

Dauntless 163

Dauntless God Of War

Chapter 163

It was exactly because he wore that exact same mask every time he appeared before common folk that even until now, other than the powerful people of Chanaea and The Four beside him, almost no one else had seen his true face before.

Even those who had seen his face before would keep the secret, for example, Samuel and the others.

“Understood, Mr. Campbell!”

Logan left the Thompsons' place after receiving his order.

Harold, on the other hand, started contemplating the situation.

If the matter of establishing a veteran fund was true, then he would support it with all he could.

The reason he told Logan to expand Paradise Hotel was so that the veteran soldiers could have jobs to support their families after retirement.

Also, it was to support the lives of those handicapped veteran soldiers and the families of the heroes that had died on the battlefield.

But now, it was obvious that the veteran fund was just a fraud scheme someone else had come up with for the sake of scamming money using his name.

No one would dare to investigate them if they used his name.

It had only been just a few years, but there was already someone trying to use his name to commit crimes, so he needed to get rid of them as soon as possible.

Logan was someone Harold could trust, so he had entrusted this task to him.

After he was done arranging for these matters, Harold called his father-in-law and mother-in-law to tell them that Isabella would wake up the next day and that they should prepare a proper meal for her.

However, they told him that they were not at home. Instead, they were at Pauline's mother's house to celebrate her father's birthday.

Thus, Harold could do nothing else but wait for the next day to arrive.

It was exceptionally torturing to wait for something. It was only a night's time, but Harold felt like a century had passed.

Nonetheless, no matter how long the night was, daybreak would still come.

At nine in the morning on Thursday, Samuel told his granddaughter, Loraine to go to Isabella's room to remove all the gauze on her body.

Then, Isabella would be fed the medicine that he had prepared for her a long time ago.

Meanwhile, Harold was waiting outside the door, looking anxious like a cat on a hot tin roof.

The sight of it made Samuel smile, but he didn't say anything.

It seems like the God of War who had fought an alliance army of a million soldiers would still have times when he's nervous. What a rare sight to behold!

“Grandpa, I have removed all the gauze on Ms. Turner. You can bring the medicine in now.”

After waiting for more than half an hour, they finally heard Loraine's voice coming from inside the room.

Hence, Harold immediately took the bowl of medicine with him, opened the door, and entered the room.