

Enchanted 219

There were seven people to be interrogated in total, and she was the fifth.

When it was her turn, Jay asked her coldly, "What's your name?"

Lilith squatted there silently.

Jay stopped, looking up at her, and then repeated, "What's your name?"

She squinted at his face and couldn't wait to bite off his nose. She gnashed her teeth and answered, "Lilith."

"Sex?"

Hearing this, she widened her eyes, gazed at his handsome face, and replied sharply, "You decide."

Jay looked up at her again expressionlessly and jotted down a note.

"Age."

She still kept silent.

Jay slapped the pen on the table and frowned at her. He looked serious and said to her, "Please cooperate with me."

She had never seen him like this and drew back her neck in her collar like a turtle. "Twenty-three." She replied.

Jay took up and continued, "Why did you go there? Did you see anyone who sells drugs there?"

"I am innocent, and I don't even know them," Lilith tried to explain to him and added while she stood up, "I don't know anything about the drugs, and I...."

"Have I asked you to stand up?" Jay roared at her.

"Jay, this is too much of you," She was worked up.

The people in this room all looked at them, but Jay still kept his countenance and warned her, "Don't move."

Clenching her fists, Lilith had no choice but to follow his words. "Did you see any suspicious people there?"

"No." She replied resentfully.

Jay recorded and repeated the question again, "Why did you go there?"

"I went there for a blind date."

He suddenly stopped and looked up, frowning at her, "A blind date?"

"I went there to find out if the man who will date me is reliable. And if he was, I was going to get married to him." She said directly and widened her eyes at him.

Jay was shocked and frowned even more tightly, "Why?"

He did not know why he would ask her like this, and his question had a deeper meaning.

But Lilith stood up again and roared at him without any hesitation, "It is because you pushed me to do so." Then she turned to the people around, asking, "Have you ever seen such a man who would force his girlfriend to go on a blind date with another man?"

They were all astonished by her words, and one of the girls even said slowly, "Hey girl, have you know that is just the instinct of men. They are the most unreliable creatures in the world."

After she finished her words, others began to whisper.

His face changed after hearing this, and then he took out his phone and called someone, while at the same time keeping his eyes on Lilith, "Larry, come in, please."

Lilith rolled her eyes at him and leaned against the wall with her arms crossed. Larry came in, and Jay ordered him to take the others out and urged him not to let them go until their families came.

When everyone left, Jay stood up, walked to the interrogation room's mirror, and pressed a switch. After that, he also turned off the camera.

Lilith stared at him with vigilance and rushed to the corner of the room as if to avoid a monster. Jay did not step forward but went back to his chair, leaving her panicking, and then he asked slowly. "Who is the man you are going to date?"

"It's none of your business," She replied harshly.

"You just said that you are my girlfriend, so I have to ask you this," There was a faint sulkiness in his eyes.

She sneered and said, "How can you allow me to talk nonsense now? Dear officer, I dare not claim any relationship with you. What's more, now that you are so unselfish, why did you turn off the cameras?"

Jay ignored her and looked through the papers on the table, and after a long time, he said briefly, "Ben."

She was shocked.

"You are going to date, Ben." He repeated and put the papers back.

"How do you know?"

Jay did not intend to hide from her and replied, "Only his family's status could match yours. Of course, there are some suspects that have been released, and he may be among them. But I guess that it's Ben."

She gnashed her teeth and snorted for a few seconds, "Yes, I am going to date him. If possible, I will get married to him."

"Get married to him?" Jay laughed and pointed to the papers on the table, "Are you serious? He is a dandy who always dates different girls and even takes an analeptic.

"I don't care. It's my business," Lilith offended him and then added, "Analeptic is not methamphetamine. Nowadays, many people take it. If you want to arrest a major suspect, why not go back to Florida?"

"It seems that you know a lot about him." Jay leaned on the chair and then asked indifferently, "Did you fall in love with each other at first sight, or have you been in love for a long time?"

"Jay, no matter what the situation is, I won't find a man worse than you."

"A man who takes an analeptic?"

"I have told you he just takes it for fun." She leaned against the wall and sneered.

Jay did not continue to interrogate her, and he stepped toward her quickly after a long while. After seeing this, she was no longer calm and pointed at him and said, "What do you want to do? I can sue you." She wouldn't have been as worried if he did not turn off the camera.

"Now that you know him so well, why not talk to me? If you can explain it clearly to me, I will release him, but if you can't, you'll have to stay here with him."

Lilith looked up, pretending to be calm, and said, "If you have any evidence, then you can arrest me now."

"You want to protect him?" Jay pinched her chin.

The pain spread from her chin to her teeth, and she almost burst out in tears. She pushed him angrily, "Yes. What's wrong with that? You are not allowed to restrain me. Do you have any evidence?"