e most powerful family in Riverton, the Hartleys, right? The Padillas are close with the Hartleys. To find someone's address in Riverton, I just need to ask around."

Chapter 741

"The Hartley family? Are you tight with them or something?"

Zack was just starting to warm up to Marcus, but now that he heard this lowlife was chummy with him, he suddenly went cold on Marcus. He even began to suspect that Marcus might be in cahoots with this jerk to hurt Cornelia.

The thought drained the color from Zack's face. He didn't dare think about it. If Marcus and Cornelia's marriage was just a scheme for some unspeakable purpose, then Cornelia's life might be ruined.

Roman thought Zack was scared of the Hartleys he mentioned, looking smugger than ever. I'm here because I knew it's your birthday today. Thought I'd come celebrate with you."

He brought out a birthday cake hidden behind him. "Look, I even got you a birthday cake. Not sure if you're familiar with the brand. It costs a lot more than your average cake. You can't buy it even if you have the money, not without a membership card."

He made it sound like the cake was some rare treasure. Abigail was pissed. "We don't need you to celebrate our birthday, and we don't need your cake. Back off, and stay out of our sight."

"You're not having it? Really?" Roman raised the cake for a look, then shook his head. He walked over to a nearby trash can with them watching. "You're really not having it?"

He tossed the cake into the bin. "Sure you won't pick it up and eat it after I leave?"

Zack and Abigail were disgusted. "Beat it!"

"I've got stuff to deal with, can't just leave." Roman brushed off his hands and straightened his clothes. "Actually, I'm here for Cornelia. Could you go get her? I'd like to invite her to lunch."

Roman's mention of Cornelia got him a punch in the face from Zack. "You shameless jerk, you have the nerve to ask for Cornelia? Who do you think you are? You think she's someone you can just call up? She's married. Get away from her, and stop harassing her."

Roman's face darkened. "She's my woman. Even if I'm done with her, she can't marry another man without my permission."

Zack and Abigail were disgusted by his words. "Who are you? You think you're important? She's your woman? Have you ever held her hand?"

Not having held Cornelia's hand was a lifelong regret for Roman. Back then, he had been madly pursuing her, using every trick in the book to make her agree to date him.

He thought that once Cornelia agreed to date him, he could do whatever he wanted. But he never expected that he wouldn't even get to hold her hand after they started going out.

This woman always had a reason to keep him at arm's length. Once, in a library, he was planning to make his move when everyone else had left. Just as he saw his chance, these two people suddenly interrupted him and ruined his plan.

Thinking back, these two had ruined his plans more than once. Every time he found a chance to date Cornelia, they always interfered

They said that since they grew up together, if one of them went on a date, the other two had to come along to learn from the experience. It sounded like they were there for reference, but they were really just freeloading.

Chapter 742

After all these years, he'd been itching to see Comelia, but he was still stuck with these two pains in the neck.

Talk about bad luck!

Roman didn't want to dredge up his cruddy past, but he was here now and he was going to take Cornelia out for a meal if it killed him.

He asked, "Comelia is working at the Hartley Group now, right?"

Abigail was a bit thrown, but remembering that Cornelia's husband was the president at the Hartley Group, she regained her nerve. "How do you know Comelia is working at the Hartley Group?"

Roman scoffed, "I told you before, there's no stone unturned for the Padilla family in Riverton. Ask her if she wants to keep her job. Plenty of folks who'd jump at the chance if she doesn't. If she does, she can join me for a meal, and we'll talk about the past."

"What the hell do you want with Comelia? I'm warning you, if you lay a finger on her, I'll knock your lights out." Zack didn't know much about Marcus, some from Cornelia, some from the grapevine.

Zack heard the rumors about Marcus first and received a lot of information from outside sources. As a result, his inner inclination led him to believe that Marcus might not be a good person.

When Roman brought up the Hartley Group again, Zack got antsy.

But Abigail was more sure-footed. She was a die-hard fan of Cornelia and Marcus and believed Marcus was head over heels for Comelia.

When Roman made this threat, she thought it was a laugh. "If you are so awesome, why don't you just introduce yourself as one of the Padillas instead of constantly dropping the Hartley name? Your names have nothing to do with each other, stop riding the Hartley's coattails."

“I’d go as far as to say we’re like family with the Hartleys.” Abigail’s comment hit Roman where it hurt and he started to scramble.

The Padillas had always been small potatoes, living off the Hartley’s for decades. Marcus’ grandfather was always good to the Padillas, lending a hand whenever they needed.

But when Brennen took over the group, he didn’t give two hoots about his mother’s wishes, only caring about skirt-chasing, and turned a blind eye to the Padillas’ needs.

During Brennen’s reign, the Padillas lost a lot of deals and their shot at being top dogs in Riverton. So they went downhill, each day worse than the last.

But when Marcus took over, the Padillas saw a glimmer of hope, hoping the kid they knew would heed his grandmother’s words and lend the Padillas a hand.

And the kid did, but his help was making the Padillas fend for themselves, which was not what they wanted.

The Padillas had been leeching off the Hartleys for years; they’d lost their ability to make a living, only hoping for handouts from the Hartleys.

Marcus didn’t directly give money or possessions, which led the Padilla family to rely on themselves to make a living.

Chapter 743

Yes, the Padilla family members had lost their ability to earn a living and support themselves

They were grateful that Granny Luisa knew how to return a favor. After her son and grandson stopped helping the Padilla family, she would take some dough out of her personal account every month for them.

Of course, this little moolah couldn't satisfy them. They bragged about their tight bond with the Hartley family to everyone, so people would come to them for introductions, hoping to cozy up to the Hartleys. And naturally, the intro fee wasn't exactly peanuts.

Over the years, the Padilla family had raked in a pretty penny through Granny Luisa's support and the generous gifts from people trying to brown-nose. They now lived a cushy life without having to lift a finger, way better than many others.

"Cornelia is yours? You get to decide if Cornelia can work at the Hartley Group? Your relationship with the Hartley family is as tight as family? Who do you think you are, spouting such shameless crap?"

Marcus' voice suddenly echoed from behind Zack and Abigail. His voice was not only deep and strong, but also had a chilling coldness.

They turned towards the voice and saw not only the tall and dashing Marcus, but also the elegant and graceful Cornelia, their hands tightly clasped together.

Their clasped hands in public was like Marcus acknowledging Cornelia's status. Zack was pleased that Marcus stepped up to protect Cornelia at this time.

Abigail looked worriedly at Cornelia, unsure if she had really forgotten this jerk over the years. She was afraid Cornelia would be hurt by him again.

Roman, who was previously clueless about their relationship, now understood everything seeing their hand-holding. These two were more than just superior and employee, they had a secret romance going on.

No wonder Cornelia's two friends could still be so arrogant and rude after hearing about the Hartley family. It was all because Cornelia was seeing Marcus, thinking they had his backing.

Marcus was cold-blooded. He was able to send his own father to jail when he was just a teenager. What wouldn't he do?

Roman knew better than to mess with Marcus. Reluctantly, he stepped back, “President Hartley, didn’t expect to run into you here. A pleasure to meet you”

He stepped forward to shake hands with Marcus, but Marcus didn’t budge. His icy gaze pinned Roman and his voice became even colder. “Cornelia is yours?”

Roman didn’t dare to meet Marcus’ eyes, his gaze shifted to the side, towards Cornelia.

a few years apart, and the woman who used to drive him crazy had become even more stunning, so beautiful that he couldn’t take his eyes off her, so beautiful that everything else lost color in her presence.

Her beauty stirred him more now than the first time he met her. She was no longer the innocent girl he once knew. She had traded her body for the position of Assistant to the CEO of the Hartley Group.

He had no use for a woman who had lost her innocence!

Roman smirked, “President Hartley, you probably don’t know, but Cornelia and I used to date... but since you’re into her, she’s all yours now.”

His words, his tone, treated Cornelia like an object, something that could be traded at will. How could Marcus tolerate anyone insulting his wife like this? With a flick of his hand, he might do something Roman would regret.

Cornelia knew him well, knew what he was about to do, so she grabbed his arm before he could give the order, “President Hartley, let me handle this guy.”

Marcus looked at Cornelia, his eyes behind the silver glasses filled with displeasure and doubt, “Going soft?”

That man had hurt her so much, didn't even show her basic respect, and she was still protecting him?

Comelia knew he was overthinking and quickly clarified, "It's not being soft-hearted, I couldn't possibly feel that way toward such a person. I have a better way to deal with this kind of guy."

Marcus believed in her ability, which was why he let her handle it.

*Cornelia released Marcus and strode towards Roman, asking with a smile, "What identity do you come to me with? Business partner or ex-lover?

After a few years, this woman had become more beautiful and sophisticated, making it impossible to guess what she was thinking. "Does it matter?"

Comelia kept her polite smile, "If it's about work, then please come to me during office hours on Monday. If it's as an ex-lover..."

Suddenly, Cornelia's face changed, her smile disappeared, and her tone turned cold, "Then please stay away from me, my husband, and my friends. Don't bother us anymore."

"Who's your husband?" After yesterday's meeting, he asked her out, but she said she had to be with her husband. He thought she was just angry with him and trying to piss him off.

Now she even dared to say she had a husband in front of Marcus, which meant Marcus knew she was married and still stayed with her. How powerful was that woman?

"Didn't expect you to be blind as well as heartless." Cornelia went back to Marcus, wrapped her arm around his, tiptoed and gave him a kiss, "Look closely, this is my husband! If you dare to bother me again, I won't let you off."

Abigail was flabbergasted.

Who cared about that jerk now? All she could think about was Marcus defending Cornelia and Cornelia taking the initiative to kiss Marcus.

Who could understand how she was feeling right now? Seeing her friend and a good man becoming a real couple was so sweet. There might not be any other couples that could captivate her as much.

Although Zack seemed to dislike it on the surface, he accepted the fact that Marcus was Cornelia's husband, "Nelly is the wife of the CEO of the Hartley Group. Whether she's the CEO's assistant is up to her husband. Who do you think you are, daring to talk nonsense here?"

Earlier, he was almost intimidated by that man, fortunately, Marcus appeared with Cornelia just in time.

Unless Marcus admitted it himself, Roman didn't want to believe it. He couldn't believe that Marcus, the helm of the Hartley Group, would marry a girl from an ordinary family!

He knew Cornelia was beautiful. She could be Marcus' bed partner, she could be Marcus' secret lover, but she could never be Marcus' wife.

Chapter 745

Being Marcus' wife was the dream of many high class ladies, a dream that seemed impossible for a small town girl like Cornelia who hadn't seen much of the world.

Anyway, he simply couldn't accept that Cornelia could actually become Marcus' wife.

He was also scared that once Cornelia became Marcus' wife, he would never get another shot at being close to her.

Despite being intimidated by Marcus' gaze, Roman still looked towards Marcus, hoping to hear him reprimand Comelia and tell her to stop dreaming about becoming his wife.

However, that didn't happen.

Marcus looked at Cornelia with deep affection, as if she was the only one in his world and there was no room for anyone else.

But when Marcus' gaze shifted back to him, it was instantly sharp and piercing. If looks could kill, he would have been killed by Marcus' gaze already.

"Comelia is my spouse on our marriage certificate, my lawful wife," Marcus said with a heavy tone, pulling Cornelia close by her slim waist.

It was as if he was not only telling the man in front of him who was trying to bother Cornelia, but also declaring to the world that Cornelia was his wife.

Marcus' words completely shattered Roman's dream, and he felt like he could hear his own heart breaking."

This time, he returned to the country as the Chief Engineer of Moongazer Tech. Many women were attracted to him, and it was during this time that he met her. He thought she would be like those ordinary women, admiring him, and that with just a slight hint, she would come to his side.

But boy, was he wrong.

This woman was very capable. During his absence, she had secretly established contact with the CEO of the Hartley Group and became the first lady of the Hartley Group!

"Scram! Stay away from me!" Zack shoved him out the door, slamming it shut and getting rid of this nuisance once and for all.

With Marcus' support, he no longer needed to worry about this person coming to trouble Cornelia. But when Zack turned around, Marcus and Cornelia were gone.

He looked at Abigail, "Where did they go?"

Abigail, "They went back to their room. Let's prepare dinner."

“Okay.” Zack went back to the kitchen.

Bang bang bang –

The sound of knocking on the door startled Abigail who was still by the entrance.

“Annoying prick, won’t you leave unless we boot you out?” Abigail opened the door, her scolding voice immediately replaced with a gentle one. “Darling, you said you’d be here half an hour ago, why are you just arriving now?”

“I left the things I bought in the car, so I went back to get them. There were no parking spots nearby, so the car is parked quite far away. That’s why it took so long, the man explained, handing the things over to Abigail with a smile. “This is a birthday gift for Zack, I hope he’ll like it.”

Abigail took the various packages from Nash and stepped aside for him to enter, “Put on those dark blue slippers. We knew you guys were coming over so Zack got new ones just for you guys last night.”

“You guys?” Nash looked around as he changed shoes, “Are there other guests besides me?”

Abigail put away the things and approached him, “Yes, my friend Nelly’s husband is also here. They’re busy right now, but you’ll meet them at dinner

She turned and shouted towards the kitchen, “Zack, Nash is here, aren’t you going to welcome your guest?”

Zack and

Nash had met a few times before and were quite familiar with each other, so Zack didn’t bother being overly polite. He poked his head out of the kitchen, “Nash, make yourself at home.”

After

changing his shoes, Nash entered the kitchen, “Do you need help with anything?”

Zack said, "You're a guest. Go chill in the living room, snack on some fruits and treats, and watch some TV. No need to help out."

Nash responded, "After I marry Abby, you'll be family. We're all in this together, why are you being so formal?"

Zack said, "I'm not being formal, just that we only need to prepare food for five people. We've got everything ready. Cold dishes are all set, hot dishes are almost done. We just have a few more dishes to stir-fry. Everything is already prepared, and we just need to throw it in the wok. If you really want to lend a hand, make sure to arrive at ten as agreed. Don't drag it until eleven."

Nash chuckled, "Alright, I'll make sure to come earlier next time."

Abigail came into the kitchen, grabbed Nash's hand and led him to the living room. "Just TV and munch on snacks."

Nash looked around then towards a closed door, "Abby, what's Nelly up to? I can't wait to see her."

Abigail said, "Hold your horses, you'll see her at dinner. And you can't call her Nelly, that's a nickname only Zack and I can use."

Nash said, "Alright, I'll take your word for it."

Abigail grabbed a handful of peanuts, munching while staring at Cornelia's door, "Ugh, Cornelia, are you pulling my leg, is Marcus not cutting it? If he's not up to par, why did he pull you into the room during the day?"

Just as Abigail started to feel duped, Cornelia's door swung open, and out came the towering figure of Marcus. He then shut the door behind him.

Abigail glanced at the time. It had only been five minutes since Marcus pulled Cornelia into the room. Five minutes! How on earth was Cornelia going to cope with this?

Nash tugged at Abigail's clothes, "Abby, aren't you going to introduce us? Is this Cornelia's husband?"

Abigail snapped out of her thoughts and quickly stood up, "This is...oh, Mr. Artis, this is my boyfriend Nash. Nash, this is Cornelia's husband, Jeremy Artis."

Nash reached out his hand, "Mr. Artis, nice to meet you!"

Marcus also extended his hand politely, "Nice to meet you too!"

After greeting. Marcus headed to the kitchen. He had a special dish for Cornelia that wasn't finished yet.

Nash watched as Marcus entered the kitchen, shivering slightly, "Abby, what does Mr. Artis do for a living? He seems so imposing."

Abigail said, "He's a businessman."

Nash noted, "It looks like he has a bite mark on the corner of his mouth."

Abigail was very curious. What on earth had happened in that room?

She had to go find Nelly and ask!

Abigail guessed Marcus must have dropped the ball at a crucial moment, and got bitten by Nelly as a result. Nelly was usually gentle and friendly to everyone, but if someone got on her nerves, they'd see her true colors she was actually quite a force to be reckoned with “Sweetie, you watch some TV. I’m going to check on Nelly.” Abigail gave Nas h a heads up and went alone to Cornelia’s room.

She knocked on the door and then walked in. “Nelly, what were you two doing in here?”

Comelia was buried in her blanket, with only her feet showing.

Hearing Abigail’s voice, she wrapped herself tighter, “I’m not telling, it’s too em barrassing.”

Abigail, “So, did Marcus choke at the worst possible moment?”

Comelia, “I told you I’m not going to spill the beans, so stop guessing. It’s poin tless.”

Abigail, ‘So you’re just going to hide in your room and avoid everyone? My bo yfriend is here, didn’t you say you wanted to meet him? Hurry up and check him out for me. Let’s see if he’s someone I can spend my life with.’

Comelia, “Leave first, I get ready and come out.”

Abigail, ‘Look at you, hurry up! As the host, we can’t keep our guests waiting.’

“Mm.” Comelia muttered in response. After Abigail left and the door was close d, she finally came out of her blanket, her face flushed. Earlier, after she told Roman that Marcus was her husband, Marcus acted like he’d lost his mind. B efore she had time to react, he’d swept her off her feet and taken her back to t he room.

He started kissing her, but for some reason, they ended up on the bed, and th en... Thankfully, she bit him in time, bringing him back to his senses before an ything else happened.

After biting him, she felt something was off. She noticed his body was tense, n ot soft at all...

She wasn’t sure yet, could he or couldn’t he?

Comelia cooled down under the air conditioning, her face returning to normal, before she went out.

Stepping out of the room, multiple pairs of eyes were on her.

Abigail had a mischievous grin on her face, "Darling, this is Nelly, the friend I always talk about, my best friend."

Nash stood up and extended his hand to Cornelia, "Ms. Stewart, nice to meet you!"

"Nice to meet you!" Cornelia quickly shook his hand.

She couldn't tell if she was being overly sensitive, but she felt like Nash intentionally touched her palm.

She gave him an extra glance, but he averted his gaze and didn't look at her again.

She thought, maybe she was overthinking it.

Abigail directed, "Nelly, you start clearing the table. Honey, you go wash your hands and help bring the food."

Everyone did their part, the table was cleared, the dishes were cooked and served, and soon the table was filled with a variety of hot and cold dishes.

Zack carefully picked two bottles of their favorite wine and poured everyone a glass. "Everyone here is family, so don't hold back and

No one was shy about diving in.

Cornelia pulled Marcus to the left side, Abigail and Nash sat on the right, and Zack took the middle seat.

Once everyone was seated, Cornelia busily served Marcus a bowl of soup, Marcus put the dish he cooked in front of Cornelia, while Abigail and Nash were being attentive to each other.

Chapter 748

In the past, they celebrated his birthday together, him as the absolute star of the day. But this year, everything had changed.

He was no longer the center of their world!

Their hearts and eyes were now focused on the men sitting next to them!

He'd been bustling around all morning, and no one had even noticed him. If nobody was gonna pay attention to him, then he'll just have to make himself noticed.

He raised his glass, "First round's on me, let's toast to my birthday!"

Finally, they turned their attention to him and raised their glasses, "Happy birthday!"

But Cornelia was looking after Marcus, "Zack, his stomachs not good, water will do."

Zack shot them a look, "Since when did he become so weak that he can't handle a drink?"

Marcus said, "It's cool. It's Zack's birthday, I can drink less."

"That works. Just a little then." Saying 'a little', Cornelia only left him a little, pouring the rest into her own glass.

Seeing this, Zack was beyond annoyed, "Cornelia, can you stop babying him? He's your husband, not your son. Aren't you tired of taking care of everything?"

It was not all Cornelia taking care of Marcus. Marcus took care of her too. But Zack had got his blinders on, always seeing it as her fussing over Marcus.

"It's not always me taking care of him. He takes care of me too." Cornelia said with a smile, "Zack, happy birthday! Hope you find your dream girl and start a family soon. Then we can all hang out together!"

Abigail added, "Zack, happy birthday! Hope you find the girl of your dreams tomorrow."

Marcus and Nash also wished Zack a happy birthday.

After the birthday wishes, Cornelia and Abigail started serving Zack food and drinks, finally making him feel important. He said, "You two better remember, just because you've got husbands, it doesn't mean you can forget about me."

Cornelia and Abigail both said, "In our hearts, you're always the most important."

Their words lifted the cloud that had been hanging over Zack all morning.

Feeling a bit triumphant, he glanced at Marcus, "Mr. Hartley, why aren't you eating? Better hurry before the dishes turn cold."

He turned to Nash, "Nash, your stomach's okay, right?"

Nash replied, "I'm good."

Zack said, "Then let's have a drink."

Nash immediately raised his glass, "Sure."

One drink wasn't enough, Zack got Nash to down several more.

After a few drinks, the normally talkative Zack became even more chatty, "Cornelia, Abigail, you two are so mean. We agreed to stick together till the end, but you two ditched me for your own love interests, leaving me all alone."

Abigail said, "Don't make yourself sound so helpless. Who said you're alone? Aren't we still here for you?"

Zack

said, "This afternoon, you need to go back to Nash's hometown with him. And Nelly will surely leave with her boyfriend. It's my birthday, and you two are leaving me. Doesn't that bother you at all?"

The more he thought about it, the more upset Zack got, even shedding a few tears.

Comelia and Abigail were a bit taken aback, immediately rushing over to give Zack a hug

Comelia asked, "Zack, what's up with you? Abigail has stuff to do this afternoon, but I'm free, I can hang out with you. Whatever you wanna do, I'm down, okay?"

"Really?" Zack cocked his head slightly, eyeing Marcus who was standing behind Comelia, "Your boyfriend cool with that?"

Comelia retorted, "I'm not doing anything wrong, why wouldn't he be?"

Zack said, "I wanna hear it from him."

Comelia turned around, tugging at Marcus' sleeve, "You tell him."

Marcus responded nonchalantly. Ill stay with you to keep him company"

Zack was speechless. He only wanted Cornelia to stay, who asked for Marcus to stick around?

As the CEO of the Hartley Group, didn't he have any self-awareness? Didn't he realize he was just making Zack uncomfortable by being here?

Zack also knew that sooner or later, Comelia would move in with Marcus, and his time with her would get less and less. In the future, the three of them might not be able to hang out like before.

Wiping away his tears, Zack declared loudly, 'Comelia, listen up, you better be happy in the future! And you guys...'

He turned to the two men, "You two snatched away my friends who I've known for over twenty years without my permission. Let me tell you, if you dare to treat her badly, I'll make sure you pay. I won't let you off easily."

Marcus remained silent, elegantly eating the food Comelia had served him.

Nash replied enthusiastically. "Don't worry, I'll definitely treat Abigail well. If I don't, may I get hit by a car the moment I step outside."

Zack said. "You said it, don't blame me for cursing you."

Nash responded,

"I said it, it has nothing to do with you. Come on, let's have a few more drinks."

After a few more rounds, Zack started to feel dizzy and suddenly broke down in tears, crying and talking at the same time..

"We've known each other since we were kids. Over the years, we've always been together, never apart. Now you're ditching me for your boyfriends. Isn't it nice for the three of us to live together like before? Why do you need guys? Haven't you heard that men only bring women misery?"

"Who's been feeding you this bullshit?" Cornelia patted his back, consoling him in a gentle voice, "Zack, whether we get married or not, we'll always be together like before, we'll never separate."

Abigail wanted to comfort Zack too, but his snotty, tear-streaked face was just too funny. She couldn't help but laugh, "Zack always acts so tough in front of us, but his true colors come out when he's drunk. But honestly, this is probably the first time I've seen him cry so hard. Of course, his tantrums as a kid don't count."

As Cornelia comforted him, she pulled out her phone and started recording a video, making sure to get a clear close-up of Zack's face.

This moment was too precious not to document. If she didn't show him when he sobered up, she'd be failing her duties as his best friend

Abigail said, "If we're talking about who's naughtier, that's definitely you"

Chapter 750

Cornelia watched Zack's awkward expression while her mind wandered elsewhere. "Abby, do you know any suitable girls? Maybe you could introduce one to Zack? Judging by his condition today. I feel like he's looking for a girlfriend."

Abigail replied, "It's not that he's looking for a girlfriend. Zack's just worried about you. He's afraid of you getting hurt, afraid of you being bullied, and afraid of you getting your heart broken all over again."

"I'm really happy right now. And those irrelevant people can't hurt me. You guys really don't need to worry about me." Cornelia understood Zack's concerns, but sometimes you have to learn to let go and start over. Who knew? Things might turn out differently.

Like today, when Zack and Abigail saw Roman come looking for her, they were so tense, afraid he'd hurt her again. But for Cornelia, that man was long gone from her life. He was a total stranger now. How could he possibly hurt her again?

"Alright, we'll stop fretting over you. Someone else will take care of you from now on." Abigail glanced at Marcus, who was still eating in silence.

Abigail felt a bit disappointed. Hadn't Marcus picked up on her hint? She was trying to get him to promise to take care of Cornelia.

All in all, it was a pretty lousy birthday. They didn't even get to have cake because the birthday boy got too drunk and completely lost consciousness.

In the end, it was Nash who helped Zack to his room.

Abigail had planned to go back to Nash's hometown with him in the afternoon. They had already bought train tickets, so they couldn't, stay to look after Zack

. So, the responsibility of cleaning up and taking care of Zack fell on Cornelia and Marcus.

After all the eating and drinking, the living room and the kitchen were a complete mess. It would take one person at least an hour or two to clean up.

While Cornelia was cleaning, Marcus made a call and soon a cleaning crew arrived. In no time at all, the house was spotless..

After the cleaning crew left, Cornelia turned to Marcus, "I gotta say, the most powerful spell in the world is money!"

Marcus chuckled and ruffled her hair,
"Tired, huh? do you want to take a nap?"

Cornelia replied, "Mmm."

They both went back to her room, where Cornelia said, "I don't have any pajamas for you, so you'll have to make do with this clothes."

Marcus responded, "Okay."

Cornelia went to the bathroom with her pajamas. When she came out, Marcus was already asleep on the bed.

The air conditioning in the room was turned up high and he didn't have a blanket. Cornelia was worried he would catch a cold, so she quickly covered him with a blanket.

But as she got close, Marcus suddenly opened his eyes and pulled her into his arms, "Cornelia....."

Cornelia responded, "Hmm?"

Marcus asked, "What do I have to do to be more important to you than Zack?"

This guy, he really got jealous over anyone.

Cornelia looked at him and said seriously, "I've told you before, Zack and Abby are my childhood friends. We've known each other for over twenty years and been through a lot together. To me, they're like family. They're really important to me, so important that I can't lose them."

Marcus asked, "What about me? Am I not important? Can you afford to lose me?"
