

Chapter 92 Something Meaningful

"Were you waiting for me?" Devin asked, laughing.

Becky picked up her bag, stood up, and looked at him.

"Would you please do me a favor?"

Devin looked at her and said with a smile, "Would you mind having a midnight snack with me? I can't drive as I just drank."

At this, Devin's secretary walked away.

Becky said, "I didn't drink."

"Shall we go then?"

"Okay."

As they talked, the elevator doors opened and Rory, Aiken, and their friends walked out.

Devin's eyes narrowed at the sight and he grabbed Becky's wrist, saying, "I'm a little drunk. Would you mind?"

Rory saw Devin holding Becky by the wrist when he emerged from the elevator.

Aiken, who had been talking, was also shocked at the sight. He recovered soon enough to greet them. "Becky, Mr. Stanley, what a coincidence."

Becky glanced in the direction of the familiar voice and found Aiken standing just behind Rory.

Becky didn't say anything and she wanted to get rid of Devin. But he staggered forward suddenly and brought his hand to rest on her waist as he said, "It's okay if you don't want me to hold your hand, but I hope you will support me like this."

Devin was so close to Becky, she could even feel his breath. She looked up at him and was surprised to see his charming eyes gazing back at her.

Becky pushed him away and said, "How about you call your secretary back?"

There was no need for a midnight snack now that Devin was drunk.

He withdrew his hand from her waist.

Becky's eyebrows shot up at this and she looked up at him, a faint smile on her lips.

Devin was looking back at her with a smile as he said, "I'm sober now."

Then, he looked up at Rory. "What a coincidence!"

Rory was staring at Devin and Becky, who were standing close to each other. From Rory's point of view, it looked like Devin was holding Becky in his arms.

Becky wasn't looking at Rory anymore.

Rory frowned, glanced at Devin and walked away immediately.

Now that they were divorced, what Becky did was none of his business.

He thought she was trying to attract his attention, and he found it naive. ⑤

Rory quickened his pace.

Aiken was stunned for a short moment before he recovered and went after Rory, sparing Becky and Devin a quick greeting.

Devin squinted at Rory's retreating figure before looking down at Becky and asking, "So shall we go for a midnight snack?"

Becky smiled as she looked up at him. "Did you do that on purpose?"

Devin replied with a question of his own. "Would you be angry if I did?"

"Not necessarily," Becky said. "I just don't think it was meaningful."

"Then let's do something meaningful."

Becky asked in confusion, "What is that?"

Devin suddenly smiled, his charming eyes lighting up in the process. "Be my girlfriend."

