Chapter 461

Eugene pursed his lips. "Really? I'd love to see that."

Sarah glared at him. "Just you wait, bastard!" In a rage, she walked to the car parked in front of the hotel, got in, and ordered the driver, "Drive." She never wanted to talk to Eugene again!

Because it was Johnson's birthday, Sarah went straight home.

Leah saw her when she got off at the gate. "You're back."

Because of Sarah, the company had been doing well lately. Leah was happy and not as worried about Sarah as she used to be.

“Grandpa,” Leonard muttered.

Theresa frowned at him. He was too indifferent!

Sarah was surprised Theresa didn’t bring her own children. Speaking of which, Theresa had never shown up with her children. ‘Is she afraid to let Charlie see her children? How ridiculous! Why should she please the Sarah asked stiffly, “Charlie, you can stand up?”

Charlie glanced at her and nodded. “Why? Are you disappointed? After all, I’m a cripple in your eyes, aren’t I?” Embarrassed, Sarah turned scarlet and then white.

Leah explained quickly, “Charlie, Sarah used to be childish. She didn’t mean it. It’s all in the past! We’re all so happy for you.

Charlie replied, “It’s okay, Ms. Cameron, if you hadn’t spurred me on, I probably wouldn’t have stood up!” Sarah couldn’t help but clench her fists.

Sarah sneered at Theresa. "Tsk, ts, you knew Charlie could stand up so you ingratiated yourself with him.

That explains it."

"If it makes you feel better to think that." Theresa was not surprised by Sarah's reaction. She knew Sarah was angry at this point because she hadn't smiled all night. She was embarrassed every time Sarah taunted Charlie. They guessed correctly. Sarah regretted it when she learned that Charlie could stand up! Sarah complained, "Why didn't you tell me earlier? Did you steal Charlie from me on purpose?"

"What are you talking about?" Theresa stared at Sarah in disbelief. 'I stole Charlie from her? How ridiculous!' "Yes! You didn't get along with Jimmy so you grabbed the opportunity to marry Charlie. I knew you were not that good! You must move out of Calsis's Residence! Dad said he'd let me marry Charlie as soon as I got back. I was childish before. Now I'm going to marry him. You don't have to replace me!" Sarah shouted in a Theresa's lips curled. "She asked me if I had known you could stand up and blamed me for not telling her earlier."

"She's insane. Don't take it to heart!" Charlie was in a good mood at the thought that Sarah was now very angry.

Theresa wiped the water off her hair and Charlie took the towel naturally. He was very sweet and loving toward her.

Theresa stared at his handsome face. "Charlie."

"Huh?" Charlie looked at her with a concerned look in his eyes.

Theresa asked, "Did you ever like Sarah?"

Charlie frowned and glared at her in disgust. "Ow! It's disgusting!"

"I'm curious about it. You were together, after all. Don't tell me if you don't want."

Theresa admitted that she was a little narrow-minded. She was a little afraid and wondered who Grandpa would like when Sarah showed up. After all, Sarah was the one he had been talking about.

After a while, Leonard yawned, but he watched very carefully. It seemed that he was very interested in chess. As for Ben, he had fallen asleep on Theresa's lap.

The butler came over and said to Old Mr. Calsis, "Let's go to sleep! Mrs. Calsis is going to put the children to bed."

Old Mr. Calsis glanced at his great-grandchildren with a smile. "All right." He was already very happy. The butler smiled at Theresa. "Good night, madam."

Theresa nodded, picked up Ben, and said to Leonard, "Come on, honey, let's go to bed."

Charlie put the phone down and looked at her. "Let's sleep."

Theresa nodded and got into bed. Charlie got close to her quickly.

She went to the gym and ran on the treadmill for a while. She hadn't slept well last night. She thought it was because she had been so idle lately and that exercise would help her relax and calm down.

Leticia walked over. "Theresa."

Theresa slowed down the treadmill, wiped the sweat off her face, and looked over at her. "Mom."

"Dad is going to the hospital today for a checkup. Robert, Charlie, and I all have things to do. Will you go with him?" It was clear that she had made Theresa a member of the family and had begun to give her tasks.

Theresa nodded. "Sure."

Leticia sighed. "I'm so worried about him. He was so angry and upset that he fell ill when Charlie had his accident. It would be great if he could get better!"

Theresa asked, confused, "Do I have to tell him? I like where we are."

"You'd better tell him sooner if you want to be with him. Charlie can stand up now. What are you worried about? You should be honest with each other, right?" Roderick was worried about them.

Theresa bowed her head. "Since Charlie is getting better, I don't think I should pester him."

Roderick froze. "Why?"

"He used to be nice to me because he couldn't stand up and he didn't have anyone else around. He always thought he could stand up because of me, but you know I was just lucky." Theresa felt that any acupuncturist
