

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good

Chapter 304

Chapter 304 He Is Like A Joke

Lowell was right behind Rory as the latter left the bathroom. Seeing his angry look, Lowell didn't dare to say anything to Rory. He knew better than to piss Rory off at a time like this. Rory stood still for a few moments before he began to walk toward the hotel entrance. His pace was so quick that it was hard for Lowell to keep up with him. Rory went straight to the stairs. This shocked Lowell as the elevator was right there, but Rory had already gone around the corner. Lowell couldn't understand why Rory would want to take the stairs and knew he couldn't leave him alone if he was that intoxicated. Lowell took the stairs quickly to catch up. As he reached the first floor, he could see Rory's figure. Rory watched Becky's car go by slowly as he reached the hotel entrance. Becky's car window was half open. Rory's and Becky's eyes met for a moment. He looked at her with some deep emotion etched on his face. His expression conveyed he was waiting for something Becky looked at him briefly and then averted her eyes. Her eyes closed and she leaned back into her car seat. What was Rory waiting for? Did he think she would thank him or apologize? Becky smiled slightly. It was the first time she thought of Rory as narcissistic. Rory watched Becky's car drive out of sight. He hadn't really thought she would leave without saying anything to him. Even though he had helped her and drunk too much for her, Becky hadn't even displayed any concern for him. He had taken the stairs to catch up with her and hear her response. It didn't matter what she would have said, Rory would've been happy just to hear her. Instead, she hadn't said a word and just left. Rory felt just like a joke. He should not have helped her. At first, he'd asked Lowell to refuse the invitation to the dinner, but he'd come anyway. He didn't know why he'd accepted. Now he felt he'd only done it to let Becky make a fool out of him. Lowell could see Rory was embarrassed. He waited a moment and then said, "Our car will come soon, Mr. Casper." Rory looked at Lowell. "Turn down any dinner invitation that Becky will attend in the future." Listening to Rory's stern words, Lowell now understood why he behaved so irrationally tonight. He was not Aiken, so he dared not do what Aiken would do. Lowell only nodded. "Yes, Mr. Casper." Rory had nothing else to say. He just stood there with a face like thunder. Some of the guests were alarmed when they saw the look on Rory's face. Thankfully, Rory's car arrived soon after that, and Lowell quickly opened the door so Rory could get in. Lowell was happy the driver would be in the car with them. He would not have to face Rory's anger alone. Twenty minutes later they were at a red light around the corner from Rory's apartment.

Lowell suddenly remembered something he had forgotten to tell Rory. He looked at Rory in the back seat in the rearview mirror. Rory seemed to be trying to take a nap. His eyes were closed, although he still looked hostile. Lowell paused and swallowed before opening his mouth to speak. "I have something to tell you, Mr. Casper." Rory did not answer. Lowell looked in the rearview mirror and tried once more. "Miss Ramos' secretary is investigating Betsy again."