

Enchanted 381

"You, you....."

"Now you are being punished since your own daughter is abandoned by her husband. Why not teach your daughter how to tempt the man, or your daughter would not suffer the grievance?"

"Aunt, stop." Irish knew well about Mary, who was shrewish, and no one was qualified to be her opponent. She usually told them the old saying that nice guys finish last, so she would never let off a bitch woman.

Mary drew a clear demarcation between whom or what to hate or love. She always believed that little help would bring much return, but she would also return blow for blow. Though Irish's mother had totally different characteristics from Mary's, they were still as intimate as full sisters. And that was why Mary hated Shirley to the core, and she even wanted to kill her.

Those bystanders were gesticulating and discussing animatedly. Shirley was full of rage, and she shouted at the driver, "Call the police immediately. Find a lawyer for me, and I am going to sue this bitch!"

It was a mess, and as a result, two of them were brought to the police station.

Jay was having a meeting when he received the call, and actually, it was an important meeting since he was convening an elite backbone to deploy the next anti-drug mission. After receiving the call, he had no choice but to go to the police station hastily. Although he was transferred back to the anti-drug group, his colleagues at the police station still knew him because of his capability. One of his colleagues immediately took him to meet Mary as soon as he arrived at the police station.

Lilith had already arrived after getting the call. Kelly was also brought back to the police station with Shirley, so when Lilith got the call from the police station, she thought something had happened to Kelly. It was not until she arrived here that she knew that it was Mary and Shirley who fought before the public.

Mary was a little embarrassed when she saw Jay while Irish leaned against the chair. Her head was in a mess, so when she saw Jay, she hastily said to him as if he was a savior, "Let us get out of here as soon as possible."

Shirley's swollen face was too horrible to look at, and her hair was disheveled. Though Kelly did not get involved in the fight, her hands still were scratched accidentally, while Irish was luckily unhurt. But she was also annoyed since it should have been a good holiday for her. Mary's hair was also a mess, and there were two scratches on her neck.

Therefore, Shirley was at a disadvantage, and she shouted that she would sue Mary while Mary was also angry and roared at her that she was not afraid of that.

Kelly was relatively calm and reproached Shirley to stop shouting. After persuading for a long time, they finally left the police station, but before they left, Mary warned Shirley that if she met her the next time, she would beat her more violently.

Shirley began to cry out and said to those policemen, "Do you hear that? She is threatening me! I am going to sue her for intimidation."

Lilith was so awkward since Jay was also there. Kelly spent all of her might to get Shirley into the car, and she glared at Lilith and said angrily, "Get in the car quickly, and I have something to ask you."

Lilith took a look at Jay and then got in the car reluctantly, while Jay also drew back his eyes until the car left.

Steven was so angry when they went back home, and he even poked Mary's head and said irritably, "Do you still a small kid, and why did you fight with others in public?"

Mary was ill-affected and began to argue with him, and as a result, Steven was so angry that he walked out to his Martial Arts Hall directly.

After he left, Mary began to scold Jay indignantly, "Why don't you make a good showing? Do you know others say you are a policeman who deceives the feelings of girls? I have warned you that you'd better stay away from Lilith, or I am not going to recognize you as my son."

Jay was speechless and hinted at Irish to help him.

Irish immediately walked forward and persuaded her, "Aunt, it's none of his business today. Don't blame him...."

However, before she could finish her words, Mary pointed at Irish and said angrily, "You are unable to fend for yourself. Tell me what Shirley means."

Irish knew what she wanted to ask, but she just pretended not to know and replied, "I don't know what she means."

"Don't feign ignorance to me." Mary said angrily and continued, "What is your relationship with Ruby's husband? Why did she say you went to South Africa? Who are you with during your trip?"

Irish's heart trembled, and she sighed, "Don't trust Shirley. It is all nonsense. I traveled alone." She knew that if she explained her relationship with Joseph to her Aunt at this moment was like adding fuel to the flame.

"You weren't with him?" Mary was still suspicious about that.

Irish shook her head and replied, "I wasn't with him. And you also know what happened to us. I really traveled alone."

Mary then was relieved, and then she began to scold Shirley again, "Shirley is a bitch from hell, and I will kill her if I meet her next time." Jay and Irish were so anxious since their united front was ramshackle under Mary's rage.

Irish would definitely not go to the Lake family but for Joseph, let alone spend the holiday with them together. She received the call from Henry in the early morning when she was asleep while the phone rang continuously on the bed stand. Irish had a dream in which she was kissing Joseph. However, the phone ring interrupted her sweet dream.

She reached out but accidentally fell down to the ground, which made her sober up completely. She climbed into the bed and then connected the phone. Hearing her voice, Henry seemed to perceive that she was still in the bed, so he smiled softly and urged her several times to arrive earlier while Irish replied impatiently and then hung up. When she finished the phone call, she was awake.

And actually, she was a little regretful since she agreed to have lunch with the Lake family. When she was pondering, Lilith called her and asked when she would arrive, and she was even more perturbed, so she replied to her that she did not want to go. However, Lilith persuaded her that it was interesting to see Shirley's swollen face since she knew that Irish hated her very much.

Hearing this, Irish was also curious about that, so she decided to go and have a look. What's more, she really missed Joseph, and she was a little excited.
