

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good

Chapter 309

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good Chapter 309

Chapter 309 The Culpri

Jessie called Becky to find out what was going on. Becky just got off a plane and wasn't aware of the rumor. She thought Jessie was just lonely and answered the phone accordingly. "I don't have time to talk to you now, but we can have dinner tonight."

"Forget about dinner! I can't believe I am the last to know you're pregnant. How could you not tell me?"

Becky was so shocked she was speechless for a few moments. She thought maybe Jessie was drunk. "What do you mean by that, Jessie?"

"The internet is boiling over with news about you being pregnant. Why are you still pretending you're not? Is the father Rory or Devin?"

Jessie decided to kill Rory if the baby was his. She was going to get rid of that scumbag, Rory, so he couldn't hurt Becky anymore!

Becky was about to laugh because she knew it had to be a joke. She listened more closely to the seriousness in Jessie's tone, and realized her friend was not joking. "I'm not sure who told you I was pregnant, but I just got my period yesterday."

It was Jessie's turn to be stunned into silence. She finally responded after a while. "I don't understand, Becky. The news is all over the Internet. Some people even analyzed who the father might be. They even mentioned Fred and Vernon!"

It was then Becky knew there was an unfounded rumor spreading about her.

"I just stepped off the plane a few moments ago. I'll call you back after I check what is going on."

Becky hung up and looked over at Talia with shock.

Talia had a shocked expression as well, and Becky figured she must have heard the rumor already.

Talia hung up the phone when she realized Becky was staring at her. "Miss Ramos..."

Becky could only smile. "I have been with you in Fliatan these past days. You bought me painkillers when I started cramping last night, remember? You know that I am not pregnant."

Talia knew Becky was not pregnant and that she was on her period.

"I'll look into the rumor right away."

"I'll see what it says online," Becky replied as she nodded.

Becky went to Twitter first. There were over one hundred million views on the news of her pregnancy and over thirty million comments. The people online were openly discussing who the father of her child was.

The rumors and the analysis online were believable. If she had not been a part of it, Becky would have thought it was true.

It was incredulous to Becky that as soon as she came back, there was a pregnancy rumor about her. She felt so much anger that she laughed.

She was not a star or something. If she happened to be pregnant, it should be nobody's business but hers and that of her family.

Talia investigated what happened. After half an hour, she came back with a brief report. It showed the rumor originated in the upper-class circle.

"Find out who spread the rumor," Becky said with a frown.

Talia had someone already on the case. Stevie had probably already heard about it since the news was so widespread. "I have someone looking in on it. Don't you want to dispute the rumors online?"

"I think whoever started this would only get what they want if I did that," Becky replied. "Everyone would think the rumor must be true."

Public opinions were hard to dispute.

No matter what she did, it would almost certainly prove the rumor. Even if she posted a negative pregnancy test online, no one would believe it was real.

Becky thought it was best to keep quiet and try to find the culprit who started the rumor than to dispute the news and only make things worse.

She was going to find out who did this to solve her problem.