

Chapter 0022

Maisie smiled helplessly at her precious daughter.

How could she comfort someone like that? Didn't she know that boys cared about their pride the most?

Elio then spoke up, "Kiki also spilled her lunch. She wanted to go home to her Mommy. Ms. Juliet had to comfort her for the longest time."

"Also, Juda and Chaddy got into a fight. Chaddy got hit till his nose swelled up."

Kids this age were both playful and mischievous. So, it was common for incidents like this to happen at the kindergarten.

The two children continued on and on about fighting and wetting their pants. They even supplemented each other's stories.

They shared every little detail about how everything played out. It was as if they had discovered a whole new world.

June seemed to have a penchant for gossip; she got more excited as she talked about it.

"Mommy, the kids in the kindergarten are all so much fun! I want to go to school every day!" June exclaimed.

Meanwhile, Maisie was baffled. Why did her kids only pay attention to people fighting and wetting their pants?

"Then tell me, what did you two learn from school today?"

"We already learned everything Ms. Juliet taught today from our private tutor," Elio said without hesitation.

"Yeah. Yeah. I know everything about it already!"

Well ...

When these kids were three, they followed Jonathan around to cause trouble. Maisie couldn't stand their antics anymore, so she decided to hire a private tutor for them. The kindergarten syllabus did seem a little too easy for them.

"But, Mommy, Ms. Juliet's class is super interesting."

As Maisie was driving and chatting with the kids, her phone rang. It was Giselle.

"Hello? Gigi, what is it?"

"Mais, did you pick up the two kids yet?"

"Yes, I just picked them up from kindergarten." Maisie glanced at the two kids who were playing with toys in her backseat.

"Then let's go shopping, Mais. Since you've returned to the country, we haven't properly gone shopping.

"Anyway, since it's the two kids' first day of school, I need to make a good impression as their aunt. After we're done shopping, I'll buy you all dinner tonight."

"Today? I don't think I can make it today—"

"Let's go, let's go! Mommy, let's go shopping with Aunt Giselle!"

June's ears perked up when she overheard the plan. She started jumping around in excitement. "I haven't met Aunt Giselle for the longest time!"

"For the longest time?" Maisie arched her brow as she smiled. She doubted it.

"It's true!" June started counting off her fingers. "It's already been one day and one night!"

"Junie, I fully support you. You're completely right. C'mon, Mais! Let's go!"

"Mommy, I don't want to stay home either." Elio also didn't have any objections.

Maisie smiled helplessly. "Alright, see you in a bit."

"Great!"

Maisie made a detour and headed to the mall.

Once she parked her car, she saw Giselle not far ahead. Elio and June rushed over to give her a big hug.

Giselle was ecstatic. She couldn't stop smiling.

"Oh my gosh! My precious darlings, I love you both so much!"

Maisie walked up to her with a smile. "Really, now? If you love them so much, then you should have your own kids."

"No way! I only love these two! Let's go! I want to buy gifts for my little darlings! Pick out whatever you want, okay? Aunt Giselle will pay for everything!"

"That's great! You're the best, Aunt Giselle!"

Maisie patted June's head with a hint of amusement.

Giselle continued to tease, "Then, is Mommy the best, or is Aunt Giselle the best?"

"Mommy!" The two kids shouted in unison.

Maisie and Giselle burst into laughter upon seeing the expression on the kids' faces.

The few of them chatted and walked inside the mall. In the meantime, a luxurious Rolls-Royce pulled up slowly beside the road.

Andrew and Elena got out of the car.

Elena said with a sweet smile, "Drew, thank you for accompanying me to pick out Dad's birthday gift today."

She hooked her arm around Andrew's.

Andrew glanced at Elena casually. In his usual low and husky voice, he said, "I won't break my promise to you. Let's go."

As Andrew walked ahead, he slipped his arm out of Elena's.

Elena's gaze fell onto her arm, which was now empty. She couldn't keep the smile on her face any longer.

She quickly followed behind him. When she caught up to him, her face regained its brightest smile.

Today was Monday. There weren't many people in the mall, and many of the shops seemed empty. Therefore, the sales assistants were extremely welcoming to anyone who stepped in.

When Maisie and Giselle entered, a few sales assistants surrounded them.

Shopping was like a woman's nature. Within less than an hour in a shop, the two were already carrying various sizes of bags in their hands.

Then, Maisie bought the two kids various sets of new clothing. June, who was now in her new princess gown, was bouncing around in excitement.
