

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good

Chapter 102

Chapter 102 Becky Doesn't Love Him Anymore

Rory didn't have the patience to deal with Aiken's questions. "Get the fuck out!"

Without waiting for a response, he stormed off and locked himself in his study, leaving Aiken outside.

"What a prick!"

Aiken shook his head helplessly and trotted over to the door of Rory's study, only to find that he was locked out.

Aiken touched his nose sulkily. Thinking about the way Rory treated him just now, Aiken didn't have the courage to knock at the door again.

At a loss, Aiken sighed, turned around, and left.

Just as Aiken started the car, a thought suddenly occurred to him. "Does Rory regret divorcing Becky?"

A smile tugged at the corners of his mouth.

If that was the case, it would be really funny.

But he didn't dare to ask Rory this question. He had learned his lesson already.

With a snort, Aiken sped off.

Hearing the sound of the car starting, Rory, who was sitting on the sofa of his study, slowly opened his eyes.

After Aiken left, the villa became quiet once more, but Aiken's question kept echoing in Rory's ears.

Indeed, why did he go to Becky's apartment?

Even Rory himself didn't know the answer to this question. Last night, Raina had a high fever, so he kept her company until midnight. On his way back home, he subconsciously passed by Becky's apartment building.

Becky's apartment building was located downtown. At two o'clock in the morning, he parked his car on the side of the road. From the car window, he looked up at the apartment building where Becky lived in pensive silence.

Not long after they got married, Rory discovered that Becky loved him.

Truth be told, he never considered divorcing her. Perhaps it was because she was a good wife. Although there was always something unpleasant happening with her around, Becky never held him back.

That was exactly what he needed in a wife.

He grew up in the Casper family. He was used to seeing loveless marriages.

Although he never had sex with Becky, he never had an affair.

He respected the sanctity of their marriage and hoped that his wife could do the same.

Since Becky loved him, she seldom hung out with other men.

If she hadn't filed for divorce, they might've stayed together for the rest of their lives.

As time went by, he began to realize that his feelings for Raina were more of guilt than love.

However, there was no if. When he was planning to be a real couple with Becky, she proposed to divorce.

She loved him so much at the time. But after divorce, she seemed to have changed into a completely different person.

When she looked at him now, her eyes wouldn't light up. She even turned a blind eye to him.

At first, Rory thought that she was playing hard to get. But last night, when he saw her leave hand in hand with Devin, he suddenly realized that she didn't love him anymore.

But, even more surprisingly, he found that he couldn't accept this fact. He even went out of his way to advise Becky not to be fooled by Devin.

However, she was so stubborn and didn't listen to him.

Last night, it was cold and windy. Rory rolled the car window down and smoked a cigarette in front of Becky's apartment building. He could imagine Devin staying at her apartment.

While he now had feelings for Becky, she had already moved on.