Chapter 148

"Dad, do you know this Ms. Thompson?" questioned Megan as she pointed at Loraine who was sitting beside Harold.

"Don't be rude. That woman is Dr. Thompson's granddaughter, Ms. Loraine Thompson. In the past, I asked you to go to Dr. Thompson's place and invite him over to treat Louis, but you refused. Now, look at you. You don't even know such a distinguished person like Ms. Thompson. How disgraceful! You should reflect on yourself when you go home tonight," said Glen angrily.

Then, he shot Harold and Loraine an apologetic glance.

"I'd initially thought that this guy had made a name for himself. I see that you're with Dr. Thompson's granddaughter now. What's with the arrogance when you're just living off her?" Megan said mockingly as she had a sudden realization after hearing Glen's introduction.

Hearing Megan's words, Harold merely chuckled without explaining anything.

However, Loraine would not let anyone defame Harold.

"You're Mrs. Zeller, right? How dare you say that Harold lives off women? I think you must be genuinely blind to say such a thing. If Harold were to actually live off women, there would be no real men left in this world. Numerous women wished that Harold would live off them. Even if he were to live off women, he would still be the most powerful man in the world!" Loraine scoffed as she shot Megan a disdainful glare.

"Pfft. Isn't he just the hotel's watchdog? You sure are good at boasting," said Megan, shooting Loraine the same disdainful glare.

From Megan's perspective, Loraine was just a young girl who was madly in love. After all, girls who were in love were idiots who would always view the men they loved as the best in the world. Even if said man was a beggar, the girl would still treat him like the most precious treasure to ever exist in the world.

Megan had seen a lot of women like Loraine. Unfortunately, every relationship those women had would always end with a break-up.

Upon hearing Megan call Harold a watchdog, Loraine was livid and instantly jumped to her feet.

"Shut up. Harold's the invincible..."

“Lorraine, mind your manners!”

Seeing that Lorraine was about to get into a fight with Megan, Harold hastily stopped her.

“I can't stand the way this woman treats you, Harold. I must tell them your true identity to scare them,” said Lorraine, infuriated.

“Fine. Listen to me carefully. This man in front of you was the one who led thirty thousand soldiers and defeated a million troops to defend our homeland five years ago. He is the globally renowned mighty God of War who protected us Chanaeans from the invasion,” said Lorraine in one breath. She'd just revealed Harold's true identity to everyone.
