

Chapter 0031

"Yes." Maisie's gaze was determined.

"I can't ignore Mr. Clarke Senior's plight, be it as Maisie or as a doctor."
"

Giselle could understand her. Back when Maisie was in trouble, it was Emmanuel who had helped her. After marrying Andrew, he was also the only one who treated Maisie well.

Maisie's feelings toward Emmanuel weren't just respect. She harbored years of guilt for the old man as well.

"Then who do you plan on asking for help from?" It wasn't like she could just break into the Clarke Estate.

Maisie thought for a moment. "Well, I have one person in mind."

That night, a bright moon hung on the night sky.

"It's your lucky night, Maisie. My parents are both home today. So be careful." James quietly opened the back door for Maisie.

Maisie held her medical kit as she rushed in. Under the moonlight, two people snuck into the main residence, one behind the other.

Maisie lowered her voice and said softly, "Thank you. Don't worry. I'll be careful. How's Grandpa's condition recently?"

"Grandpa's doing much better. That Elena woman claims that there's no immediate danger to his life. But he keeps drifting in and out of consciousness from time to time. Not to mention, the amount of time he sleeps is much longer nowadays."

Maisie and James continued to talk as they walked. "Did Grandpa take the medicine that I prescribed on time?"

"The medicine you prescribed?" James narrowed his eyes. He looked at Maisie with a suspicious look.

When they reached Emmanuel's room, James had already made the necessary arrangements. He had ensured that no one would disturb Maisie.

Maisie sat down beside Emmanuel's bed in relief.

Emmanuel's breathing was much more stable than the first time she saw him. His complexion had also improved greatly.

His current condition was similar to what Maisie had anticipated. This meant that her previous acupuncture treatment had been effective.

Maisie took out a pack of silver needles she had prepared from her medical kit. Then, she sterilized and disinfected it thoroughly.

Maisie was extremely careful with each step. She did not allow any room for missteps.

"Grandpa, you've recovered well. This means that the previous method has worked. We need to continue with the process. You will regain consciousness in no time.

"Grandpa, I hope you can wake up soon, so I'm here to give you acupuncture treatment again tonight."

James could hear everything Maisie had said from outside the door. He appeared to be in disbelief.

So, Maisie was the one who saved Emmanuel! That meant Elena was ...

James thought about it for a moment.

Back then, when Elena had first examined Emmanuel, she said there was nothing she could do. At that time, she didn't look like she was lying.

After that, she miraculously brought Emmanuel back from the brink of death.

How was that possible? If Elena had claimed to be helpless back then, how could she suddenly be able to do it after everyone had left?

At that time, everyone rejoiced over Emmanuel's condition. Nobody had put much thought into it.

Thinking about it now, Maisie had also been in the room. Her feelings for Grandpa were undeniable. She also possessed medical skills.

And from what he had just observed, there was a 99.9% chance that Maisie was the one who had saved Grandpa.

James' gaze suddenly grew cold. It was fine if Elena liked to put on an act during normal days, but how could she use such despicable means here?

That woman was disgusting and detestable!

"James? James?" Laura frowned as she called James' name.

"James!" She finally raised her voice.

James finally returned to his senses. Turning his gaze, he noticed Laura was already standing beside him.

"Mom." He lowered his voice.

"What's on your mind? You seemed deep in thought," Laura asked curiously.

She rarely saw such a serious expression on her mischievous youngest son's face.

"Mom, I—" James paused.

Maisie said not to let anyone disturb her while she was treating Grandpa. If he had revealed the truth to his mother, his mother would find out that Maisie was here.

This wouldn't just disturb Maisie. Based on his mother's trust in Elena, she would not believe it. It would only make the whole situation even more complicated.

Comments

Support