

Chapter 0027

Sadie couldn't help but laugh as she looked down at herself.

With her plump figure and average looks, even her husband of two years would scold her for another woman's sake. And he was her childhood sweetheart!

She had given up on her career for two years for her family. Even though she had graduated long ago, she only just joined the hospital. Now, she didn't even have the confidence to lead her own surgeries.

"I really am useless. Completely useless. I can't seem to do anything right.

"Even Eason stands up for those two cunning bitches. He and I were childhood sweethearts, but even that couldn't compare to a few words from them. I really am a failure."

Maisie looked down as she thought about what she had said. Very quickly, she pieced together what she had meant.

So, the Deputy Medical Doctor, Eason Harris, was Sadie's husband. However, Maisie had seen Eason flirting with Janice just yesterday.

Both Elena and Janice were quite beautiful. They knew how to dress and spoke coyly in front of men. Naturally, they had many admirers.

In contrast, Sadie often felt insecure because of her figure.

Maisie narrowed her eyes.

"Did you know that we've known each other since we were young?"

From then till now, our relationship has lasted more than ten years. But a few words from Janiece are enough to tear it apart.

"Today, he told me he wanted a divorce. I struggle with both my love life and my career. Dr. Bardot, I really am a failure, aren't I? I bet you're looking down on me right now."

Sadie bit her bottom lip while lowering her head even more. Despair began to engulf her senses.

"Although you disappointed me by backing out of the surgery, I never said I looked down on you," Maisie said.

Then, she added, "Sadie, you need to believe in yourself. You were accepted to work in this hospital. It shows that you possess strong technical abilities. Believe in yourself. You're just as capable as anyone else."

Seeing the state Sadie was in, Maisie felt like she was looking at herself from five years ago. Back then, she also gave up on her medical studies and her aspiration just for Andrew.

When she used to live on the estate, he was her whole world. The only thing she could think of was how to make Andrew fall in love with her.

Later, Maisie finally understood that love couldn't be forced. No matter how hard she tried, it was useless.

As a woman, she had to be independent. She couldn't rely on anyone. A stable job, valuable skills, and an independent life formed the foundation for one's confidence.

Maisie looked at Sadie's helpless appearance. Her heart softened for this woman who was going through what she had been through. She let out a sigh and gently patted Sadie's shoulder.

"Sadie, look forward. There could be a bright future ahead of you. When you look back, you'll realize that the man who never appreciated you may not be as important anymore."

Sadie lifted her head to look at her. There was a glimmer in her eyes. Her amber eyes looked as if there were hidden stars inside them.

When she spoke, her gaze was determined and confident. It was as if she could do anything she believed in. This version of Maisie gave others unlimited strength.

When Maisie arrived home, it was already 9:30 pm. She quickly called Giselle.

Elio and June were still at Giselle's place. It was already so late, and Giselle still had to go to work tomorrow. Maisie didn't want to trouble her.

"Hello, Gigi. I'm so sorry. I was occupied with a patient who had a critical emergency. I just got home. Are you home now? I'll come over now to pick El and Junie."

"No, no, it's fine! You don't need to come over to pick them up. I'm bringing them for supper outside. We're almost done. It'll be even more troublesome for you to come over," Giselle said.

She then offered, "I'll drop them off at your house. You just got back from work, after all. Just take a break first."
