

Chapter 0011

“Alright. I don’t care if you train me. I thought you would have been a little bit too busy to train me. I mean, you can’t stay here forever with me.” I say.

“I’ll make time for you whenever you need me.” He says.

“I know. Thank you.” I say.

When we finished watching the movie I was thinking of when I was going to meet the rest of the pack. But I started getting heart palpitations every time I thought about it. Ethan could tell that something was wrong with me but I told him it was nothing. I just knew myself that I wasn’t ready to meet the rest of the pack.

Ethan and I were just hanging around the packhouse and he took me to the extension of the house that I didn’t see the other day because it was a training room.

Ethan makes sure that all of his pack members train. Even if they don’t want to be warriors, then they will at least know how to defend themselves. And Ethan said that this is where we will be training. Everyone else only trains here during winter. And even then, it’s not too often. They need to know how to fight in the snow as well.

We were pretty close to the Canadian border and I believe that some of Ethan’s land crossed over the border. That’s how expansive it had become as his pack grew larger. He needed more territory.

“Do you ever get any problems from the Canadian packs?” I asked.

“No. They mainly keep to themselves. But again, their packs are a lot smaller than mine.” He says.

“I guess they're not willing to go to war with you over a little territory.” I say.

“No. I don’t think so.” Ethan says.

When we finally went back inside we were talking for a bit and I heard someone ring the doorbell. Ethan told me to stay at the table this time while he went to answer it. And while he was gone my phone started ringing.

“Ryker.” I answered.

“Hey Summer. How’s it going?” He asked.

“It’s going really good. I like it here, so far. I haven’t really left the packhouse or met anyone yet. But I will.” I say.

“Good. I’m glad things are going well for you.” He says.

“Did you think Ethan was going to kick me out?” I asked.

“Wait until he sees your wolf.” Ryker says.

“He already has. And he isn’t scared. He’s was fine with it. He actually loves her.” I said.

“Holy shit. He really is the right mate for you.”

“So, what’s going on back home? I’m guessing dad is planning something.” I say.

“Yeah. Don’t leave the territory. No matter what happens, don’t leave. He’s got people watching every inch of that place.”

“I’m not surprised. I knew that he would try and grab me back the second he could.”

“Well, he’s planning something else but he’s not involving me in those plans. He might be afraid that I would tell you. Just make sure that Ethan’s warriors are prepared for anything. I think there might be an attack coming.” Ryker explained.

“I’ll tell him. Thank you.” I say.

“I have to get off the phone. I can hear him coming. Be careful sis. I love you.” He says.

“I love you too.” I say hanging up.

When Ethan came back into the room I told him about my call with Ryker and he said that it was Mason at the door telling him the same thing. My dad’s warriors have the territory surrounded.

I knew that this was my fault. His people were in trouble because of me. I was really confused about what to do. But I knew one thing, Ethan wasn’t going to run. He was going to stay here and fight. No matter what. He was going to fight. And I knew that he wasn’t going to let me leave. So we needed to start my training as soon as possible.
