

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good

Chapter 297

Chapter 297 It's Our Fault

When Stevie knew that Elmore was going to visit him, he immediately put down his work and rushed back. Not long after Stevie started his career more than two decades ago, he cooperated with Elmore, whose success was undeniable due to his boldness. It was the same reason Stevie didn't like Elmore's way of doing things. After that, Becky married into the Casper family and suffered a lot. Because of that, his disgust for Elmore grew even more. The rumor about the rekindling of Becky's relationship with Rory spread wildly a while ago. It was natural for Stevie and Vivien to worry about it. However, Becky explained it was a misunderstanding and that she would fix it. Becky was an independent woman. With that, Stevie believed in his daughter. So along with his wife, they didn't pry further, not wanting to make her feel bad. But now, Elmore had traveled a long way from Courtbush to Bluepond to visit him. Stevie figured it must have something to do with Devin and Rory. Elmore came back home around four in the afternoon. Vivien happened to be at home that day. She unwillingly accommodated the unwanted guest with a fake smile. They exchanged pleasantries out of courtesy, though it was all an act. After all, Elmore was an elder who mastered being elusive through time. He was a cunning person indeed. On the other hand, Vivien couldn't help being annoyed with him. She had someone inform her husband at work to come home that instant. Upon hearing the sound of the car engine outside the villa, Vivien breathed a sigh of relief and continued with her coffee. Stevie opened the door and stepped out as soon as the vehicle stopped. He hurried upstairs, and once he got there, he saw Elmore sitting opposite his wife.

Stevie composed himself and entered the room, beaming politely. "Mr. Casper, it's been a while." "Mr. Ramos, it's been so long since we last met!". Elmore greeted back with a grin, albeit coughing. Upon noticing that, Stevie suddenly remembered that the elder was sent to the hospital in the middle of the night last week. The news was that Elmore was gravely ill. Even so, he seemed to be doing well right now. Stevie realized it was not the right time to bring it up. After he quickly came to his senses, he sat beside Vivien and asked, "Why didn't you tell me that you'd be coming here to Bluepond? I could have arranged for someone to pick you up." Elmore replied, laughing, "It's alright. It's not my first time coming here, not to mention that the purpose of my visit is to discuss an important matter with you." While Stevie had a rough guess, he pretended to be clueless about it. "May I ask what brought you here?". "Good news! It's good news," Elmore exclaimed, followed by a few coughs. Shifting his gaze to the man behind him, he ordered, "Carl, bring the file to Mr. Ramos." Carl swiftly took out the file he had already prepared in his briefcase, put it on the table, and faced the couple in front of him. "Mr. and Mrs. Ramos, this is the compensation Mr. Casper is giving to your daughter." After Carl's brief explanation, Elmore sighed. "It's our fault. I failed to discipline my descendants, leaving Becky to suffer at their hands. These days, every time I think of her, I feel I haven't fulfilled my responsibility as an elder. Otherwise, she wouldn't have been so disappointed to divorce Rory."