

Divorcement 381

Chapter 381

Cristina gave Eugene a smug look, called a cab, and got in quickly.

Eugene stared after the cab. He had wanted to use Sarah to fight back against Cristina, but he had made a fool of himself. Cristina had just laughed at him in front of the bathroom. He thought Theresa's relationship with Cristina was weird. He didn't think they would like the same man. Besides, if it were true, they couldn't possibly get along that well.

Theresa and Charlie returned home with the children. The children went to their room for naps and Theresa gave Charlie his acupuncture. "Done."

Charlie said, "Thanks."

Theresa looked at him in surprise. "You're welcome." She turned her head and gathered her things.

Charlie watched her back. She was very thin and the sweater was too big on her.

Charlie took his phone and answered it. "Hello."

"Charlie!" yelled Sarah on the other end of the line, "I'm right in front of your house. Come out!"

On hearing her voice, Charlie hung up the phone.

Theresa asked, "Who was that?"

"Your sister," Charlie said impatiently. Sarah's call put him in a bad mood.

Chapter 383

Theresa looked at Sarah, surprised that she had come for this. She thought Sarah was really bold.

Charlie just stared at Sarah in silence, wondering where she got the nerve to question him.

Sarah said, "Charlie, you're a married man. It's shameless of you to pester me. Listen, you must tell Eugene that I have nothing to do with you, or I won't let you go."

Charlie raised his eyebrows slightly. "You won't let me go?" He wondered what Sarah would do to him.

Leticia was speechless, regretting letting Charlie get engaged to such a woman.

"You can't just come and go as you like." Charlie looked at her coldly. He had just seen what attitude she had toward Leticia.

Sarah looked at him. "So what?"

"Apologize."

Sarah sneered. "You and your wife encouraged Eugene to break up with me! Why should I apologize?" She was Charlie sneered at Sarah. "Okay." He looked calm as if it wasn't a big deal. He glanced at Jonathan, and Furious, Leticia asked Brenda to help her back to her room.

Jonathan asked Charlie, "Mr. Calsis, is that good?" He also thought Charlie was too lenient with Sarah.

Charlie asked rhetorically, "What's wrong?"

Jonathan was speechless, but he could only say, "Nothing." He couldn't say anything else. He was happy that Charlie had let go of the past. Since Charlie was able to stand up, they didn't have to mind Sarah.

After walking out of Calsis's Residence, Sarah took a cab back to the hotel. Regardless of Eugene, she packed her things and took a cab to Cameron's Residence. With the agreement Charlie had given her, she was thrilled

She knew Johnson wanted Sarah to marry Charlie because he felt sorry for him. Now that Charlie had forgiven

Sarah, there was no need for Johnson to worry.

Johnson glanced at Sarah. He had known the day Sarah left that Theresa's two children were Charlie's. Since Theresa was now with Charlie, he wouldn't be in a hurry to call her back. He would let her handle it on her OWN.

Sarah looked at Johnson. He didn't say he forgave her, but she could tell that he wasn't that angry anymore.

"Dad, I'm sorry for giving you trouble. It's my fault. I'll make it up to you!"

"Whatever." Johnson sighed.

Sarah knew he had forgiven her.

Chapter 388

Everyone laughed at Charlie for having such a fiancée. Many people were jealous of Sarah, but she was unaffected and bragged about it. People hated her, but no one dared to bully her because they knew she had Old Mr. Calsis behind her. Charlie didn't despise her, but she despised him when he broke his legs. How ridiculous. Now Sarah was back, but Charlie not only didn't punish her but also gave her an agreement and set her free.

Even Charlie's close friends were puzzled.

Jack sent a message to Charlie. [Charlie, how can you let that woman go? I'll deal with her if you want.]

Chapter 389

"What did your dad say?" Charlie guessed that Johnson had heard that he wouldn't pester Sarah and wanted to call Theresa back. He wouldn't allow it! He hated Johnson so much, but Johnson was his father-in-law. How frustrating.

Theresa said, "He asked me if the agreement was true and told me to care more about Grandpa."

"Humph," Charlie said, "so he remembers Grandpa! Your family owes Grandpa." Even though he liked Theresa now, he still hated the Cameron family. After all, if it weren't for them, Grandpa wouldn't be this.

Theresa whispered, "I know."

Charlie was angry, but Theresa's reaction softened his heart. "Forget it. It has nothing to do with you.
I'm not blaming anyone. Grandpa used to be really good to your family." If it weren't for Grandpa, Charlie wouldn't have agreed to marry Sarah!

Charlie said, "You know me."

"I know how vindictive you are." Theresa sighed.

At that moment, the door was thrown open and a man walked in without even knocking.

Theresa looked up and saw Pat at the door.

Pat came over and glared at Theresa in Charlie's arms. "Get out!" In his eyes, Theresa was not Charlie's wife but an insignificant woman, so he had no respect for her.
