

Chapter 83 Three Things

Although the Casper family was rich and powerful, it was the first time that they had seen so much gold in one place.

The gold bars glimmered under the lights. For a moment, everyone from the Casper family was stunned speechless. Finally, Elmore came to his senses and asked, "What does this mean?"

Stevie answered, "We don't like owing anyone. I think this is enough to cover Becky's expenses over the past three years in your family. Of course, if you feel it's not enough, just tell me the number and I'll wire the money to you immediately."

After a slight pause, he continued, "Now that we're willing to pay you what we owe you, let's make it clear just how much your family owes us."

Stevie had been working in the business for many years, and despite the fury raging in his veins, he was able to suppress his anger. When he said this, he didn't change his facial expression or his tone, but everyone present could feel the anger brewing inside him.

Elmore's expression suddenly turned dark. "I don't understand what you mean."

That was exactly what Stevie wanted to hear. "Then allow me to make it clear to you. Firstly, ever since Becky married Rory three years ago, she had been given the cold shoulder by Rory and Denise. Secondly, it's to be expected that Becky should've been free to do whatever she wants after divorcing Rory. However, Denise continued to make life hard for Becky. She not only had Becky kidnapped but also drugged her with an aphrodisiac. And, as though that wasn't evil enough, she hired people to rape Becky. Thirdly, she took a photo of me with my daughter and spread an ugly rumor that Becky was my mistress."

Stevie listed all three crimes at once, all the while looking straight at Elmore. "I hope you can explain these three things. We refused to sit back and watch while she hurt our daughter."

Vivien, who had been quiet, snorted. "Even ordinary families treat their daughters-in-law well. Yet you, the esteemed Casper family, treated my daughter like shit over the past three years."

Stevie locked eyes with Rory and demanded, "If you didn't like my daughter, why did you marry her? Even your sister-in-law, who you have an affair with, tried to frame my daughter. And how could you have forced Becky to kneel for an entire night for Babette? What right did you have to punish her? Why did you make things difficult for her over and over again? Today, if you don't give us a satisfactory explanation, we will reveal the truth to the public and let them be the judge!"

Stevie and Vivien spoke one after another, making Elmore's face turn paler and paler with shame.

The Ramos family's intention was clear: to avenge Becky. And it was all true. All three things that Stevie mentioned were the Casper family's fault.

If Becky was just an ordinary girl from a humble family, the Casper family would've just silenced them with money. But because Becky turned out to be Stevie's daughter, Elmore could do nothing about it.

Elmore racked his brains for excuses and said, "Well, it's inevitable for a young couple to have misunderstandings. Yes, Becky and Rory might've had an unpleasant marriage, so it's reasonable that she feels mad. But I refuse to accept your accusation that we treated Becky badly."

Turning to Becky, he cleared his throat and said, "Becky, you'd been married to Rory for three years. How could you make stories and lie to your parents just because you have a grudge against us?"

Becky suddenly burst into laughter. When she finally calmed down, she looked at Rory, who was standing quietly aside.

With a sneer, she said, "Rory, why don't you tell your family why we never had a child during our three-year marriage?"
