course, Nina was lying. She hated it as much as she hated the person who bought it for her.
