Chapter 301 Speeding on the Road

In the Crawford family, Bettany overheard that two days ago, it seemed that a thief came in over the wall, and the dogs barked in the servant building.

During breakfast, she nagged, "The servant said on July 15th, a thief came in over the wall and seemed to be carrying two sacks, but the servant didn't find anything missing, and he didn't see anyone else... Did any of you lose anything?"

Lilly and Josh were taken aback for a moment.

Two sacks?

Hugh frowned,

id:

check the surveillance? Are you sure he came in with two sacks or did he leave the mansion with two sacks?"

A thief came in by climbing over the wall? That's impossible.

Wealthy people lived in that area and the security was tight. Not to mention that the Crawford family also hired a security team to guard the mansion.

Besides, even if they were robbed, the thief could never bring everything out of the house...

Bettany's face was strange, "Don't you think that it was a coincidence that the surveillance system was down last night?"

Josh choked and coughed violently.

Blake placed a glass of water in front of Josh and said calmly, "I'll see if I can recover the footage later,"

Bettany nodded, "Please do so. I feel like it's pretty weird, and it would be best if nothing happened,"

Blake agreed.

Josh was dumbfounded.

How did his uncle not react when Bettany said it to him?

It was he who climbed over the wall that morning.

And the two sacks on his shoulders were him and Lilly.

Drake and Anthony were expressionless as if they knew everything.

Lilly put down her cutlery, and said obediently, "Grandma, I'm full!"

Josh followed her and said, "I'm full too!"

Hannah was already 5 years old!

She must be missing out on some brain cells.

At least Lilly was better than Hannah.

Maybe their hair can be saved if I brought them to a salon.

Bettany twitched her eyelids, "DO you think you are good girls after cutting your hair like this? Both of you... come out right now,"

Lilly and Hannah went out obediently down and stood in the corridor.

“Who started it?” Bettany asked.

Hannah stepped forward bravely, and stretched out her hand, “I did!”

Lilly hurriedly waved her hands, “No, I started it! I said that I wanted to cut my hair!”

Bettany did not know if she was supposed to laugh or get mad at them. Eventually, she brought out her phone and took some pictures.

In case of any unexpected situation, maintain composure and take a picture first. Then, share it in your story.

“Snap!”

The image of the two girls with bad haircuts standing guiltily next to the corridor would remain permanent in the photos.

Bettany sent the photo to the family group, and the group exploded with replies.

Anthony and Liam responded with a question mark, Bryson sent a gif of someone spitting out coffee, and Jonas was speechless while Edward jokingly asked, “When did this hairstyle become popular?”. Gilbert also responded, “Give me back my cute girls!” while Blake replied, “Not bad, it shows their personality,”

Upon hearing that Lilly was coming, Quinnie's eyes lit up, and she rushed out to welcome her.
When Quinnie's mother saw Quinnie this excitedly, she stood up calmly and followed her.

Lilly entered the Woods family's house and exclaimed, "It's so beautiful!"

She saw the house decorated with pink flowers, teddy bears, hearts, stars, and candies...

It was cute and dreamy!

Anthony seemed to remember something, and asked, "Lilly, did you receive the teddy bear bouquet I gave you that day?"

He had forgotten about it because of Jean.

Lilly nodded and said, "Yeah, I did, thank you, Uncle Jonas!"

Jonas felt comfortable after hearing that. He could not bear Lilly to like others' teddy bears more than his gift.

Quinnie walked out before they could enter the house.

Quinnie could not hide her joy and froze when she saw Lilly.

Did Lilly cut her hair?

That's... so adorable!

"Lilly!" Quinnie hugged her, "Wow, you got a new haircut! It's so pretty!"

"Thank you for coming to my birthday party. I prepared cupcakes, homemade honey, cupcakes, and chocolate pudding. Which one do you want to eat first?"

Lilly felt hungry and asked impatiently, "Can we eat them all together?"

Quinnie suddenly felt that her hard work was not in vain, and happily carried Lilly to the dining area.

Jonas looked at the gift he brought and noticed that he had not given Quinnie her birthday present yet.

He did not even have the chance to talk to her.

At this moment, he wondered if Quinnie wanted Jonas to come or if she just wanted to see Lilly.

He was about to find a place to sit down when Quinnie's parents came over. Quinnie's father greeted him as he was one of the eight brothers of the Crawford family.

Quinnie's mother looked at Jonas, and the more she observed him, the more satisfied she became.

Jonas wore gold-rimmed glasses and he looked elegant. He looked amazing.

Chapter 304 A Room Full of Dolls

Lilly was not as nervous as Grace and was relaxed. Upon seeing Grace admit that she was not the one who found the foolish ghost first and felt awkward, Lilly comforted her, "It's okay..."

Grace felt that she was trying to make her mad on purpose!

Before she could say anything. Lilly asked again. "Where do you keep your ghosts, Grace? Do you keep them in that room on the second floor?"

Grace frowned and thought that Lilly was annoying.

She stood up expressionlessly, not wanting to talk to Lilly at all.

Quinnie came over with mango ice cream, just in time to see what Lilly was pointing at, and said, "That's my room."

Lilly was stunned.

It's Quinnie's room? Then why are there so many ghosts in it?

Although the ghosts were not very powerful, they were not vengeful spirits at all... However, there were any of them.

They were spirits that were about to dissipate and their presence was so weak it was like they did not exist.

"Quinnie, can I go to your room?" Lilly was worried.

She glanced at Grace.

Why didn't Grace notice there were so many ghosts in Quinnie's room?

It seemed that Grace was not as powerful as she thought.

Grace regained consciousness.

There are ghosts in Quinnie's room? What a joke!

Her spirit compass was normal when she was at home, how could it be possible?

Quinnie looked happy and said, "Of course, I have so many things in my room! Come with me, I'll show you!"

She handed a cup of homemade honey to Lilly and poured herself a glass of it as well. She asked casually, "Gracie, do you want some? You can get it yourself, it's in the fridge,"

Chapter 305 You Have a Skill Issue

Quinnie explained, "There are many materials for making dolls, they're generally made of resin, plastic, ceramic clay, and many more. I won't talk about other niche ones. Different dolls are made of different proportions of materials. For example, the doll's texture might be different depending on the ratio of the material added when making it,"

"I commissioned an experienced doll maker and they make high-quality dolls. Coco is 9 years old now and her body hasn't turned yellow yet. However, she has become more tender and delicate with time..."

Quinnie looked at Coco fondly.

Lilly pursed his lips and looked at the doll she was holding.

"Quinnie, I think something's wrong with this doll," Quinnie said nervously, "What's wrong with it? It's impossible,"

She hurriedly grabbed the doll and said, "It was fine yesterday..."

She flipped Coco around, only to find a tiny crack at the root of Coco's bun.

The crack was incredibly tiny, it was a problem for Quinnie.

Quinnie felt distressed, "I see it now, I'll try contacting someone from the doll lovers' community to see if they can fix it,"

She told Lilly to wait for her and made a phone call.

Lilly looked at Grace, "Grace, do you see the problem?"

Grace put down the doll and said coldly, "There is no problem, the only problem is that the dolls attract a bad aura and caused many ghosts to lurk around,"

She began to look around Quinnie's room. Was the position of Quinnie's room the cause of it? Or did she leave something impure here? Could Quinnie bring something impure to her room after filming?

Grace did not realize that there was a ghost in this room before. Grace did not believe that her skill was that bad. She passed by the room several times but couldn't detect anything unusual. She assumed that the ghosts came into the room on the 14th of July...

However, if the ghosts came in on the 14th of July, how could she not notice it since she stayed at the Woods Villa for the past few days? Wouldn't it mean her skills were terrible?

Grace's face was cold, and her heart collapsed.

Lilly looked at Grace who was walking around with her spirit compass and shook her head, "You're still weak, Grace,"

Grace was speechless.

Lilly looked at the ghosts all over the room, and whispered, “Uncle Jonas, can you help me distract Quinnie? I wanna get rid of all the ghosts,”

Jonas nodded without hesitation, “Okay,” back.

She cursed and looked angry, and then saw Jonas looking at her with a strange expression.

“Uhh... What’s wrong, Mr. Jonas?” Quinnie smiled at him politely.

Jonas touched his nose, “It’s nothing,”

A trace of doubt flashed in Quinnie’s eyes, and she was about to walk around him.

But Jonas suddenly stretched out his hand and stopped her.

“Mr. Jonas?” Quinnie was taken aback.

Jonas said, “There was a scene you were supposed to film today but you’re on leave. The director said there were a few important scenes and I need to tell you about them,”

Quinnie was puzzled.

Today was her birthday.

How could someone talk to her about work when it was her birthday?

How ruthless...

In the room, Lilly was waving at the ghosts as she bounced around, “Hi, hello, the ghosts over there... Can you look over here?”

The dull-looking ghosts on the display case by the window looked at her.

Lilly said again, “Come on, the ghosts there... Can you look at me?”

The ghosts in the display cabinet at the end of the bed turned around dumbly.

Their expressions were dull and stiff, only their eyes moved flexibly.

Chapter 307 Lilly's Plea

Lilly was eating watermelon when she noticed everyone saying goodbye. She then raised her head, "Huh?"

Why are we going back now?

She did not want to go home...

Lilly missed the opportunity to hir Grace, or rather, she missed the chance to discuss the doll with her.

Jonas. "Alright then, goodbye,"

Sporting a faint smile, he donned a black suit adorned with exquisite, shimmering diamonds, an ensemble that exuded a subdued yet opulent aura. Despite his courteous appearance, there was still a hint of roguishness about him.

It did not look like he was afraid of that place and wanted to leave at all...

Lilly thought about it for a moment, "Whatever,"

Jonas was her uncle after all.

If Jonas wanted to go home, Lilly would take him home.

She would talk about the doll with Gracie... No, Grace the next time!

"Goodbye, Mr. and Mrs. Woods!" Lilly waved, "Goodbye, Quinnie!"

At that moment, Grace was staring at Lilly silently by the railing.

Lilly rolled smiled and waved at her, "Goodbye, Gracie!"

Grace was speechless.

I told her my name isn't Gracie!

Despite her parents and sisters referring to her as Gracie, Lilly's usage of that name only intensifies her disdain for it.

Lilly looked for Josh the moment she reached home.

"Spring Friends Community?" Josh was stunned, "What's wrong with them?"

Lilly whispered in his ear, "They make dolls using human ashes,"

Josh was taken aback.

Instead of leaping to his feet, a shiver ran down his spine, causing goosebumps to cover his body. He could even sense the hairs on the top of his head bristle with an unsettling sensation.

"Spring... Friends right?"

Josh powered up the computer, mustering the strength to steady his trembling fingers, and proceeded to type the name into the search box.

On the internet, Josh came across a brief introduction to the doll community. What struck him as odd was that numerous doll clubs provided detailed self-introductions and showcased a wide array of completed doll images.

Apart from their address, phone number, and a handful of pictures featuring classic dolls, there was nothing else of substance available.

Chapter 308 Strange Dollhouse

The Pearl District’s central business district, known as the old downtown, boasts narrower roadways and comparatively shorter buildings compared to the newer parts of the city.

Among the 20 or 30–story buildings in the area, the Opelucid Building stands as a prominent landmark, soaring 47 stories high.

There were many companies in the Opelucid Building, such as hotels, catering, clothing, jewelry, and shoes, and various companies rented office buildings and offices...

Spring Friends was located on the 38th floor of the Opelucid Building. However, it was not eye–catching as there were hundreds of companies with thousands of facades.

Josh reached the given address and stood in front of the unpretentious shop. He could not believe that this seemingly ordinary place was the renowned doll store producing five–million–dollar dolls.

Lilly pointed to a tiny sign on the door and read, “Spring Friends Doll House,”

Drake twitched his mouth. “How many words are there?”

Huh? Oh, I know this one!

Lilly counted the number of words on the sign and replied, “Two!!”

Drake continued, “How many words did you say just now?”

Lilly counted as the words on the sign, “One, two, Three, Four... Four words!”

Drake let out a cold snort and remarked, “Exactly, you can at least count correctly. The sign has two words, but you said four words. Does that make sense?”

Lilly shook her head innocently. “Sorry Drake, I was wrong,”

Drake choked.

He then continued, “It says Spring Friends,”

Lilly nodded and stared at the words, trying hard to remember them.

At this time, a girl came out from inside. She was wearing an apron, bent over slightly, and smiled, “Hello kids, what brings you here....”

Josh said, “We are here to buy dolls,”

The young lady was taken aback, and looked around strangely, “Where are your parents?”

The man grabbed Lilly's arm, his eyes were strangely bright in the dim backlight. His voice was hoarse, cold, and gloomy.

"Hello little girl, what are you looking at? Do you wanna go in?"

He held an empty sack and was about to put it on Lilly's head.

However, before he could react, he flew out!

With a loud bang, the man slammed into the wall, causing the nearby display cases to shake violently. The impact was so strong that a doll even toppled to the side.

Drake heard this movement as soon as he came in, and subconsciously rushed over to stand in front of Lilly.

Lilly turned around and blinked innocently.

She looked at Drake and thought, "When did Drake come?"

She looked at the person who flew out, "How did he fly out?"

-Drake's expression was cold, and he asked coldly, "Who are you?!"

The man in the gray overalls struggled to get up, coughing violently as he clutched his knees. A flicker of horror crossed his eyes when he lifted his gaze.

For a moment, he could not tell whether he was beaten by this little boy, or he was hit by a ghost.

"Who are you?" He asked back.

As Drake stared at him coldly, the man had no choice but to speak up first, "I'm a staff member here..."

His voice was hoarse, resembling the grating sound of a saw, which evoked an indescribable sense of discomfort in those who heard it.

The man looked at Lilly and said again, "I saw her at the door, so I asked her if she wanted to go in,"

Hearing this answer, Drake frowned and became more vigilant.

Drake's heart tightened, he stood up and whispered, "Lilly!"

Lilly raised her head and comforted him, "Don't worry Drake, everything's fine!"

Drake was helpless.

It seemed that the dangerous situation was planned intentionally, and Lilly, being a young child, was unaware of the imminent danger they were in.

Drake forcibly pulled her away, "Let's go, why did you and Josh want to come here in the first place?"

He was sure that the place was not normal at all.

Lilly said, "It's a place where there are a few people here! Don't you hate crowds?"

Drake was speechless.

"Let's go," He dragged Lilly out with a cold expression.

Lilly hurriedly took out something from her bag. "Not yet, Drake. I'm not done with my job yet,"

She took out a handful of talismans, ran to the box, and struggled to open it.

I can't open it...

"Drake..." She had no choice but to look at Drake with wide eyes.

Drake's heart raced as he cautiously opened the wooden box, only to quickly retreat in shock as he discovered its unsettling contents.

As Drake took a step forward, he suddenly felt something slippery beneath his feet. Looking down, he was startled to find himself stepping on mysterious black hair.

Drake's heart skipped a beat.

Lilly tossed a talisman into the wooden box, causing a sudden burst of green flame.

A sudden scream pierced the air and quickly faded away.

Drake's eyes widened in shock as he stared at the blazing wooden box.

When... did she light it on fire?

Did someone scream just now?

He wondered if he was hallucinating.

When the flames extinguished, Drake lifted Lilly and hurriedly made his way out of the room
