

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good

Chapter 300

Chapter 300 I Will Not Remarry Rory

Stevie and his wife blamed Elmore and wanted nothing to do with him, and Elmore too was unhappy with them. As soon as the car drove out of the villa, the smile that had been plastered on Elmore's face all through immediately faded. Carl looked at the cold expression on the old man's face, but didn't dare ask what was going on. Elmore's anger had been bottled up for so long that he hit his walking stick as hard as he could on the car floor and yelled, "Who gave them the right to say that to me? I'll see how long they'll keep this on!" Carl glanced at Elmore briefly, wondering what he had in mind now. Tentatively, he asked in a low voice, "What happened, Mr. Casper?" "Isn't it obvious? They said they don't care what people say. How could they say that to my face? I'd like to test and see how far they don't care!" Elmore snorted. "Devin stayed in Becky's apartment last night, didn't he?" Carl thought about it for a second and then answered, "I think so. He left at five o'clock this morning." "Becky has no morals whatsoever. If she wasn't Stevie's daughter, I would have never let her marry Rory." "I don't understand, sir." "I don't need you to. I want you to spread some news that Becky is pregnant with Rory's baby," Elmore said with a small smile at the corner of his lips.

Carl looked at his boss in shock. "But we don't have any evidence. Even if this gets out, no one will believe it." "Don't be a spoil joy, Carl!" Elmore snapped discontentedly at Carl. "It doesn't matter if it's the truth, and we don't need everyone to believe. Even if just a few people believe it, it's enough. Stevie and his wife said that they didn't give a damn about rumors, right? Well, let's see how they'll react when everyone starts talking about Becky being pregnant." Most people would have at the back of their minds that Becky was pregnant with Rory's child. Even if she refused to marry Rory, no man would marry her after hearing this. At that point, whether the rumor was true or not wouldn't matter. That was how rumors worked. Even if the Ramos family tried to bring the truth to light, the damage would have been done already. Everyone would think that they were instead trying to cover up the truth. "I understand, sir," Carl said with a small nod. Somewhat satisfied, Elmore closed his eyes and relaxed against the back of the chair. "Do this properly, and it shouldn't be traced back to our family." Carl nodded but didn't say anything. He didn't know how he was going to make it happen. As though Elmore could read his mind, he said, "Raina and Babette have already taken a lot of money from me. I think it's time for them to give me something in return." Carl was a little confused by what Elmore was implying. It was only after a while that it dawned on him. They couldn't have found anyone more suitable than the Morgan sisters to start the rumor. On his side, Stevie was still fuming. He had no idea Elmore was such a despicable man. When he had calmed down and gathered his wits, he called Becky.

Becky already found out from Talia that Elmore had gone to Bluepond to see her parents. When she heard what he did, she didn't know he could be so shameless. During her three years of marriage with Rory, he didn't show Becky any sign of love. Now that everything was over, Elmore still had the guts to go straight to her parents to propose another marriage. When Stevie was done explaining what happened, Becky laughed despite her anger. "Don't worry, Dad. I won't marry into the Casper family again. I won't make the same mistake twice." Elmore alone was too much for her handle. She didn't even want to begin thinking of the recognized troublemaker, Denise. Not just that, but she had no desire to wed Rory a second time. One time was enough, and the pain he had put her through was too much for her to forgive him.