

Chapter 13 New Boyfriend

As Becky walked away, Denise was so angry that she wanted to catch up with her. However, Rory stopped her.

She looked back at him and shouted in an aggrieved tone, "Rory!"

But Rory only looked at her coldly. "Don't provoke her," he warned. 1

Denise wanted to fight back but shrank under his cold glare. "She was the one who hit me."

Rory let go of her hand and looked up at Becky, who had already walked out the door. He couldn't help but frown.

She had become so arrogant after three months.

Becky didn't look back. She went straight to the car.

It was just like Jessie said; it wasn't worth it to get angry with that man. 2

Talia cast a sidelong glance at Becky. Ever since they got in the car, Becky hadn't said a word and simply stared out the window with an indifferent expression. Obviously, Becky was in a bad mood.

"Miss Ramos?"

A hush had fallen over the car, so Talia couldn't help but call out to her.

Talia's voice pulled Becky back to reality. She turned her head to look at the hesitant Talia. When she saw that the latter seemed to want to say something, Becky couldn't help but chuckle. "Did I scare you just now?"

Talia shook her head and smiled wryly. "Are you sure you want to live in Courtbush for the next six months?"

Becky's eyebrows shot up. "Why not? Are you worried that I'll get back together with him?"

She was not that stupid.

Her actions spoke louder than her words.

Talia hummed thoughtfully. "Not exactly. It's just that, since we're in their territory, I'm worried they'll make trouble for you."

Becky broke into a wide grin. "Don't worry. I'm not a pushover."

She used to be weak and stupid enough to let the Casper family walk all over her. Now that she had figured everything out, she was determined to stand up for herself. ①

Talia seemed to want to say something more, but when she saw the smile on Becky's lips, she swallowed her words.

What Becky said made sense. Her father was Stevie Ramos. Who would dare to hurt her?

Denise got a slap in the face, but Rory didn't do anything about it. He even warned her not to provoke Becky. ①

As soon as Denise got home, she ran to Elmore to air out her grievances.

Over three months had passed but Elmore's anger towards Becky was still fresh. When he heard that the woman had come back, his rage flared up again.

Of course Denise exaggerated what happened to make Elmore even angrier. He decided to call Rory to order him to take Becky back the following day to apologize. ②

As soon as Rory returned to his apartment, his phone started to ring. With a stony expression, he went to the balcony to take the call. "Grandpa, I said that we're divorced."

"So what? If we tell the police what she has done, she'll be thrown into jail for a few months!"

Rory pulled at his tie and said impatiently, "What she posted online is true." 2

Elmore was stunned. The sound of the busy dial tone brought him back to his senses. Rory had hung up on him. 2

After hanging up, Rory threw the phone to the sofa and lit up a cigar.

After three months, Becky was now the manager of Fairway Group. The usually docile rabbit bared its teeth and waved its claws in front of him.

Rory sneered. "It's only been three months, yet you've forgotten how to behave yourself."

He was taking a long drag on the cigar when his phone started to ring again.

Rory glanced at the phone indifferently, having no intention to answer it.

But the person on the other end of the line didn't give up. When the second call came,

Rory finally walked over and picked up the phone. "What?" he snapped.

It was Aiken Evans. The music on the other end of the phone was deafening. Frowning irritably, Rory almost hung up right then and there.

"We are in ONE! You coming?"

"No," Rory replied bluntly.

When he was about to hang up the phone, Aiken's voice sounded again. "Is Becky back?"

"How did you know?"

"She's right in front of me!" Aiken clicked his tongue. "Oh, and her new boyfriend's here, too. Damn, he's hot!" 8
