

Divorce Has Never Felt This Good

Chapter 105

Chapter 105 It's Not Me

Denise was furious, and for a split second, her mind felt empty. But before she realized herself, Becky and Talia were already seated in the car.

Talia asked the driver to set out immediately, giving Becky no chance to attend to Denise's outburst.

As the car drove past Denise, she stomped her foot so hard. She glared at the car, raising a fist in anger.

"Becky! How dare you call me old?" Denise screamed after them.

Becky looked at her through the rearview mirror and smiled at her crazy countenance.

The car halted in front of a hotel in fifteen minutes, and the driver hastily alighted and got the door for Becky. "Thank you," she said with a smile.

"The pleasure is all mine, Miss Ramos."

Becky grinned with obvious pleasure.

Since her identity as a Ramos was revealed, many people tried to curry favor with her.

She understood that they were only treating her this way because she was Stevie's daughter, so she tried not to get so flattered.

Tonight's dinner was for the land in the north of the city. When people didn't know Becky's identity, Walton Garcia, a government official, refused to meet her.

Immediately after the news about who her father was got out, Walton's secretary booked an appointment with Talia yesterday, offering to have dinner together.

A lot of families were interested in the land, and Keenan Haynes made a lot of effort in securing it. Becky knew that it would be difficult to compete with him for the land.

The dinner was pleasant. However, Walton didn't give Becky any useful information.

Becky was not disappointed. Anyway, the Ramos family still had a chance.

"Thank you for having me, Mr. Garcia." Becky smiled broadly.

"Anytime, Miss Ramos. Stevie must be a proud father," Walton complimented.

"This way, Mr. Garcia."

"My regards to your father," Mr. Garcia said as he walked past her.

"Okay."

For a while, Becky watched Walton as he walked away. She looked at Talia afterward and said, "Let's get going."

"Alright, Miss. Ramos."

Becky and Talia took the elevator to the ground floor. As they walked out, they saw Babette striding into the hotel.

Babette was shocked to see Becky and her expression changed. Then, she forced a smile and said, "Hi, Becky. It's been a while."

"Indeed," Becky said with a faint smile.

Babette also knew Becky was Stevie's daughter.

Babette could not come to terms with the fact that Becky was now far wealthier than she could ever imagine.

Rory had sent Babette abroad because of the video and recordings uploaded by Becky six months ago. Although Babette had come back, she wasn't welcome by the Casper family.

The released video and recordings brought shame to the Casper family. Besides, Babette's husband, Amor, was dead. Elmore no longer treated Babette as a member of the family.

Babette wasn't comfortable that Becky was living a better life than she was. It filled her heart with bitterness.

The more Babette thought about it, the more envy took hold of her.

Although Babette knew that Becky was way out of her league now, she still tried to irritate Becky. "I wasn't the woman that night."

"Go ahead, Talia. I will join you in the car." Becky turned to look at Babette. For some reason, she was interested in whatever she had to say.

Glancing at Babette, Talia nodded and took her leave.

As Talia walked toward the door, her thoughts were filled with what Babette had to say to Becky.
