

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good #Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 181 - Read Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 181

“What games do you want to play?”

Seeing that the basket was full of game coins, Becky suddenly smiled. “I want to play all of them,” she said.

Becky had loved playing arcade games as a young girl and had often come to the arcade after school with Jessie and their friends.

They were so good at it that they often won heaps of tickets that they could exchange for prizes. The manager had become worried and allowed them to play the games for free under the condition that they couldn't exchange the tickets for prizes.

Becky and Jessie had played the games for fun. They didn't like the prizes very much, but they were of the opinion that it would be a waste if they gave them up even after winning fair and square.

They had agreed to the manager since they could play the games for free.

However, Becky's visits to the arcade had drastically reduced once she had started university. And it had stopped altogether since she had married Rory.

The Casper family needed a gentle, considerate woman without habits like playing arcade games. To become a wife that met their standards, Becky hadn't done a lot of things that she loved during her three-year-long marriage with Rory. She hadn't played the drums, entered the arcade, or even visited her parents.

In hindsight, she thought of everything back then as ridiculous.

While Becky was distracted by these thoughts, Devin raised his hands to cover her eyes and said, “How about we play a different game today?”

Becky turned towards Devin, but his hands remained over her eyes, preventing her from seeing anything. But she believed that he wouldn't do anything bad to her in a public place like this.

“What do you have in mind?” she asked with a smile.

“I'll cover your eyes and play the role of guide. You will be the driver. Okay?”

Becky's smile faded at Devin's words. "I don't think that's a good idea."

"Really? But you haven't tried it yet. How do you know it's not good?" Devin whispered in Becky's ear. She could hear the smile in his voice.

Devin sat down in Becky's seat and retracted his hands. He pulled Becky to sit in front of him, saying, "The unknown is the most exciting."

He covered Becky's eyes again, this time with one hand, and pressed the start button with the other.

"Are you ready, Becky?"

It was a 5D racing video game in which they could virtually feel the collision and fly.

Before Becky could react, the car drove out, hitting the guardrail beside the track.

The chair monitored the collision. When Becky leaned forward at the impact, the inertia almost immediately pulled her back and she thumped heavily into Devin's chest.

Devin placed his chin on Becky's shoulder, taking her by surprise. "You just hit the guardrail on the left."

When Becky didn't react, Devin placed one hand on hers and helped turn the wheel, saying, "You are now in the middle of the road. There is an obstacle on the left which we will go through. There is an obstacle on the left again..."

Becky could hear Devin's deep voice and felt his warmth on her ear when he spoke.

She was embarrassed and in this process, accidentally rammed the car into the wall.

A bang sounded at the impact. The chair bucked as it caught the collision and Devin gripped Becky's waist a little tighter.

Becky pushed his hand away as she said coldly, "It's not funny, Devin."

Devin frowned at her before saying, "How about changing roles?"

Becky moved his hands even farther away and jumped off the seat. "I don't want to play any games."

Devin followed her and cocked his head to look at her. "Are you angry?"

Becky didn't say anything.

But Devin had just crossed a line he shouldn't have.

Read Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 181 - The hottest series of the author Kesley Peht

In general, I really like the genre of stories like Divorce Has Never Felt This Good stories so I read extremely the book. Now comes with many extremely book details. I can't get out of reading! Read the Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 181 story today. ^^

Devin smiled and ran his hand over Becky's head as if coaxing a child. "Don't be angry. What do you want? I'll get it for you."

Becky glanced at him but didn't say anything. After a while, she softened a little as she replied, "No, thanks. I don't want anything."

Devin grabbed her hand and before Becky could react, he guided it to slap himself across the face.

The sound attracted people's attention.

Becky stood there, shocked. When she recovered, she quickly withdrew her hand and demanded, "What are you doing, Devin?"

"Aren't you unhappy? You are free to vent your anger whenever you feel this way. Don't hold back."

Devin paused before continuing, "It might not be convenient for you to vent your anger on Rory when he makes you upset, but you are free to show your emotions in front of me and scold me when I do something wrong."

Devin had a cool smile on his face as he said this. He somehow looked pitiful.

Becky looked at him and his expression reminded her of what had happened over those three years. She felt sorry and made to apologize. "I am sorry, but I wasn't angry."

She was just tired.

"I know you are not angry. You just don't like me," Devin said self-deprecatingly. "Let me drive you back."

Becky looked at him, wanting to say something but couldn't find the right words.

On the way home, the car was filled with silence.

Becky turned to look at Devin and felt guilty for the first time.

She knew that Devin just wanted to cheer her up.

He hadn't done anything wrong.

Twenty-five minutes later, the car rolled to a stop. Devin handed the umbrella to Becky. "I'm sorry for what I did tonight. Good night." This was the first time he hadn't exited the car to open the door for her.

Becky took the umbrella and looked at Devin. She wanted to say something, but all she ended up saying was, "Good night."

She thought their current relationship was fine as it was. After all, she didn't want to date anyone right now.

Becky got out of the car, umbrella in hand. She pulled on her coat subconsciously as the wind blew cold around her.

But as she pulled, she realized that she was wearing Devin's coat.

She turned, wanting to return it to Devin, but he had already driven away.

Becky watched the retreating car and smiled. "Is he giving up so soon?"

She thought it reasonable that Devin, a playboy who had spent so much time and effort pursuing her, gave up when he failed.

Becky didn't have any feelings for Devin. She just felt guilty, thinking that she might hurt him tonight.

But it would be a good thing if Devin finally gave up on pursuing her.

Becky's guilt lessened at this thought and she went into the apartment building, still holding the umbrella.

She didn't look back, which was why she didn't see Devin drive back just two minutes later.

When the car stopped, Devin rolled down the window. His eyes soon found the window to Becky's apartment and continued to stare at it for a long time.

Giving up?

Impossible!

Sometimes, pursuing a girl required a strategy.

Becky turned on the light in her apartment.

Devin's eyes lit up and a smile crept up his lips at this.

Read Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 182 - The hottest series of the author Kesley Peht

In general, I really like the genre of stories like Divorce Has Never Felt This Good stories so I read extremely the book. Now comes with many extremely book details. I can't get out of reading! Read the Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 182 story today. ^^

Becky returned to her apartment to change her shoes. As she looked at the white flat shoes on her feet, she thought about how she was forced to slap Devin just half an hour ago and couldn't help but smile.

Devin was really good at chasing girls.

But the last thing that playboys like him had was patience.

Becky shook herself out of these thoughts of Devin and took off her shoes.

She felt much better after what had happened tonight.

She took a shower and soon fell asleep.

But there was someone who had trouble sleeping.

The event that had happened to Denise at tonight's banquet had been unprecedented for her. It was supposed to have happened to Becky but it had fallen upon her instead. She was fuming as she returned home.

What was worse, Rory had not only refused to help her but had also warned her off from making any more trouble.

Denise couldn't hold back her anger. She gritted her teeth as she thought of the thing she had overheard and pulled out her phone to make a call.

The night was quiet.

Rory sat on the sofa in the silent apartment, a cigarette between his fingers. His phone was on the table, the picture that Aiken had sent open on the screen.

He took a puff before leaning over and deleting the photo.

By the next morning, the upper class in Courtbush knew about what had happened to Denise at the banquet.

Denise had become a laughingstock. Nobody dared talk about it in front of her, keeping in mind the Casper family's status. But they weren't beyond discussing it behind her back.

And almost as quickly, Elmore learned about it. Denise was scared that he would conduct a thorough investigation into it. So she replied stoically, "Rory is investigating it, Grandpa."

Denise didn't dare ask Elmore to look into it. After his irritation with Raina, he even proposed to let Becky back into the Casper family.

Yesterday, he had asked Denise if Becky had forgiven her and whether she had put in a good word for Rory at last night's banquet.

Denise wasn't stupid. She understood what Elmore was thinking about.

If Elmore found out that she had secretly schemed against Becky, she would receive more punishments.

Denise quit her plan of making trouble for Becky after hearing Elmore's questions.

However, at lunch with Mara, Denise learned that she had become the laughingstock and her irritation with Becky returned in full force. She decided to take revenge.

Denise's expression darkened at these sarcastic words and she asked people to post the information that she had prepared.

She couldn't bear to be humiliated like this!

People online were quite interested in the explosive news that Denise had provided. After all, it was hot gossip about some of the most prestigious families in the city.

In less than two hours, Becky had suddenly become the other woman in Rory and Raina's relationship.

People also began to attack Only I Know, the comic book that Becky had created. They thought she was shameless to express her feelings for Rory when the latter already had a girlfriend.

Not long after this news was released, people began to comment that Becky deserved to be dumped by Rory. They were attacking her for coming between Rory and Raina.

Becky returned to her apartment to change her shoes. As she looked at the white flat shoes on her feet, she thought about how she was forced to slap Devin just half an hour ago and couldn't help but smile.

Devin was really good at chasing girls.

But the last thing that playboys like him had was patience.

Becky shook herself out of these thoughts of Devin and took off her shoes.

She felt much better after what had happened tonight.

She took a shower and soon fell asleep.

But there was someone who had trouble sleeping.

The event that had happened to Denise at tonight's banquet had been unprecedented for her. It was supposed to have happened to Becky but it had fallen upon her instead. She was fuming as she returned home.

What was worse, Rory had not only refused to help her but had also warned her off from making any more trouble.

Denise couldn't hold back her anger. She gritted her teeth as she thought of the thing she had overheard and pulled out her phone to make a call.

The night was quiet.

Rory sat on the sofa in the silent apartment, a cigarette between his fingers. His phone was on the table, the picture that Aiken had sent open on the screen.

Read Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 183

Novel Divorce Has Never Felt This Good has been updated Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 183 with many climactic developments What makes this series so special is the names of the characters ^^ . If you are a fan of the author Kesley Peht, you will love reading it! I'm sure you won't be disappointed when you read. Let's read the novel Divorce Has Never Felt This Good now HERE.

Reading Novel Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 183

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 183 novel Divorce Has Never Felt This Good

It was more than three hours before the news reached Becky.

When public opinion had first formed, Becky had been in a meeting and had no idea about what had happened.

When Jessie received the news, she called Becky immediately. But she didn't answer her phone.

Jessie was furious at the people attacking Becky online. She instructed Payne to investigate and find out the source of the news.

Becky had left her phone in her office before going into the meeting. When she came back and checked it, Jessie had called her multiple times and sent dozens of messages.

By the time Becky learned of the ins and outs of the matter, the attack had become overwhelming. People were calling her names, including the other woman, and branding her love as valueless. Even Jessie and Payne's joint efforts were in vain.

The last straw for Becky was when she learned that even Only I Know was under attack. She wasn't just annoyed.

People who had once praised it were the ones attacking it.

Becky went through some of the comments before bursting into laughter.

She ended up getting punished for the mistakes she made when she was young.

Becky knew who was behind all of this.

She had been lenient enough to allow Denise to cross the line over and over again without retribution. But Denise had gone too far this time.

Becky laughed as she looked over the online criticism. She said to Talia, "Talia, please make an appointment with Elmore."

She didn't want to see anyone from the Casper family. But she would make Denise pay for what she had done.

Talia, too, had just learned of this nastiness and was beyond furious. But Becky's words stunned her for a moment. She recovered soon enough to nod, pull out her mobile phone, and leave the room to call Carl.

Payne reverted to Jessie with the news that Denise had orchestrated this whole circus.

Jessie erupted with anger. She hung up and immediately drove to Crowbar Technologies.

She was so angry, she ignored the receptionist and barreled into the elevator.

Jessie had long wanted to beat Rory. But she hadn't been brave enough to confront him and Becky had asked her not to think about it. That was why Jessie hadn't done anything so far.

But she couldn't bear it anymore.

When the elevator stopped on Rory's floor, Jessie exited it in a rush. Lowell stepped forward to stop her, but she merely waved him away and pushed the door open. "Are you a fucking man or not, Rory?" she demanded.

The senior executives in the office, who were in the middle of a meeting with Rory, were stunned. Rory's face clouded as he said sharply, "Watch your mouth."

Jessie sneered at him. "Do you think the Casper family can push Becky around just because she is softhearted? Becky married you because she didn't know you all that well. Now that you are divorced, why do you still treat her like that?"

Jessie rushed over to him, her fists up, but Rory dodged her blows. She was so angry, she grabbed something from the desk and threw it at him. "You are the most disgusting coward of a man I have ever seen! How ridiculous that Becky loved you for more than ten years! She must be crazy! She must be crazy to have loved you! Did she do anything wrong? Since junior high school, she..."

Jessie stopped abruptly, suddenly realizing what she was doing. She gritted her teeth, grabbed a pile of folders, and threw them at Rory's face. She then turned around and hurried out of the room.

"Oh my God! I was so mad that I said something wrong."

Update of Divorce Has Never Felt This Good by Kesley Peht

With the author's famous Divorce Has Never Felt This Good series authorName that makes readers fall in love with every word, go to chapter Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 184 readers Immerse yourself in love anecdotes, mixed with plot demons. Will the next chapters of the Divorce Has Never Felt This Good series are available today. Key: Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 184

"Jessie Walker!" Rory called.

Jessie realized that she shouldn't have told Rory about Becky having been in love with him for more than ten years.

So she left before she could do any more damage.

Rory reached out to stop her, but it was late.

“Lowell, stop her!” Rory ordered his assistant.

Lowell, who was standing at the door, chased after Jessie at Rory’s furious shout.

“Miss Walker, please wait a moment. Mr. Casper has something to say.”

But before Lowell could finish talking, Jessie kicked him away and rushed into the elevator.

Lowell failed to catch up with her, and as the elevator doors closed shut, Jessie breathed a sigh of relief.

But it didn’t last long. When she realized what she had done, Jessie grabbed her hair in frustration and slapped herself twice.

What had she done? Why couldn’t she hold her tongue?

Lowell hadn’t expected Jessie to kick and knock him down. And by the time he got back to his feet, the elevator doors had closed.

Rory emerged from the office, his expression clouded.

Lowell was nervous. “I failed to stop her, Mr. Casper.”

Rory had seen Jessie kick Lowell. He looked at the people who had gathered around and barked out, “Is it funny to you?”

The senior executives who had been in Rory’s office when Jessie had barged in and shouted at Rory were still stunned.

But as Rory scolded them, they quickly lowered their heads and left.

“Come in,” Rory said to Lowell.

Lowell trembled, his hands and feet going cold.

He watched as Rory entered his office before taking a deep breath and following him in.

“Close the door,” Rory said, frowning at him.

Lowell closed the door before turning to Rory and said timidly, “Mr. Casper.”

Lowell knew that he had made multiple mistakes in his job. He not only failed to prevent Jessie from making trouble but also failed to stop her from leaving.

Lowell's heart sank at this thought.

Rory glanced at Lowell and asked, "Did you hear what she just said?"

Lowell was surprised, thinking that he had misheard. He looked at Rory's cold eyes before replying quickly, "No, I didn't."

It was impossible for Lowell to not hear it clearly. After all, Jessie had spoken so loudly that even the assistants in another office had heard every word.

But Lowell knew that whatever Jessie had said wasn't something that Rory's subordinates could say to him. So he didn't dare admit that he had heard it.

Rory sneered. "What did she say? Repeat it."

He paused before continuing, "If you don't, you'll lose your year-end bonus."

Lowell froze. He looked at Rory, trying to gauge if he was serious from his expression. Realizing Rory wasn't joking, he carefully repeated what Jessie had just said. "Are you a fucking man or not, Rory? Do you think—"

"You don't have to repeat what she scolded me!" Rory interrupted him angrily.

Update of Divorce Has Never Felt This Good by Kesley Peht

With the author's famous Divorce Has Never Felt This Good series authorName that makes readers fall in love with every word, go to chapter Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 185 readers Immerse yourself in love anecdotes, mixed with plot demons. Will the next chapters of the Divorce Has Never Felt This Good series are available today. Key: Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 185

Lowell suddenly realized what Rory was getting at and immediately recited, "How ridiculous that Becky loved you for more than ten years! She must be crazy! She must be crazy to have loved you! Did she do anything wrong? Since junior high school, she..."

Lowell paused before adding, "That's what Miss Walker said."

Jessie had said a lot, but most of those words had been to scold Rory. Lowell had omitted that part after having been at the receiving end of Rory's warning glare.

He realized why Rory asked him to repeat what Jessie had said.

Jessie's words had shocked Lowell, too. According to what he knew, Becky and Rory had met on a night five years ago. Rory had done a thorough investigation. Becky hadn't been the one to set the trap for Rory, and she hadn't been waiting for Rory either.

They obviously didn't know each other before that night.

But Jessie had said that Becky had loved Rory for more than ten years.

Rory was shocked to hear it, and so was Lowell.

Jessie hadn't explained herself after having told him something so important.

Lowell had noticed that Rory and Becky didn't have any proper communication after their divorce.

Maybe all Rory wanted to know was if Becky had loved him for so long.

After all, even if a person could live a hundred years, ten years were a huge part of their life to discount easily.

Becky was only twenty-seven years old. If she had loved Rory for so long, she had devoted half her life to Rory.

This was a shocking fact, bordering on unbelievable.

Rory's expression shifted at Lowell's words.

He had thought that the story in the comic book had been especially changed to cater to the market. He knew that Becky loved him, but he hadn't expected her to have loved him for so long.

But here was Becky's friend, telling him about Becky's longstanding love for him.

Rory looked at Lowell in disbelief but soon came to himself and said, "Don't talk to anyone about what Jessie just said. If I hear any discussion about what happened today..."

Rory's expression was stormy. Lowell knew what Rory meant even before Rory could finish his words since he had worked for Rory for years together.

"Okay, Mr. Casper."

"Get out!"

Lowell hesitated, looking at Rory, intending to ask if he was still going to get his year-end bonus, but he didn't dare mention it. He noticed that Rory was furious, so he walked out of the office.

The door closed, leaving Rory standing alone in his office.

The office was a mess, the documents that Jessie had thrown everywhere in her anger still littered on the floor.

Rory's head was a lot messier than the office was.

He opened the drawer, took out a cigarette, and lit it.

How was it even possible that Becky had loved him for more than ten years?

Jessie must have exaggerated the number.

Rory was relieved at this thought.

He stubbed the cigarette in the ashtray before calling Lowell. "Ask someone to clean the office."

After that, Rory hung up.

He picked his coat up and walked out of the office.

Read Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 186

Novel Divorce Has Never Felt This Good has been updated Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 186 with many climactic developments What makes this series so special is the names of the characters ^^ . If you are a fan of the author Kesley Peht, you will love reading it! I'm sure you won't be disappointed when you read. Let's read the novel Divorce Has Never Felt This Good now HERE.

Reading Novel Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 186

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 186 novel Divorce Has Never Felt This Good

Carl was surprised to see that Talia was calling him. He checked the phone number again to ascertain that it was indeed her before answering the phone. "Hello, Miss Murray. Carl Bryant speaking."

Becky had taught Carl a lesson, which had him terrified of communicating with her staff.

Talia didn't have a good impression of the Casper family, but she was always polite. She had developed and cultivated this trait during the time she had worked for Stevie. "Hello, Mr. Bryant. This is Talia Murray, Miss Ramos' secretary. Miss Ramos wants to meet Mr. Casper. Would tonight work?"

Talia's words surprised Carl. Becky voluntarily making an appointment to meet Elmore was unexpected, but Carl was not in a position to answer Talia right away. "I'll have to check with Mr. Casper. Could I call you back?" he asked.

"Okay, thank you."

Carl hung up and immediately made his way to see Elmore.

Elmore listened to Carl before saying excitedly, "Of course! Why not?"

He paused before saying rather smugly, "See? Becky is just too arrogant. She's now trying to find a way to meet us after we've shown our sincerity."

Now that he had the jarring experience with Raina, Elmore's attitude towards Becky changed.

"Get back to Becky's secretary. I'd like to invite Becky to dinner with the Casper family."

Elmore also planned to ask Rory to come back home, with the intention of creating a chance for Becky and Rory to be together. He believed that if they met frequently, they would get back together. After all, Becky had feelings for Rory.

The more Elmore thought about it, the happier he became.

But Carl was a little embarrassed as he took Becky's reply to him. "Mr. Casper, it seems that Miss Ramos would like to invite you to dinner."

Elmore was stunned for a moment. But he soon came to his senses, waved his hand, and said, "Fine. So be it. Young people are always so arrogant."

Now that he understood that Becky was still angry, he would give her one more out.

Carl nodded and exited the room. He called Talia and relayed Elmore's answer. But Talia had something else to add according to Becky's instructions. "Please ask Mr. Casper to bring Denise along. Miss Ramos said that there is some misunderstanding between Denise and her and hopes to clear it up tonight."

Carl had the feeling that there was something strange going on. But he could find nothing wrong with Talia's attitude towards him.

So he had no choice but to agree. "Okay. See you tonight."

“See you.”

Carl then told Elmore what Becky’s secretary had said.

At this, Elmore thought that Becky was going to reconcile with the Casper family and was instantly happier. “That’s fine. Misunderstandings should be resolved. Denise did go too far. Now that Becky wants to clear the air, it’s not a big deal to ask Denise to apologize again. Tell Denise not to go anywhere else tonight.”

Carl nodded and said, “Yes, sir.”

He then went looking for Denise.

Coincidentally, Denise was at home, happily browsing the comments section online. She had even created a new account just to like the comments that were scolding Becky. But she soon began to get bored of doing it alone and thought that it wasn’t enough. So she paid people to do it with her. Soon enough, an article ripping Becky’s reputation apart began trending.

Just as Denise was savoring her revenge, a knock sounded on her door.

Denise guiltily put down the iPad and hurried to open the door. “Does Grandpa have something to talk to me about?”

“He has asked you to attend a dinner with him tonight.”

“Oh, I see!” Denise said, nodding. She made to close the door when a question came to her mind. “Who is the dinner invite from?”

Carl looked up and said, “Becky Ramos.”

Read Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 187 TODAY

The novel Divorce Has Never Felt This Good has been updated Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 187 with many unexpected details, removing many love knots for the male and female lead. In addition, the author Kesley Peht is very talented in making the situation extremely different. Let’s follow the of the Divorce Has Never Felt This Good HERE. Keywords are searched:

Novel Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 187 Novel Divorce Has Never Felt This Good by Kesley Peht

DIVORCE HAS NEVER FELT THIS GOOD

Carl was surprised to see that Talia was calling him. He checked the phone number again to ascertain that it was indeed her before answering the phone. "Hello, Miss Murray. Carl Bryant speaking."

Becky had taught Carl a lesson, which had him terrified of communicating with her staff.

Talia didn't have a good impression of the Casper family, but she was always polite. She had developed and cultivated this trait during the time she had worked for Stevie. "Hello, Mr. Bryant. This is Talia Murray, Miss Ramos' secretary. Miss Ramos wants to meet Mr. Casper. Would tonight work?"

Talia's words surprised Carl. Becky voluntarily making an appointment to meet Elmore was unexpected, but Carl was not in a position to answer Talia right away. "I'll have to check with Mr. Casper. Could I call you back?" he asked.

"Okay, thank you."

Carl hung up and immediately made his way to see Elmore.

Elmore listened to Carl before saying excitedly, "Of course! Why not?"

He paused before saying rather smugly, "See? Becky is just too arrogant. She's now trying to find a way to meet us after we've shown our sincerity."

Now that he had the jarring experience with Raina, Elmore's attitude towards Becky changed.

"Get back to Becky's secretary. I'd like to invite Becky to dinner with the Casper family."

Elmore also planned to ask Rory to come back home, with the intention of creating a chance for Becky and Rory to be together. He believed that if they met frequently, they would get back together. After all, Becky had feelings for Rory.

The more Elmore thought about it, the happier he became.

But Carl was a little embarrassed as he took Becky's reply to him. "Mr. Casper, it seems that Miss Ramos would like to invite you to dinner."

Elmore was stunned for a moment. But he soon came to his senses, waved his hand, and said, "Fine. So be it. Young people are always so arrogant."

Now that he understood that Becky was still angry, he would give her one more out.

Carl nodded and exited the room. He called Talia and relayed Elmore's answer. But Talia had something else to add according to Becky's instructions. "Please ask Mr. Casper to bring Denise along. Miss Ramos said that there is some misunderstanding between Denise and her and hopes to clear it up tonight."

Carl had the feeling that there was something strange going on. But he could find nothing wrong with Talia's attitude towards him.

So he had no choice but to agree. "Okay. See you tonight."

"See you."

Carl then told Elmore what Becky's secretary had said.

At this, Elmore thought that Becky was going to reconcile with the Casper family and was instantly happier. "That's fine. Misunderstandings should be resolved. Denise did go too far. Now that Becky wants to clear the air, it's not a big deal to ask Denise to apologize again. Tell Denise not to go anywhere else tonight."

Carl nodded and said, "Yes, sir."

He then went looking for Denise.

Coincidentally, Denise was at home, happily browsing the comments section online. She had even created a new account just to like the comments that were scolding Becky. But she soon began to get bored of doing it alone and thought that it wasn't enough. So she paid people to do it with her. Soon enough, an article ripping Becky's reputation apart began trending.

Just as Denise was savoring her revenge, a knock sounded on her door.

Denise guiltily put down the iPad and hurried to open the door. "Does Grandpa have something to talk to me about?"

"He has asked you to attend a dinner with him tonight."

"Oh, I see!" Denise said, nodding. She made to close the door when a question came to her mind. "Who is the dinner invite from?"

Carl looked up and said, "Becky Ramos."

Read Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 187 TODAY

DIVORCE HAS NEVER FELT THIS GOOD

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 189

Chapter 189 Not Necessary Ye

Carl's words did the job, convincing Denise to finally open the door. She looked at Carl and said, "I did something wrong. What should I do?"

Carl frowned as he said, "Correct your mistakes."

Denise knew that if she didn't go to that dinner tonight, Elmore would punish her severely.

But if she went there, Becky certainly wouldn't make it easy for her.

She was now in a dilemma.

Denise had never been so scared. She decided to choose the less harmful option.

No matter how angry Elmore was with her, he was still her grandfather. If she was lucky, he would only give her a lecture.

But if she refused to go to the dinner...

Denise couldn't even imagine what would happen. So she followed Carl downstairs. "Grandpa," she said carefully as she saw Elmore.

Elmore glanced at Denise unhappily and said, "Don't waste time."

Denise knew that she was on the verge of a disaster and didn't dare say anything.

On the way to dinner, Elmore contemplated calling Rory. He didn't notice that there was something wrong with Denise.

But he listened to Carl and gave up on the idea of calling Rory. After all, this was the first time that Becky had invited them to dinner. Only he and Denise were invited. If Rory ended up coming, it might anger Becky.

If Becky's temper were to be taken into consideration, Elmore thought that she might get angry since she didn't invite Rory.

The car soon stopped in front of the hotel. Denise got out of the car but wanted to run away almost immediately. Elmore said to her rather irritably, "Look at you. You don't look like a lady from an eminent family. You are hunching. Straighten your back!"

He glared at Denise, causing her legs to tremble weakly. She gritted her teeth and straightened her back before walking inside.

Becky and Talia were already there. Becky looked through the printed screenshots of the surveillance video that Talia had found.

The evidence that Denise had framed Becky was irrefutable. Becky wanted to see how they would defend themselves.

Once Becky had gone through them, she said, "Put them away."

She didn't need them yet. Moreover, she couldn't show her trump card right off the bat.

Talia had barely finished putting away the pictures when the door was pushed open. A waiter led Elmore, Carl, and Denise in.

Becky looked at Elmore and Denise.

"Long time no see, Mr. Casper."

Elmore did not smile. He was a serious man who liked to maintain a serious facade at all times. He didn't look down on Becky now, but he wasn't warm to her either. "Hello, Miss Ramos."

He put away his walking stick and sat down.

"Denise, you don't look well today," said Becky, glancing at Denise.

Denise began trembling at Becky's words, almost dropping the teacup in her hand.

Talia poured them some tea as Becky handed the menu to Elmore and said, "I didn't know what you like to eat. Please order for yourself."

"Don't stand on ceremony. I'm not that particular," Elmore said.

Although his expression was still serious, his attitude improved a lot.

Becky smiled and handed Denise another menu.

Denise took the menu without a word.

Becky continued to look at Denise with a mocking smile.

Carl knew that Elmore and Denise would face a hard time at this meal.

He sighed inwardly. But it was too late to do anything now.

Update of Divorce Has Never Felt This Good

Announcement Divorce Has Never Felt This Good has updated Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 189

DIVORCE HAS NEVER FELT THIS GOOD

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 190

“I’m sorry I refused your invitation last time. I had a really tight schedule,” Becky said apologetically to Elmore, which made him more convinced that she was here to make peace.

He had a serious expression. But upon hearing what Becky said, he gave her a smile. “It’s absolutely fine. I understand how busy you must be now. You are a Ramos, after all.”

“Not as busy as you think.” Becky chuckled. “Something unusual happened that day.”

Becky’s statement contradicted her initial assertion that she had a tight schedule.

Ordinarily, Elmore would have noticed and questioned her further, but he didn’t.

He was more concerned about the purpose of the dinner.

Unlike Elmore, Denise understood what Becky meant. She glanced at Becky and met the latter's searching gaze. Guilt pricked her heart and she looked away.

Becky made sure to apologize before they ate. After she apologized, Elmore felt more comfortable.

In a few minutes, the dishes were served, and Becky suggested that they should eat first.

Elmore, who was very keen on getting Becky and Rory back together, wanted to bring it up as soon as possible. He stretched his hand underneath the table and tapped Denise's knee. "Don't you owe Miss Ramos an apology?"

Denise had been nervous since she entered the room. Elmore's touch came unexpectedly, and she trembled. Her spoon fell off her hand and dropped to the floor.

The room fell into silence. The others turned to look at Denise.

Elmore fumed at Denise's clumsiness. He considered it impolite and a lack of good education for her spoon to fall to the floor.

Becky chuckled and said, "You seem nervous, Denise. Is something wrong?"

Elmore answered, "I think she is trying to pick her words carefully. She doesn't want to say something wrong."

"Is that true?" Becky didn't take her eyes off Denise.

"I'm sorry, Becky. Everything that happened was my fault. Please, accept my apology," Denise said, forcing a smile.

Denise picked up a cup of tea and said, "I'm sorry for offending you in the past. I promise not to do it again. Please, let this cup of tea be a sign that I have earned your forgiveness."

“Wait.” Becky stopped Denise as soon as she started gulping down the cup of tea. “What exactly are you apologizing for, Denise? You have offended me in so many ways.”

This time, Elmore wasn't ignorant of the sarcasm in Becky's words. However, he didn't understand what she meant exactly and chose to remain silent.

But Denise understood what Becky was talking about.

She knew tonight wasn't going to be easy. Bracing herself for whatever came out of this, she said to Becky, “I know I have offended you in so many ways, and this is why I seek your apology. If there is something more I can do to please you, do let me know.”

Becky smiled at her pretense and turned to Talia. Becky took some pictures from Talia and threw them to Elmore and Denise. “The horrible stench of your fake sincerity makes me sick. I can still feel the heat of the trouble you caused me in the past, and yet you caused me some more today.” The smile on Becky's face faded. Now, she looked angry. She looked at Denise, who stared down in shame.

“Denise, you are indeed sincere.” Becky's sarcasm struck deep into Denise's heart.

Read the hottest Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 190