Edric flicked his sleeve casually. "Sharon, if you think this little stunt will win Edwin back, you're kidding yourself. But if your goal is to get under our skin, congrats, you've nailed it

Edric's gaze dropped, but the disdain he felt for Sharon was palpable, like she was a dirty secret he couldn't stand to face.

Sharon's glance at Edwin and Tilda had been purely coincidental, with no ulterior motives. Edric's harsh remarks caused her to furrow her brow in response.

"Sharon is originally Brandon wanted to explain, but Sharon pulled him back, silencing him.

Sharon didn't even glance at Edric and calmly replied. "Hey, it's a free country, right? I can go wherever I want, just like you guys. There're no rules against that"

She paused for a moment before adding, "And trust me, I've got better things to do than mess with you for no reason. So, maybe think twice before assuming you're worth the trouble."

Edric's face froze, turning pale, his features tense with anger.

Sharon's words felt like a brutal insult. Edric, accustomed to respect and adoration, clenched his fists in anger.

Sharon brushed off Edric's reaction and turned to Brandon. "Ready to head back Mind giving me a ride?"

Brandon grinned, thrilled that Sharon asked for a ride. "Absolutely," he replied enthusiastically. He quickly moved to open the door, making sure to pull open the passenger seat, a spot reserved for only the closest person..

Sharon nodded and took her seat, never once looking back at the three people behind them.

"Damn her!" Edric muttered angrily, kicking a nearby stone forcefully.

Tilda glanced at Edwin, sensing his dark mood, but she kept her cool and said with a smile, "Seems like Sharon's turning a new leaf. This guy's got deep pockets, the richest in town. Sharon's not making a bad move here."

Tilda was well aware of Brandon's wealth, but she kept many things close to her chest, never revealing them to anyone.

Tilda suggested, “How about we head into town and settle down for a bit, Edwin?”

Edwin finally budged, ducking into the car. Tilda hopped in beside him, relieved to see some action

Tilda felt the tension lingering as the car rolled forward, so she turned to Edwin with a puzzled expression. “Edwin, what’s the deal with us being here, anyway?”

Edwin vaguely mentioned needing her company.” Tilda assumed they were going somewhere near Silverwood until they entered the small town. This was the last place she wanted to be.

Edwin glanced at her, his brows furrowed in confusion. “You don’t like here?”

Tikda hesitated, realizing her honesty might not serve her intentions. Quickly, she shifted gears, replying: “Why would I?”

Her forced response was still caught by Edwin’s sharp eyes, and a hint of confusion flickered in his gaze. In his memory, that girl used to talk about this place with great enthusiasm.

The car drove for a while, but Sharon didn’t ask Brandon to stop at her doorstep.

Brandon said enthusiastically, “Sharon, why not conse over to my place tomorrow? My mom really likes you. But if you’re not into that, we can hit up my farm instead. Oh, by the way, your singing earlier was killer”

Brandon’s affectionate gaze and words showed his deep fondness for Sharon, also hinting at his family’s acceptance of her past marriage and his ability to support her.

Sharon appreciated Brandon’s sincerity but declined his invitation with a smile and a shake of her head. “No, thanks.” She turned to him earnestly. “You’re a great guy, Brandon, and you deserve someone who’ll love you right.”

“Hey, you’re great just the way you are.” Brandon reassured her, thinking she was insecure.

Sharon’s lips tightened. She wasn’t insecure. She just swallowed her pride for love’s sake,

“Look, I’m just focused on living a chill life e with my daughter right now. Marriage isn’t on the radar. You’ve got better things to do,” she explained

Brandon’s smile vanished fast, replaced by disappointment.

Sharon nodded apologetically, hopped out of the car, and breathed a sigh of relief. Thankfully, Brandon didn’t push the matter further, so she felt much better.

Sharon found the door locked after arriving home and learned from Irene’s message that she and Ethan were birdwatching up the mountain

Irene, curious about everything in the countryside, now preferred exploring with her grandpa, leaving Sharon to her own devices.

Locked out of her home, Sharon wandered until she ended up at the town hospital. Despite its upgrades, the familiar garden still beckoned her inside.

The r

garden looked just like old times with waist–high plants. Seeing Edwin earlier today stirred up some heavy feelings again. Walking over to the tree, it felt like she could almost see those two teens huddled together, seeking comfort in each other’s company despite their heavy guilt.

Meeting Edwin came at a tough time for Sharon. She was a teen and just found out her mom died giving birth to her. It felt like she caused it. Her dad didn’t blame her, but the accusing looks from others cut deep.

Especially her deranged grandma, who would choke her and call her a murderer every time she saw her. Later, her grandma died, too, from falling while looking for her own daughter. The layers of guilt piled upon Sharon made her feel like a criminal. And Edwin...

“Big Eyes” someone called from behind.

Sharon snapped out of it real quick when she heard that voice. She couldn’t believe it when she turned around and saw Edwin standing there, looking at her with affection. And did he just call her Big Eyes? Was he saying he recognized her?

Her heart began to race wildly. Tears welled up in her eyes

Dumping My Billionaire Ex Chapter 52

Sharon was about to say “Cutie Homie“, but she choked on the words before they could come ou

“Are you seriously still gonna act like you didn’t follow Edwin? What’s the deal with all this?” Edric’s sharp comment snapped Sharon back to reality, Edwin’s warm look turned icy quickly. When Sharon glanced back, his vibe was frosty, and his face was as cold as ice. He was totally buying into Edric’s story.

“Sorry,” Sharon said with a heavy heart, pushing aside the flood of memories. She admitted her misstep, not that she was owning up to railing Edwin, but that she had already moved on after the divorce, intending to leave everything about him behind, yet found herself here, reminiscing.

After that, she turned and prepared to walk away.

“What are you doing here?” Suddenly, Edwin asked from behind.

He gave Sharon a long look. He’d mistaken her for that girl from years ago. Sharon’s voice even sounded like hers. It took four years of marriage for him to realize that.

With her heart already hardened, Sharon didn’t bother telling the truth. “Just here for some medicine,” she muttered, moving past him.

As Sharon passed Edric and Tilda, she caught Edric’s disdainful snort, oozing with contempt and a mocking certainty that she wasn’t being honest.

Edric strolled up to Edwin. “Dude, she already confessed to following you. Why bother asking why she’s here! Giving her an out? No need for that,

man

Edwin remained silent, lowering his head and sinking into silence again.

Tikla asked. “Edwin, isn’t this the place where you stayed when you hurt your eyes? Why suddenly want to come and see?”

“Don’t you want to see it?” Edwin suddenly grabbed her hand and asked,

Tilda nodded, slightly puzzled. “Yeah, I do. I’m curious about any place you’ve stayed”

Edwin felt disappointed. This place wasn’t just where he stayed. It was where they both found a new beginning

Edwin’s life took a devastating turn when he was in a car accident at seventeen. His father perished protecting him, and he lost his sight in the crash. The loss and guilt were unbearable. His mother's blame only worsened the pain, as she abandoned him here, unable to cope with the tragedy.

Edwin once believed his life was doomed to darkness until he met the girl. Together, they found solace in each other during their darkest moments, with her providing him the strength to persevere and rebuild himself.

Her voice kept ringing in his ears, saying, "Cutie Homie, even though we're both messed up, we gotta keep on living. Im gonna treat my dad right, and you gotta keep pushing through too. Getting stronger is how we make things right.

"You gotta cat, otherwise, you'll waste away. And if you waste away, your dad won't come back.

"Don't think just because your eyes can't see, you're useless. There are tons you can still do. And if push comes to shove, I'll be your eyes from now on. I'll show you the world through my eyes. I'll be your big eyes, forever!

"Don't slack off, listen to me carefully.

"Cutie Homie, this is really hard, I don't understand. How about you teach me?"

Back then, that girl's nagging got him back on track. He got back to his old self, gladly helping her out with stuff she couldn't handle.

Despite seeing through her tricks, he played along, enjoying her laughter when she succeeded. She brought warmth to his life, especially with her silly nickname for him, "Cutie Homie, just because he looked good.

"Why did you stop calling me Cutie Homie?" Edwin asked, peering at Tilda

Tilda was caught off guard, hesitating. "Cute Cutie Homic!"

Confused about the sudden request, Tilda glanced at Edric, hoping for some guidance

Edric walked over. "We're all grown up. Isn't asking people to call you like that is too far! Tilda's not a kid anymore."

After that, Edric grabbed Tilda's arm, adding, "Suit yourself, we'll wait for you outside."

Outside, Tilda finally dared to ask Edric, "What's up with calling him Cutie Homie?"

I don't know" Edric scratched his head. "n't it a nickname just between you guys?"

Tilda ran her hand through her long hair in frustration. "Didn't you think Edwin's look at Sharon just now was kinda strange!"

“What’s so strange about it?” Edric shrugged. “Sharon was married to Edwin for four years, and he barely noticed her. No matter how scheming she might be, she couldn’t possibly cause any trouble!

Tilda remained uneasy despite Edric’s reassurance. Edwin’s unexpected presence here only added to her confusion.

Tilda abruptly said, “I gotta go!” Then she hurried off without waiting for Edric’s reply.

Edwin lingered in the garden for a bit before heading to the hospital director’s office. There, he made a generous donation, which left the director beaming with gratitude.

Edwin’s four–million–dollar donation was a game–changer for the small–town hospital. Though the director invited him for a tour, Edwin declined, showing little interest.

In the en end, Edwin agreed to write a few words for the donor wall of the new building.

“You’re Edwin Stanley? The head of the Ophthalmology Department walked in, noticing the signature. She glanced at Edwin a few more times. “You’re... the Edwin who stayed in the hospital to treat his eyes, right!”

Edwin looked over and recognized the person. “Hello, Dr. Willson

Nina Willson was once his attending physician. Even after ten years, her appearance hadn’t changed much,

Nina nodded. “The young man from back then has grown into an adult. I almost didn’t recognize you.”

Back then, Edwin had been in the hospital for almost a year, and with his good looks, Nina naturally remembered him

Edwin just smiled back, looking more grown–up and chill than he used to

Nina, being talkative as usual, glanced at Edwin and remarked. “That lively girl who was always with you, you two must be married by now. I always thought you made a perfect match.”

“Not yet.” Edwin replied, feeling slightly embarrassed

Nina looked surprised. “No! With such a great girl, aren’t you afraid someone else might snatch her away?”

Edwin just gave a faint smile, keeping his personal life private, as usual.

Nina continued, "Hey, listen up. I know Sharon from way back. She's solid. Don't let her slip through your fingers, alright?"

Dumping My Billionaire Ex Chapter 53

Edwin's mind was somewhere else, so he didn't catch Sharon's name.

Nina recalled how Sharon was deeply devoted to Edwin. Sharon even offered her own comneas to help him see again because she feared his family wouldn't accept him if he remained blind.

Nina noticed Edwin's lack of response to the story and decided not to say anything more, leaving Edwin in place alone with his thoughts.

Sharon didn't have any plans after leaving the hospital, so she swung by her old house and tidied up a bit. It held too many memories for her to let it fall into disrepair as it was built by her parents' own hands.

The neglected state of the house saddened Shuren. Mold and peeling wallpaper showed it hadn't been cared for. She planned to hire a construction team for a quick renovation. After cleaning inside, an hour passed.

As Sharon carried the garbage out, she noticed a long shadow ahead, cast by a beautiful woman. Squinting, she recognized the face, yet it seemed different somehow.

Running into someone she didn't want to see three times in one day felt like a weird coincidence to Sharon Tilda stood at a distance, observing her.

After the cleaning, Sharon wasn't as glamorous as Tilda. Her hair was a bit messy, and she had a touch of sweat on her forehead. Yet, her eyes still shone bright like stars.

Tilda, displeased, looked away. She couldn't resist standing tall and proud, making herself seem taller than Sharon by a few inches

Sharon had no desire to see her, so she didn't bother with greetings and simply walked away,

Hold on, Ms. Cress" Tilda turned slightly. "How about letting us take care of Irenc!"

Sharon stopped in her tracks and looked at Tilda. "Ms. Gill, are you out of your mind? Why would I leave my daughter in your care?"

Instead of getting angry at Sharon's blunt words. Tilda suggested Sharon send Irene back to the Stanley family for a better life and focus on finding happiness with a stable guy, instead of clinging to her ex

Sharon caught onto Tilda's implication. "Are you suggesting that I insisted on taking Irene back because I still had feelings for Edwin?"

"Isn't it though" Tilda's smile was sweet, but her eyes held a sharp challenge as she spoke, "Ms. Cress, you meddled in Edwin's and my relationship, separating us for four years. Yet here I am, offering you a chance at happiness. I'd call that pretty generous of me

Tilda's shameless words finally struck a nerve with Sharon. She had held back a lot, but now it seemed there was no point in holding back any longer.

Sharon chuckled lightly. "Ms. Gill, you sound so aggrieved that one might mistake you for the victim. Are you sure I meddled in your relationship?"

"I didn't say anything wrong, did I? Tilda didn't even see Sharon as a match, "Honestly, there wasn't much between me and that guy, Everything could've been cleared up, but your meddling made it all awkward. I had to let go and give Edwin to you"

Tilda smirked, her eyes glinting. "I didn't spill the beans to Edwin till a year later, taking your emotions into account"

"A year later?" Sharon's demeanor shifted abruptly, signaling her distress. She tightly balled her fists within her sleeves.

During these four years, Edwin kept his distance from Sharon, showing little interest. About a year after they got married, shortly after Irene was born, he occasionally came to see his daughter.

Then one day, he told her he would go on a business trip and would reconsider their relationship when he returned. Believing Edwin's increasing warmth toward her signaled a positive change, Sharon eagerly awaited his return, hopeful that he had finally accepted her.

But Sharon was taken aback by Edwin's sudden coldness upon his return. It seemed he had allowed his friends and family to mistreat her from that moment on. She wondered if Edwin had heard similar words from Tilda during their encounter on the trip.

Sharon chuckled bitterly, her hidden anger undeniable, She saw through Tilda's intentions—to make her miserable. Despite trying to move on after the four-year marriage, since Tilda wouldn't relent, neither would she.

Sharon shot back, “Ms. Gill, when the reporters asked you about cheating, you stayed silent for five minutes. Wasn’t that enough time for you to explain’ Edwin was there. He would have listened.

Tilda narrowed her eyes. Sharon’s words hit home, shutting down every objection she had.

Sharon circled Tika, her tone calm but cutting. “Ms. Gill, without my intervention, your cheating scandal would have been exposed four years ago. So, spare me your victim act now. I don’t expect gratitude, but at least be sincere”

Tilda froze, her face flushing with anger as her confidence crumbled

Tilda couldn’t wrap her head around the sudden reversal of roles, from victim to beneficiary, caused by Sharon’s intervention.

“By the way, you claim there was nothing between you and that guy, but you both stripped naked. Do you really expect me to believe you are innocent?” Sharon continued, her gaze shifting to another figure nearby.

Sharon smirked knowingly, intending to air out certain truths.

She didn’t hold back, confronting Tilda directly. “Edwin trusted you, but others saw through it. And let’s be honest, didn’t you stay silent deliberately? You thought Edwin cared for you so much that even if you were caught red-handed, he wouldn’t abandon you. You were waiting for him to speak up, to indulge your whims. Isn’t that being too selfish?”

Tilda was shocked at Sharon’s accuracy in reading her thoughts from back then.

Tilda, after a moment’s pause, finally found her rebuttal. She wasn’t about to let Sharon walk all over her Tilda nodded confidently, unfazed. “Exactly! So what if I’m a bit reckless? Edwin’s love for me is undeniable. My plan all along was for the entire city to see how much he adores me. No matter what I do, he’ll always paper me, never let me go!

Sharon’s anger flared. “You’re shameless,” she cursed furiously. Hearing Tilda admit her audacity only fueled Sharon’s indignation. If she hadn’t divorced Edwin yet, she would probably slap Tilda a few times.

Sharon said. “Have you ever considered the consequences? What about the reputation of Edwin, the Stanley Family, and even Genesis Group? All of them will have to pay the price for your recklessness.”

“So what Tilda lifted her chin defiantly. “Who carest Edwin loves me and is willing to sacrifice everything for me.”

shameless flaunting of Edwin’s love was disgusting, a far cry from her usual elegance.

Sharon couldn’t help but wonder if Edwin still admired Tikla after witnessing her shameless behavior. Meanwhile, Sharon’s gaze fell on someone, and a sly smirk spread across her lips.

Tilda didn’t notice Sharon’s change and continued walking closer. “Sharon, this is the difference between you and me

She resented Sharon for stealing Edwin any for four years. Avoiding confrontation before to protect her image, she now saw a chance to stomp all over Sharon in this quiet place, Tilda cocked her head with a smirk. “Edwin’s all mine. No matter what you do, he’s still wrapped around my finger. You could beg on your knees, but he wouldn’t give you the time of day.

“Oh,” Sharon said knowingly, nodding and shooting a meaningful glance behind Tilda. Would you dare say that to Edwin’s face?

“What’s there not to dare!” Tilda blurted out, getting caught up in the moment and unable to hold back. But as soon as the words left her mouth, she regretted it.

Tilda spun around and locked eyes with the figure behind her. The shock of recognition froze her in place, sending a jolt of fear through her body.

The man standing there looked like he could freeze time with his cold stare, making everything feel tense.

“Edwin...” she whispered, her throat tight, struggling to breathe, feeling like the might collapse.

Tilda couldn’t believe it. She shot Sharon a sharp glance, realizing what had happened. Sharon had seen Edwin earlier and had deliberately provoked her into saying those words.

Sharon smirked, satisfied with Tilda’s unintentional revelation. Without a second glance at Edwin, she walked away, leaving him to see Tilda’s true colors for himself.

Edric saying Tilda left by herself got Edwin worried, so he followed. But it turned out to be pretty funny, Tikla usually put on a classy act in front of Edwin, all polished and elegant. But today, she acted like a totally different person, which was quite a shocker.

Seeing Edwin's disgusted look, Tilda's heart sank. It felt like everything she'd worked for had gone down the drain. Her legs gave out, and she hit the ground. Then, someone grabbed her arm and whispered, "Let's date."

Tilda paused, thinking she might have misheard, then quickly looked up at Edwin, tugging on his sleeve. "Edwin."

That person raised his head and revealed his face.

“Edwin!” A hint of surprise appeared on Sharon’s fair face.

She didn’t expect him to stop by

She wondered. This is really strange. He never entered my house during our four years of marriage. Now that we’re divorced, he actually came by Edwin pursed his lips and walked over when he saw her looking at him.

Sharon quietly sized him up.

His noble face was aloof and expressionless.

“What’s the matter?” she asked.

Edwin looked behind her.

Ethan's current residence was next to a homestay

Sharon was standing right in front of the door of the homestay,

Those who did not know better would think that she had come out of the homestay.

Sharon saw him looking behind her and followed suit

When she saw the signboard of the homestay behind her, she explained, "Actually, I live..."

Before she could say the words "at my dad's place", Edwin interrupted her by saying, "I don't care why you're here. I won't let anyone bully Tilda, and that is my bottom line!"

Sharon

suddenly froze. Her fair face quickly turned gloomy.

She looked at Edwin in disbelief. She could not believe that he would indulge Tilda to this extent.

She had exposed Tilda, which had actually become bullying in his eyes.

Sharon thought, 'Edwin just doesn't have high moral standards.

Even though she knew that he cared a lot about Tilda, Sharon was still furious.

She felt even more aggrieved, disappointed, and stifled.

She thought, 'If he can tolerate Tilda to this extent, why can't he be more polite to me? No matter what, I used to be his spouse who had gone through thick and thin with him. We used to rely on each other. And for him, I...

Sharon touched her left eye, which had extremely low visibility. Her heart was filled with sorrow.

Edwin continued, "In the future, I hope you can avoid the places where Tilda and I show up. Otherwise, I don't mind using extreme methods"

These heartless words were like a sharp sword that pierced Sharon's chest

Even though they were already divorced and she no longer had any hopes for him, she was still hurt.

After saying that, Edwin turned around and walked out.

As he passed by Irene, he paused slightly.

Looking at Irene staring at him with her big eyes, he could not help but reach out his fingers to her.

Irene suddenly shrunk and dodged him.

When she looked at him again, her eyes were filled with hatred.

She did not know much about adult matters, but Edwin's tone was so gloomy to her mommy, Irene could feel that he looked at Sharon with disgust there an

She would ignore anyone who treated her mommy badly.

Edwin lowered his hand.

Chapter 15

He wondered, 'What am I doing! Why am I suddenly feeling pary for someone else's hastard child?

He took another step forward

Behind him, Sharon shouted at him, "Edwin!"

Edwin did not stop

Sharon looked at his determined back and really wanted to run up and question him.

What was his heart made of?

Why would he rather protect Tilda, who had hurt him, than take another look at her, who had sacrificed so much for him!

What right did he have to restrict her range of activity?

What right did he have to target her!

In the end, Sharon only sneered gloomily and gently clicked her tongue. "Mr. Stanley, you'd better not regret it!"

Edwin couldn't bother to respond and completely walked out of her sight..

Sharon stood rooted to the ground as if she had been frozen in place. Her heart ached bitterly as she felt overwhelmed.

She felt that her spleen and stomach were squeezed together.

This was the result of her foolishness back then.

She was really reaping what she sowed.

Her legs suddenly felt warm as she was hugged by a pair of small hands.

"Mommy, don't be sad" Irene ran over and placed her face on her legs. The little girl comforted her, "It's okay if Edwin doesn't like you. have me. I will grow up soon and protect you when I become an adult. No one will bully you again!"

Those hands were small, but they held Sharon very tightly,

Irene's soft voice was even warmer than the evening sun, successfully warming Sharon's cold heart.

She bent down and gently held Irene's face, kissing the tip of her nose,

At the same time, Sharon pressed her forehead against hers intimately.

Although her four years of marriage had failed, she still had Irene.

She would just let what happened in the past.

She would no longer pay her respects or miss Edwin.

You still

Sharon would just see the foolish things that she had done for Edwin in the past as a thank-you gift for him due to what he had done for Irene.

At night, Sharon pampered Irene to sleep and leaned against the headboard to look at the company's data

Her phone suddenly rang.

I was Alanna calling.

Sharon quickly answered the phone and said, "Have you received the local products? They're not damaged, right? If you like them, I'll send some more to you next time."

“What are you talking about? Come out immediately? On the other end of the line, Alanna sounded very angry.

Sharon frowned and was stunned, asking, “Come out... where?”

“Your door! Alanna’s voice was loud enough to shatter Sharon’s eardrums. “Ill only give you five minutes. If you don’t come out, I’ll kick the door!”

“Which door?” said Sharon as she immediately sat up and lifted the curtains.

It was dark outside, and there was no one there.

It was the middle of the night. Why would Alanna come so far to look for her!

“I’m in your courtyard. Hurry up!” Alanna’s every word was furious.

Chapter 55

“Sharon, we’re at the entrance of your hometown’s courtyard. Are you guys asleep! I don’t see any lights at home” After a while, a friendly mule voice sounded.

It was Blake.

Only then did Sharon realize that they thought that she was in her original house, so they went there.

What was Alanna and Blake doing there in the middle of the night?

Blake said, “If you’re asleep. I’ll bring Alanna to the hotel. We’ll talk tomorrow.

Before he could finish his sentence. Alanna’s loud voice sounded again. “What tomorrow! Sharon, come out now

It was rare for Alanna to be so fierce to her, Sharon was even more shocked

She quickly explained, put on her clothes, and rushed to the old house.

Outside the old house, she saw Blake’s domineering SUV Bentley.

The Bentley’s headlights were turned on, illuminating the outside,

Alanna stood in the light. Her face was very pale and her expression was terrible.

Seeing Sharon coming over, Blake patted Alanna's shoulder lightly. "Let's talk nicely, okay?"

After saying that, he nodded at Sharon and automatically retreated outside.

"What's wrong!" Sharon asked. She was panting when she ran over as fast as she could.

She looked at Alanna

Alanna slapped a piece of paper on her, shouting, "Sharon, explain to me what's going on?"

Sharon reached out to take the piece of paper Alanna had slapped down and read it under the light of the car.

When she saw the content, her expression suddenly changed.

Her hand also froze,

A few of her fingers could not help but pinch the edge of the paper tightly. She got nervous and did not even dare to look at Alanna's face. Then, Sharon uttered. "Where did you get it?"

"Don't ask where I got it from. Just tell me if what it's written here is true!" Alanna said furiously. Her finger pressed hard on the paper, making a cracking sound. It almost poked a hole in the paper.

She was an impatient person and couldn't wait a second longer.

Dumping My Billionaire Ex Chapter 56

Sharon took a deep breath and fell silent

Seeing her like this, Alanna was stunned and her heart skipped a beat.

She already knew that the answer was not far from the truth.

'So, you really... donated your cornea!' Alanna's voice suddenly trembled.

Her bright eyes were filled with disbelief.

Tears welled up in her eyes

The next moment, she pushed Sharon with her palm and shouted, "Are you crazy? How could you do this?"

Sharon grabbed her hand and whispered, “Alanna

“You did it during that period, didn’t you?” Alanna shook off her hand and glared at her. “You inexplicably asked me to cover for you and tell your dad that you were staying at our house. Then, you disappeared without a trace for two months. At that time, you actually went to... get your cornea removed?”

Alanna could not continue.

She had never heard of cornea removal happening to a living person.

She did not even dare to think about how Sharon got her cornea removed.

“You removed the cornea and gave it to Edwin, didn’t you? When Alanna spoke again, her voice was clearly trembling.

The next moment, she roared, “How could you do such a ridiculous thing for this scumbag Sharon, you’re a psycho!”

Alanna’s eyes were red as she kept pushing Sharon, endlessly venting the anger in her heart,

She wanted to go back to the past and stop Sharon from doing such a terrifying thing

Seeing how impulsive Alanna was, Blake ran over and pulled her back. “Alanna”

Alanna shook him off and looked at Sharon with tears in her eyes. “Sharon, you’re a bastard! You did bad things yourself and even dragged me in as an accomplice!”

Sharon knew that she was in the wrong. She silently lowered her head and allowed Alanna to scold her.

Alanna was not angry about this.

What she was really angry about was why Sharon was so stupid

She felt distressed for Sharon.

Alanna sobbed. “I should have asked you a few more questions. I really believed you when you said that you were going to take care of Edwin. I’m such a fool!”

Blake hugged her and reminded her softly. “Don’t cry. There are neighbors around. If others hear about this and spread it to Mr. Cress...”

Only then did Alanna stop crying.

Sharon opened the door with a spare key and let the two of them into the house,

Alanna sat on the chair, her emotions still unstable.

Sharon wanted to get her a glass of water, but she did not live there and did not have any water.

Fortunately, Blake was meticulous and took two bottles of mineral water.

One bottle was for Alanna, and the other was for Sharon.

After Alanna had some water, her emotions finally stabilized a liule.

She looked at Sharon, who w was standing in front of her with her head lowered as if she had done something wrong. Her heart ached as she held Sharon's hand and stroked the back of her hand with her fingers. "Sharon, if I had known what you were going to do back then, I would have stopped you no matter what Although Abrna didn't cry anymore, her eyes were red.

w that Alanna was doing this for her own good.

Sharon knew that

She held Alanna's fingers and comforted her in a low voice, "It's all in the past.

The more Alanna thought about it, the more indignant she felt.

She said. "It's all in the past! Can we let this go?"

She jumped up and pinched Sharon's chin. "Your cornea is gone, but that scumbag Edwin is using your cornea to live happily in this world. He's even intimate with Tilda. What right does he have to do that? Back then, you didn't donate your cornea to let him see Tilda, nor did you do it for him to ruin you for four years! This matter isn't over no matter what. I'll go to that scumbag Edwin now!"

Alanna did as she said. She really wanted to go out and look for Edwin.

Blake came over to stop er to stop her and asked her to calm down.

Alanna was even angry at Blake. She pushed him and scolded, "None of you jerks are good"

Blake rubbed his nose.

He felt wronged and helpless.

Sharon knew that although flake could usually appease Alanna, he really could not keep her in line when she was angry.

She ran

over and pulled Alanna back

Sharon said, "I've already divorced Edwin. If you go to him now, he'll only think that I'm unwilling to divorce and want to use this matter to get me Involved with him! Maybe he'll think highly of me because of this. So what? He doesn't love me. That's the truth."

She sighed softly and rubbed Alanna's arm, saying. "I donated the cornea voluntarily back then. I don't want to use this matter to impose my morality on him.

"The love I want is to give it voluntarily, not exchange it with kindness. This will only make me look cheap!

"Alanna. I've already been cheap once. I don't want to do it again." She patted Alanna's shoulder heavily.

These words rendered Alanna speechless.

She stood there with her head lowered, but her tears were dripping onto the ground

Sharon knew that Alanna was still feeling sorry for her.

"I'll be fine," Sharon comforted her softly.

Alanna hugged her and said, "But you made this sacrifice because you love him. You gave up your cornea but got nothing. It's such a loss:

She kept pounding Sharon's back, but it was her heart that was in pain.

Sharon's eyes were slightly red, and she felt like sobbing because of Alanna's concern and her own previous foolishness,

2 * * * *5

There was a lump in her throat

She wrapped her arms around Alanna's shoulders and tightened her grip. "Back then, I did it indeed because of love. Although I didn't get anything in return, I don't regret it. Alanna, in this relationship, I did what I had to do and didn't leave any regrets. That's enough"

"Girl!" Alanna's heart ached, but she agreed with Sharon and could only continue to hug her

It was as if only by hugging Sharon so hard could Alanna ease her pain a little.

Alanna and Blake had onhed over at the last minute and did not even have a place to stay.

There was no bed in the house, so Sharon could only send them out to check into the hotel in town.

Alanna insisted on sending Sharon home first.

Although it was only a short distance, Sharon did not refuse.

The two of them at together in the car, just like before.

It was just that how they were feeling was different

Chapter 56

"Sharon, you're really silly," Alanna sighed softly. She still felt pain inside,

She looked at Sharon's left eye, which was obviously grayer than her right one. She felt that she herself was also stupid since she did not know that there was something wrong with Sharon's left eye for ten years.

Sharon smiled and sighed softly, "Yes, how silly."

Alanna grabbed her wrist and asked, "If you had known that you would end up like this with that scumbag Edwin, would you still have been so Mupid?"

Sharon was stunned and speechless.

The car arrived and she got out.

She raised her hand and waited until the Bentley disappeared from her sight before she wrapped herself in her clothes tightly and walked up the stairs to open the door.

At night, she lay in bed.

Her eyes were calm and clear.

However, she could not help but think of what Alanna had asked.

Sharon wondered. If I knew what would happen to me, would I be that stupid? Perhaps, I would still do it

Edwin returned home overnight.

It was almost eleven o'clock when he got home.

After a long journey, his face was filled with faint fatigue,

In the living room, the lights were still on Jasmine was sitting on the sofa in her silk nightgown. She crossed her legs elegantly and flipped through something with her hands.

When she saw him, she stood up with a smile, saying, "Edwin, you're back just in time. Mrs. Hoyce introduced a few socialites. Come here and check out their information."

Edwin's calm and indifferent face turned around with a frown

That won't be necessary. In the end, he only said those words indifferently.

Then, he walked upstairs

Even though Jasmine had suffered his aloofness all these years, she had been waiting up until now. She was extremely dissatisfied that she had gotten such an outcome after worrying so much about him.

Her tone was filled with anger. "This is about your marriage. Can you be more attentive?"

Edwin tugged at his tie and said bluntly. "Since this is about my marriage, you don't need to worry about it"

Jasmine's well-maintained face showed a frown. She got furious as she clenched her fists

She shouted, "I'm your mother!"

Edwin said. "Is that so?"

All she got was Edwin's calm question.

There was clearly no expression on his face, and even his gaze did not change, but she was suddenly felt embarrassed

After a long while, she asked in a trembling voice, "Is it because of that matter?"

Dumping My Billionaire Ex Chapter 57

Before Edwin could respond, Jasmine said anxiously, "Yes, I was the one who sent you away back then" As she spoke too quickly, she had no choice but to lower her head to catch her breath. "I know that it was indeed wrong to do that, but your eyes were not good at that time. I just wanted to find a quiet place for you to recuperate."

Edwin did not even respond this time. He only raised his head slightly and showed a mocking smile.

He did not say a single word, but it hurt Jasmine even more than if he had said harsh words.

Standing in front of him, she was ashamed.

"After I sent you away, I even I can understand if you're upset about it, but can't you understand my situation? I had no choice back then. If there was even the slightest possibility, I wouldn't have... Jasmine defended herself carefully with a hint of pity.

Edwin had treated her indifferently all these years, but he had never mistreated her.

However, she could not sense the sense of superiority as a mother from him.

Jasmine didn't like it and had always wanted to find an opportunity to defend herself, but she was too embarrassed to mention it.

Now that she had spoken, she wanted to defend herself to the end so that Edwin could understand.

The next moment, she said self-righteously and loudly. "You can't blame me for what I did back then. Your father just passed away, and you couldn't see at all. The doctor said that there was no possibility of recovery. In addition, you used to be so agitated and throw things.. I had way to communicate with you normally.

"Your grandfather couldn't be handled by others, so I could only I had no choice but to adopt a son. In the end, it was all for your sake.

"If you were right"

were really blind for the rest of your life, at least he would be in charge of the family business. You wouldn't be poor for the rest of your life, Edwin had always been taciturn. Even if he was dissatisfied with Jasmine, he had never complained to her.

But Jasmine's words were too shameless.

He showed more mockery with his smile and said, "You sound guilty. What do you expect me to do?"

Whoosh!

Jasmine's hand trembled and the book in her hand fell to the floor.

After being exposed so bluntly, she was so embarrassed that her face turned red. She kept blinking, and her lips trembled uncontrollably.

She stretched out her fingers, wanting to hold something, but because her hands were trembling too much, she couldn't hold anything.

Instead, she knocked over a glass.

The glass fell to the floor and shattered.

Edwin finally turned around and looked at the woman in front of him.

All these years, he did not blame Jasmine for adopting an adopted son to inherit the family business.

Edwin didn't blame her for settling him in such a remote mountainous area.

However, after she sent Edwin to Pinevale, she had never visited him.

Even an unfamiliar young lady took pity on Edwin and was willing to spend time persuading him to control his temper and encourage him to start over.

However, as his biological mother, Jasmine completely ignored him.

– Jasmine didn't settle him but abandoned him.

Obviously, Jasmine did not understand.

Disappointment appeared in his eyes as Edwin took another step forward.

Jasmine suddenly pushed down a chair.

The chair hit the floor with a loud bang.

As a mother, she didn't allow her dignity to be trampled on. She could not control her anger and shouted at Edwin's back, "Why would I feel guilty! I don't feel guilty at all!

In order to show off her aura, she shouted at the top of her lungs, "On the other hand, if you hadn't made a fuss and asked your father to send you back then, why would he be in a car accident? Why would our family encounter so much trouble? Have you forgotten! Your father wouldn't have died. He injured his brain to protect you!"

Jasmine slammed the table heavily and continued, "You made such a huge mistake. What's wrong with suffering a bit! Besides, didn't I treat your eyes and make you the successor of the Stanley family again? You didn't lose anything at all!"

This time, no matter what she said. Edwin did not stop.

His figure disappeared at the end of the stairs.

On the other hand, Jasmine collapsed on the sofa after scolding him. She could not move anymore.

She bent down and covered her face.

Even if Edwin did not refute a word, she knew in her heart that her husband was Edwin's father.

As a father, it was his human instinct to block the danger for his son. Edwin couldn't be blamed

It was only because she could not absolve herself of her absurdity that she blamed Edwin,

That was why Jasmine pushed all the blame on him.

Edwin returned to his room and rubbed the space between his eyebrows.

He laid himself down on the sofa in the bedroom and let all his strength leave him,

After a while, he picked up his phone and sent a message to Tilda: [Good night.]

When Edwin came back from showering, he realized that there were two missed calls on his phone.

One was from Tida.

One was from May.

May was his assistant and would not call him at this hour unless it was something important

Edwin pressed the button and dialed her number.

“Mr. Stanley. On the other end, May’s voice was clear, I’ve checked what you asked me to check “Speak” Edwin rubbed the bridge of his nose, but he was energized by her words.

May said, “I found the hospital that changed your cornea and found the donor’s information through some means.

She took a deep breath and continued, “However, the other party did not leave their name, age, or place of origin. I specially asked the person who took over this matter at that time and even asked about the situation.

“They said that the person who came to them was a young lady who looked to be 15 or 16 years old. Everyone thought that she was donating after death, so they tested the relevant data for her and found that her blood type was very compatible with yours. They could transplant her corneas to you.

“The girl offered to remove the corneas alive for you, but that was clearly against the law and hospital regulations. No one was willing to operate on her.

When Edwin heard these words, he felt touched and stunned. He could not help but ask, “It’s been ten years since these things happened. Can those people still remember them!”

May said, "Although ten years have passed, this matter was too abnormal at that time. If a teenage girl wanted to remove her cornea alive, it would be big news. Moreover, the girl was quite persistent. She kept asking the attending doctor for a few weeks. Who wouldn't remember? What's even more surprising is that this girl actually found a private hospital and really removed her cornea.

"Are you sure?" When Edwin heard this, he felt an extreme pain coming to his chest.

May answered, "Well I'm not 100% sure. However, the girl specifically asked to give her cornea to you by name. Moreover, her blood type matched yours in all aspects. Other than the girl, I don't think there's anyone else who would've done it."

Corneas were scarce to begin with

Only so many people died in a year, and less than 1% of them were willing to donate their organs, not to mention the cornea of a dead person.

"Do what?" Tilda's voice was filled with confusion.

Edwin thought about it and did not give an answer. He only said, "It's nothing. Go to sleep early"

Edwin decided to hide it from her and investigate in himself.

Tilda said, "But... Edwin....."

Tilda wanted to take this opportunity to call Edwin over to accompany her, but Edwin had already hung up.

Hearing the busy tone, Tilda bit her lip in frustration:

Although Edwin agreed to date her, she could not feel the same as before.

In the past, Edwin would wait for her to hang up before hanging up.

As long as she called him "Edwin", he would give everything he had to her

Moreover, what Edwin said just now was clearly not a casual question

What was Edwin trying to say?

No matter how much Tilda thought about it, she could not figure it out.

Now, she could not see through Edwin.

Tilda could not help but rub her eyebrows, but her back shoulder was suddenly grabbed by someone.

The next moment, her waist tightened as Tilda fell into a warm embrace, “It’s boring to drink alone. I’ll drink with you. An ambiguous voice slid past her ears.

Under the dim light, the man’s outline could be seen.

However, his face could not be seen clearly because he had his back against the light.

His voice was exceptionally charming in the ambiguous night.

His long fingers pinched her waist skillfully.

Tilda trembled uncontrollably.

The man took the opportunity to kiss her lips when Tilda pushed him away.

Then, Tilda retreated far away.

“Why are you here?” Tilda’s expression turned gloomy, and so did her tone.

The man remained hidden in the shadows, slowly folding his arms.

“Isn’t it lonely on such a romantic night without anyone to accompany you? The man’s voice slowed down, and his tone was even more casual.

“I’m not lonely.” Tilda controlled her emotions and said, “Hurry up and leave. It’s not good for others to see you with me.”

The man snorted.

He said, “You were clearly in love with me just now”

“That’s just a normal reaction. It’s nothing” Tilda used the alcohol to cover up the awkwardness in her heart

“Are you afraid that Edwin will find out? The man cut straight to the chase.

Tilda's hand holding the wine glass suddenly froze.

In the past, what she hated the most was others using Edwin to suppress her.

However, after a moment, she nodded and said. "You're right?"

The man tilted his head and chuckled. "Tilda, are you still your unrestrained self? I don't even recognize you anymore."

Chapter 58

"Don't provoke me. Don't think that your words can provoke me. Tilda looked at the man seriously. "I'm no longer the girl I was from four years ago. I know what to do and what not to do."

Four years ago, she relied on Edwin's love for her. She was stubborn, willful, arrogant, and unrestrained.

She always thought that she would be protected by Edwin for the rest of her life. No matter how unreasonable she was, Edwin would accept her unconditionally.

It was not until Edwin suddenly got married that she realized that she would lose him.

She lost Edwin once.

In the past four years, Tilda had suffered a lot

Only now did Tilda know that she had to cherish what she had.

"Leave" Tilda turned her back on the man.

The man still only sneered as if it was boring.

Without further ado, he strode away.

pressed it against her chest

Behind him, Tilda slowly tightened her grip on the glass and pressed

She wondered. I've finally found the one I lost four years ago.

This time, I'll definitely not repeat the same mistake.

Mrs.

I have to be with Edwin and become the real Mrs. Stanley!

May said. "Mr. Stanley, this way."

During working hours, Edwin did not go to the office.

Instead, under May's guidance, he arrived at a private hospital.

Instead of walking into the hospital, they headed for the cafe next door.

"The hospital hid this matter very well. No one dared to tell others about it. I spent some money to get someone to find the attending doctor who was involved in this matter," May said in a low voice as she walked.

She was wearing neat work clothes that made her look slender and

Her high heels tapped lightly on the ground, making a faint clicking sound.

Her voice was crisp.

May ran to the door and pushed open the door of the cafe for Edwin. The attending doctor is in here. The preparations have been done. If you want to ask him anything, he will definitely tell you."

As an assistant, May was responsible and capable.

Edwin's handsome face remained sullen the entire time. He did not express anything the entire time.

May was used to his seriousness and led him to the door of a private room. "He's in here"

Edwin suddenly sped up and grabbed the door handle.

May's eyes darkened slightly.

was rare for her to see Edwin's anxious side.

In her memory, no matter how grand the occasion was or how dangerous the situation was, Edwin was calm and steady. He had never dropped the hall

Edwin did not immediately turn the doorknob.

Instead, he was stunned for a moment.

It was impossible to tell what he was thinking.

1:16 PM ch D

Chapter 58

May only saw the man's mature and handsome face. His thick eyebrows were silently gathered, and his gaze was deep.

His lips were pursed rightly.

A few seconds later, Edwin pushed open the door and walked in.

A middle-aged man was already sitting in the private room.

Although he was slightly bloated, he looked near and filled with the smell of disinfectant

It was obvious that he had practiced medicine for many years

When he saw Edwin, the man immediately straightened up in the chair.

He stood up without any introduction and looked at Edwin uneasily.

Although Edwin was silent, he had a wrong aura.

It was obvious that he was not an ordinary person.

Edwin said calmly. "Have a seat

The man sat down.

"This is Mr. Stanley. Tell him everything you know, know, May said.

The man looked at May and nodded uneasily.

Edwin waved his hand. May understood and left

Only the male doctor and Edwin were left in the room

They each took one side.

Edwin sat down quietly.

The man could not help but secretly size Edwin up

Although the man in front of him was extremely young, the aura he gave off was not to be underestimated. It spread silently.

The doctor could not help but sit up straighter.

“How much do you remember about the girl who went to your hospital to remove the corneal Edwin was the first to speak.

His voice was steady and carried the dignity of a person in a high position.

The male doctor cleared his throat before he said, “I’ve only experienced such a thing once in my life, so I naturally remember it very clearly.”

Edwin did not say anything. He used his gaze to signal the doctor to continue.

The man’s eyes sparkled as he leaned over. “IFT tell you, are you really not going to find trouble with me?”

Even if the person involved agreed to remove the cornea, it was not allowed by law.

If it was investigated, the man’s doctor’s license would be revoked.

It was not easy to get a doctor’s license.

Edwin raised his hands.

This simple action shocked the doctor. He couldn’t help but shrink his neck, thinking that Edwin would attack him,

He did it because the man in front of him looked very difficult to get along with.

“Relax. I just want to know the truth. Edwin’s voice was aloof. “Neither you nor the hospital will be affected

He took out a check from his pocket and pressed it in front of the doctor.

Seeing the check, the doctor secretly counted the zeros on it and sighed.

Edwin was generous.

The doctor supposed that such a generous and noble-looking man would not be to him.

Dumping My Billionaire Ex Chapter 59

Only then did the doctor say. It was indeed a young girl. She looked to be sixteen or seventeen years old. At that time, she came to me and said that she wanted to remove her cornea, which scared me. I kept persuading her not to do anything stupid. She looked so anxious and kept saying that she wanted to save someone..

“You also know that no matter how much doctors like us want to save people, it’s impossible for us to make a living person blind. Moreover, the blind patients are only blind and their lives won’t be in danger, so we won’t do this,

The director was also there. He even scolded the girl and asked the security guards to take her away,

I thought she was leaving just like that, but I didn’t expect to be called into the director’s office a few days later. He said that we would need to remove on’s come

“I thought it would be taken from a dead person. I ran into the operating room and saw that it was actually that girl.

“I don’t know what method she used to force the director to agree to do this.

“The director has repeatedly said that this matter will not implicate me. As long as I keep my mouth shut after I’m done and never tell anyone else, it’s fine.”

At this point, the doctor picked up a glass of water and took a sip..

Even after nearly ten years, he still had lingering fears when this matter was brought up.

He also felt a deep sense of sin.

He continued, “I had no choice. As you know, the director of a private hospital is the boss. How could I not listen to him? So,

The doctor did not dare to miss Edwin’s expression as he spoke

Edwin lowered his head and frowned.

At some point, he had already clenched his fists.

The expression on his face was extremely solemn

The doctor’s heart skipped a beat, and he didn’t dare to continue.

After a while, he heard Edwin ask, “What happened after that?”

Although his voice was still faint, it was obvious that Edwin wasn't calm..

The doctor could not figure out what he was thinking, and he did not dare to go against his wishes. He could only brace himself and continue, "Later.. later on, the girl... You might not know, but the risk of cornea removal surgery is very lugh. Moreover, no one has done it in a living body. The girl kept asking me to do my best to protect her cornes well, so L

"Tell me the result!" Edwin shouted impatiently.

The doctor trembled violently and sat up straight.

He immediately said, "The girl was unconscious because of an intra an intraoperative infection. We thought... We thought

Even after such a long time, the doctor still feh a lingering fear, Sweat seeped out of his forehead.

He went on, "At that time, the cornea had already been removed. It would be a waste not to send it to the surgery immediately. The director had no choice but to send the cornea to the hospital designated by the girl as the client. Fortunately, the girl left relevant information for the director in advance. Otherwise, it would really be troublesome.

"Did she wake up? Edwin asked. His body tensed up when he heard that the girl was unconscious

The doctor nodded and said, "She woke up three days later. This was too dangerous. The director didn't let anyone else know. During that period, hr. 1, and a nurse took care of her. You have no idea how afraid we were at that time. We were afraid that she would die. Fortunately, she woke up in the end and didn't hold us accountsbie—Not long after she woke up, she left on her own.

The doctor patted his chest. This was probably the most dangerous thing he had experienced in his life.

When Edwin heard that the girl had finally woken up, his expression became slightly better.

"Who did the girl ask the director to give the cornea to? What's her name?" Edwin was extremely cautious about this matter.

"She gave it to someone called Edwin Stanley, the doctor replied quickly." "As for the girl, she didn't leave her full name. She only wrote the word

Chapter 59

'Sharon'

"Sharon Edwin was stunned and looked at the doctor

The next moment. Edwin grabbed his arm tightly "Where's the information? Where is it? Show it to me?"

Alanna helped Sharon into the Stardum Ophthalmology Hospital

"I'm fine. Don't hold on to me," Sharon awkwardly glanced at the people around her who seemed to be looking at him. She pulled her arm out of Alanna's grasp.

His vision was not good in one eye, but he was not completely blind.

Sharon found it too awkward to be held like this.

"How dare you say that you're fine!" Alanna was still angry.

She had forcefully pulled Sharon over for a checkup.

Of course, she hid it from Ethan.

If Ethan knew that the cornea in one of his daughter's eyes was gone, he would be terribly sad.

"Renewing your cornea was such a big deal. You're really bold. Would you even dir für Erlwin?" Alarina curved non-stop. She was completely disappointed in Sharon.

Sharon sanded helplessly and tugged at the corner of her shirt, comforting her, "Don't be angry. This won't ever happen again"

"How dare you even mention that Alanna was so angry that she almost raised her fist to punch Sharon"

After swinging her fist, she suddenly felt distressed.

Then, her eyes turned red as Alanna cursed, "You lost your cornea for that scumbag Edwin, but he can't even bear to give you his love. That bastard deserves to be struck by lightning and die a horrible death?"

Enough now. Stop cursing him Sharon gently held Alanna's hand and said, "I was the one who made the decision. I didn't tell him. Moreover, didn't I marry him for four years and make him angry for four years? I can make up for my mistake"

What's there to make up for! He only made money for four years and didn't make any losses. You've experienced all kinds of sourness and bitterness. You've already lost so much!" said Alanna as her tears finally fell uncontrollably.

She was not a crybaby

However, every time she thought about how Sharon had made such a huge sacrifice for Edwin but could not even win Edwin's smile, she could not help but feel sad for her.

In the end, it was Sharon who comforted her.

After a while, Alanna remembered that they were there for Sharon to get a checkup. She then pulled her to the specialist clinic.

When the two of them passed by, a luxury car was parked there silently,

It was not conspicuous because it was covered by green plants.

Edwin closed his eyes behind the half-opened car window,

His thick eyebrows were tightly knitted together, deep and heavy-

Her eyelashes drooped, casting a heavy shadow.

"Mr. Stanley..." May whispered uneasily.

Edwin came out of the private hospital and went straight there.

After arriving, he did nothing but sit in the car, his thick eyebrows furrowed

His brows were stained with emotions that she had never seen before

It was oppressive.

Edwin rarely showed his emotions on his face.

Chapter 39

Even if he was extremely angry, there was only a slight change in his brows.

Now that it was so obvious, May could not figure out why he had come here

She wondered if he would just sit there until dark

Five minutes later, Edwin finally opened his eyes.

Without looking at her, he said, "Go make an appointment with an expen."

"Yes, sir," replied May. She still couldn't guess what he wanted to do, but she still got out of the car and did as she was told

She had just gotten out of the car when Edwin started the car.

The car left

It was not easy to make an appointment with an expert, so May had to use some connections to get it

Therefore, she spent a lot of time.

She immediately called Edwin and told him about the appointment.

May was about to ask him when he would come over when two figures suddenly flashed in front of her.

One of them was slender.

Her long dress was wrapped around her body, and the corners of her clothes Buttered. Her long hair fell to her waist like a waterfall.

On the other end of the line, Edwin just expressed that he got it..

Dumping My Billionaire Ex Chapter 60

"Sharont" May asked

May was stunned for a moment, thinking that she was seeing things.

She had never seen Sharon in such a beautiful appearance,

Not only had Sharon's appearance changed, but even her temperament had changed.

Originally, Sharon would keep her head lowered with a dull and careful expression and pale skin.

She looked lifeless like a living ghost locked up in a wealthy family.

But now, Sharon was dazzling and beautiful.

Her every frown and smile was attractive.

Her face was sparkling, fair, smooth, and tender.

Her entire body seemed to be glowing

Even if Sharon was standing among a group of beauties, she would still be dazzling.

While May was sizing up Sharon, the latter and Alanna also saw her.

Alanna knew that May was Edwin's capable assistant and Tilda's bestie, so she wasn't nice to her

Although Alanna did not speak, her expression was clearly alont when she walked past May

There was only disgust on Alanna's face.

May was not in the mood to care about Alanna's expression. She only stared at Sharon and asked arrogantly. "What are you doing here?"

Who are your Why should we report our arrival in your Alanna snapped at her

She hated Edwin and would never be polite to anyone related to him.

May had worked for Edwin for a long time and had been fluttered by many people. She naturally kept a proud expression on her face.

When May heard Alana's rebuttal, her expression changed slightly.

However, she didn't get angry.

Instead, she showed an obvious mocking smile and said, "Sharon, you and Mr. Stanley have already divorced. Can you stop doing disgusting things? He didn't even look you in the eyes for four years in the Stanley family's place. What can you get from stalking him now?"

"Sulking him?" Sharon looked at May and smiled while repeating what she said,

Did she mean that Edwin was also there?

ger

May had never had a good impression of Sharon before. Now, she was even more unrestrained as she said disdainfully. If I were you, I would educate myself to improve my temperament and ability after I get a divorce. Women can only win men's hearts with their appearances temporarily. It's always charm that keeps a man's heart. Without enough charm, no matter how much you imitate the more excellent one, you'll still be nothing?"

After saying that, May did not forget to size up Sharon's attire.

She was mocking Sharon of trying to use her looks to win back Edwin's heart and even imitating Tilda

Sharon did not feel angry when she heard what May said. She only found it hilarious.

She was an internet celebrity with tens of millions of fans. In the live broadcast room, not only did she sing and dance, but she also taught some knowledge about clothes matching Tilda's current attire and image must have been picked up from her.

Sharon naturally wouldn't expose May because there was no need to explain to a small fry like her

Alanna thought differently.

Sharon could ignore May because she looked down on her, but Alanna could not let others bully her friend at will.

Chapter 60

May's words were so blunt and unpleasant. Of course, Alanna had to react Alanna sneered and said. "May, you're right. I'm enlightened by your words"

May was taken aback.

She couldn't believe that Alanna was actually praising her in front of her good friend

However, what Alanna said next made her expression change quickly.

"Since you're so talkative, why don't you use this theory to educate yourself? Someone like you who can't even differentiate between good and bad should learn more. Well, I guess that won't work for you, May. You're simply hopeless?"

“What did you say?” said May in disbelief. Whenever she went out, she would be flattered by many people because of Edwin. She had never been insulted like this before.

Her pale face turned purple with anger.

Alanna was usually vicious and heartless. At this moment, she would not show May any respect and continued to say unpleasant words, “You’re just Edwin’s lackey but yet you’re always acting like a king. Do you think others are blind and can’t smell the shit in your world”

“Shut up!” May roared, her lips trembling

However, Alanna couldn’t stop scolding her, “It’s your business if you want to suck up to that scumbag Edwin Don’t drag Sharon into this. A small fry like you is not even worthy of licking her boots!

“By the way, Sharon doesn’t know that scumbag Edwin is here, and even if she does, this is a public place. Since Edwin can come here, why can’t we? Well, you were walking behind us just now. It looks like you and Edwin have been stalking us

“May, can you explain why you’ve been stalking us?”

“What... I didn’t. It’s nonsense... May was so angry that she couldn’t even speak clearly

Alanna glanced at her disdainfully and said, “Sharon has already divorced Edwin. Can you stop doing such a disgusting thing like stalking? Sharon stayed in the Stanley family for four years and did so many things for Edwin, but he never took them seriously. Now that they’re divorced, he even wants her to pay attention to him. Do you think that’s gonna happen!”—

Not only did she scold May, but she also disgraced her.

May might be good at doing business, but her skills in fighting and insulting others were clearly inferior to Alanna’s

Alanna’s words rendered her speechless and her face turned red

“That’s enough.” Sharon walked over. She tagged at Alanna and said, “It’s her nature to act cheap. Don’t lower yourself to her level”

When Sharon came to stop Alanna, May thought that Sharon wouldn’t dare to cause trouble because she was afraid of Edwin and her.

Unexpectedly, Sharon actually also belittled her.

Sharon's belittling words were not as harsh as Alanna's, but they got to May.

One had to know that Sharon had always been soft except for the time when she rebuked May during the divorce.

In the past, whenever May bossed her around at the Stanley Manor, Sharon wouldn't dare to say anything about lay was Edwin's assistant. She was second only to him.

Even the Stanley family members would be polite to her

May had already regarded herself as an incomparably noble figure

In her heart, Sharon was like a lowly servant.

May thought, I'm high and mighty. How can I be—suppressed by someone like a servant? What's this? This is humiliation. Sharon humiliated me worse than Alanna did. How unbelievable!"

May said furiously, "Sharon, you...."

Sharon interrupted her by saying. "We're leaving"

May thought of a bunch of words to scold Sharon, which were all the most unpleasant words.

In the end, Sharon had already left before May could curse her.

Chapter 10

May was speechless.

There was strong anger in her chest that she could not vent, but she could not follow Sharon and curse her.

It was inconsistent with her status to follow someone and curse them.

In the end, May could only clench her fists as her chest heaved.

Her breathing quickened.

Her heart was pounding so violently that she felt like she was about to have a heart attack

It was not until a while later that May could think properly.

She suddenly thought of something

She wondered, What's Sharon doing here?

"This is a professional ophthalmology hospital, which offers only services of eye checkups.

'Hence, Sharon is here for an eye checkup

At the thought of this, May suddenly had a bad feeling

For some reason, she just felt very uneasy.

She walked quickly to a nurse and asked in a low voice, "Excuse me, I saw Alanna Jensen just now. Is she here for an eye checkup?"

Alanna knew a lot of people, so May supposed it would be easy to ask about her.

I'm sorry, but I can't reveal the patient's information, the nurse said politely ep that a secret, how could she keep her job

This was the best and most expensive ophthalmology hospital. If the nurse couldn't even keep Since May couldn't get any information from the nurse, she could only walk downstairs.

She had just turned a corner when she saw Edwin.

When she saw the person beside Edwin, she gasped and was so shocked that her face turned pale
