Chapter 161 His Daughter with Nicole

"Go get the doctor! She must be fine!"

Samuel ordered calmly.

People around began to pinch her philtrum, trying to wake her up, while Jason frowned and said, "She is not the descendant of the Don Family."

Hearing that, Petty was shaking more violently, and everyone could tell she was unsatisfied with what Jason had said.

Jason said faintly, "The Don Family doesn't have anyone who has epilepsy. I have also checked the family history of that woman, and there is no case of epilepsy. But for the sake of safety, I need to take a blood sample and do a DNA test."

"Just do it."

For Samuel, Petty had nothing to do with him. Even if she was the descendant of the Don Family, Samuel couldn't give up anything. If Petty was really not the descendant of the Don Family, it would be much easier to deal with.

At this point, Samuel was like a hellish emissary, with murderous aura around him. Without Nicole by his side, it seemed that there was no one who could make him laugh again.

Joseph was getting better. He had insisted on calling his sister and told her the good news.

The servant had no choice but to tell Samuel this request.

Samuel frowned slightly.

"Sister? Where did he get his sister?"

"The young master said that it was Lucas' sister. He promised Lucas to treat his sister well and said the girl is named Zoe."

Samuel's hand gave a sudden jerk.

"What is she called?"

"Zoe!"

The servant didn't make any mistake.

Samuel went quickly to Joseph's room.

"Who's Zoe?"

"She is the eldest brother's sister. We have seen each other on the video and she looked exactly like Lucas, but she is better looking than him. Lucas also said that she has never been out of the hospital or seen the outside world since she was born. Daddy, why don't we go to America and get my sister back? I promised Lucas that I would treat Zoe like she was my own sister."

Joseph's words left Samuel speechless for a long time.

Wasn't Zoe Allen's illegitimate daughter?

How could it be Lucas' sister?

How could she look exactly like Lucas?

Unless she was his daughter!

Samuel was inexpressibly shocked.

If she was his daughter, why did Nicole never say anything about it? Why didn't she ever tell him?

Samuel quickly went to Joseph's room to investigate Zoe himself.

Allen saved Zoe's data well, and Samuel had to break through several security systems to get in.

From the photos, Zoe and Lucas looked much alike, but her face was terribly pale. The most important thing was that according to the data, she was born with kidney failure.

It dealt Samuel a blow.

Chapter162: You Are the Most Beautiful Girl I Have Ever Seen

Although it was the first time to see each other, Zoe still felt that Samuel was a little cordial. This might be the natural affection between father and daughter.

"Foster father?"

Zoe looked at Allen as if for help.

At this time, as long as Allen said that he was not, Zoe would believe it.

But Allen couldn't see Zoe's lost eyes, and he understood Zoe's desire for his biological father over the years.

It was like Lucas.

Although Lucas had a very good relationship with him, and always called him foster father, but after returning to the Seapolis City, Lucas really rarely made a phone call to him.

Maybe he was even more happy with Samuel now.

A sour taste was left in Allen's mouth.

He witnessed those children who had grown up under his care left him alone one by one. Was the blood relationship really that important?

"Foster father, is what he said true? Is he really my daddy?"

Zoe's soft voice sounded again.

Samuel looked at Allen.

He was also a man, and he naturally understood how Allen felt and struggled now.

He didn't urge, didn't speak, but picked up Zoe, only to find that Zoe was really light, so light that she had almost no weight.

"Your mommy said to me that you are the most beautiful princess in the world. I didn't believe it at first, but now that I see you, I really believe it."

"Really?"

Zoe was very happy, a little embarrassed, sitting on Samuel's laps, not daring to move.

His embrace was so warm, unlike her foster father's, and there was always an indescribable sense of intimacy lingering.

Seeing Zoe's sensible look and her bewildered expression, Samuel remembered Nicole again.

That damned woman, where had you gone?

How could you be willing to leave such a lovely daughter and Lucas, and him, and disappeared without a trace?

Samuel touched Zoe's head, fearing to apply too much strength, and when he touched her, the strength was too small that Zoe couldn't feel.

For the first time in his life, he felt at a loss.

Zoe was different from Lucas.

Lucas was a stinky boy, healthy, and no matter how he beat, Lucas could bear it, but his daughter was so fragile, so fragile that he dared not speak loudly, for fear of scaring her.

"Of course it is true. Zoe is the most beautiful girl I have ever seen."

"Yes, sister Zoe, you are the most beautiful girl I have ever seen."

Joseph was also unwilling to admit himself outdone.

Zoe began to giggle.

Her laugh was very clear and melodious, like a jade bead falling on the plate, crisp and pleasant.

Chapter 163: Please Call Her Mrs. Green

Samuel wanted to go in to see Zoe, but the phone rang at this moment.
In order not to affect Zoe's rest, Samuel walked out with his mobile phone.
"What's up?"
It was Jacob who made the phone call.
Jacob said in a low voice, "Mr. Green, there is news of Riley."
"Where is she?"

Samuel became nervous all over.

"As long as we find Riley, we will find Lucas, right?"

But Jacob did not answer for a long time.

"Jacob!"

Samuel felt that he was going crazy and couldn't help but let out a low growl. In fact, he was already a little disturbed.

Jacob knew that he couldn't hide after all, and whispered, "She was found at sea, but she is dead already, and the corpse has soaked for so long that it almost can't be recognized."

"What did you say? What about Lucas? Where is he?"

Samuel didn't care about Riley's life or death. He only cared about Lucas' whereabouts.

Jacob bit his lower lip and said, "There is no news about Master Lucas. When we found Riley, she was the alone. The forensic doctors found a large amount of methamphetamine in her body and that she died of overdose. Then her corpse was thrown to the sea."

"Who injected her the drugs? Who provided her with the shelter? Have you found out?"

Samuel felt an anger lingering in his chest, but it seemed as if he had hit the cotton with a punch, very weak and suffocated.

He thought that if they found Riley, they would be able to find Lucas, but now that Riley was dead, there was no news of Lucas at all.

Where was his son?

Jacob couldn't bear Samuel's current anger, but he still dutifully reported, "I found it. It's a nightclub called the Golden Queen. The owner of this nightclub is an outsider and his identity is unknown, but someone saw Zama go in and out there."

"Zama, Zama again! About my nurse, why did I never know she is so capable? She actually has something to do with underground trading. Just cut the crap. I just want to know if you get the whereabouts of Zama."

"Not yet. It has been verified that Petty is not the Don Family's child. She has always thought that she is the illegitimate daughter of the Don family since she was a child. Now she knows that she is not, so she is mentally stimulated and a little abnormal. Zac died in order to save Petty."

"The life and death of these people has nothing to do with me. I just want to know where my wife Nicole is and where my son Lucas is!"

Samuel let out a low growl, and then remembered that he was in the hospital. Then he lowered his voice and said, "Find Zama at all costs."

"Yes, sir!"

"Samuel, don't think I'm begging you!"

Rachel's anger was so unabashed that any ordinary man would have been terrified by him, but for Samuel, it didn't work.

"Rachel, I don't think you're begging me, either. I'm just being honest. Maybe for Allen, Nicole is his obsession, but for Nicole, he's her benefactor, as kind as his brother. So, tell me what you want. My daughter's about to wake up, and I have to go to accompany her."

Samuel made it very clear that he didn't want to waste more time with Rachel.

Seeing him like this, Rachel sighed and said, "Well, since Mr. Green is so straightforward, then I would tell you. Allen has always loved Nicole. and if the Brook Family has held on the favor for the past five years, I think Nicole would have to be polite to Allen even if she has no plans to marry Nicole to the Brook Family. Since Nicole is not with the Brook Family, we might as well break the friendship."

"What do you want?"

Samuel knew what Rachel meant.

She wanted him to pay off the favor the Brook Family had helped Nicole and her son over the past five years with actions.

That was actually the best.

Even though it was Allen who helped Nicole, Rachel represented the Brook Family, and Samuel thought it was not a bad thing if he could break their relationship.

The thing that money could deal with was not a serious matter, and it was far better than paying a debt of gratitude.

Rachel saw Samuel was so direct, then he said in a low voice, "I'm going to take the complete right of the cooperation between the two companies."

Of course, Mr. Green can disagree. Nicole currently is the designer of our company. Although it is the cooperation between the two companies, as long as our board of directors turned it down, what she designs cannot be published on the market."

"Well, you have the full control!"

Samuel never took it in his eyes.

"You wouldn't want that only, would you? Although I admit that my wife is an excellent designer and the Brook Family will make a lot of money with the car she designs, I don't think you would not only need that, right?"

Samuel spoke again.

Rachel was embarrassed this time.

She really wanted more than that, but she just didn't know how to say it, because she was too old to say that.

When Samuel saw her hesitation, he sneered and said, "I think what you want is all the resources of the Green Family in America."

Rachel looked slightly stunned, with an awkward look on her face.

"The Green Family is second to none in the Seapolis City and in the country. But in the United States, we have monopolized the market for so many years, it is not so good for the Green Family to suddenly get in on them."

"So, you just want to monopolize the American market. It doesn't matter. As long as it can repay the favor we have owed to the Brook Family for the five years that you have been doing for my wife and children, I would give you the resource, and I promise that starting tomorrow, all the businesses of the Green Family will leave the United States, and I will never set foot in the United States again! I wonder if you are satisfied?"

Rachel couldn't believe Samuel's offer.

"Is what Mr. Green said true?"

"Of course, I would keep my promise. For this meeting, I need to document it. As long as the Brook Family gives a contract in writing, my children and grandchildren and I will not break it, but by the same token, Nicole will not owe anyone at the Brook Family anything from now on!"

When Samuel was so decisive, Rachel hesitated for a moment, but thinking of Allen, she nodded her head.

"Good! From now on, the Brook Family is even with Nicole and the Green Family."

"Nicole's position at your company, the Brook Family, would be terminated at the same time. I would resign on her behalf. I will have her resignation sent in."

Samuel made a quick decision not to give Allen any more chances.

He was not to blame.

Although he had agreed to Nicole that he would not embarrass Allen, this was the condition proposed by the Brook Family first. The Green Family did suffer some losses, and the losses were not small, but it was not a big deal.

There was no direct confrontation with Allen, and this was probably what Nicole wanted to see.

Chapter 165 I'll Take the Woman

Allen came in a bit lonely, but the sharp-eyed woman could notice that he was wearing a handmade Italian suit.

"Why, Sir, is this your first visit? Do you want a drink or a single room or something? I'll take you there!"

The woman's strong perfume reminded Allen of Nicole.

Nicole's fragrance was always subtle, but there was something about her that was so special and pleasing.

"Get out!"

Allen pushed her away and walked alone to the bar.

When she saw the young lady was pushed away, Mandy hurriedly came forward to greet the young man.

"Is this your first visit, Sir? It was noisy outside. Do you want me to get you a single room? You can drink and play, without anyone disturbing you. You must be born of a noble family. It is not a good thing to have someone gossiped about you, right?"

Mandy was really a good talker.

Allen was not familiar with this place. When he heard what Mandy said, he thought for a moment and said, "Find me a single room in the middle of nowhere, the more remote the better. As long as no one bothers me, I will give you much."

"Hey! This way, Sir. We have an isolated single room on the first floor, close to the basement, and not many people go there. Sir, you may go there."

"Come on."

Allen just wanted to find somewhere quiet, drinking and comforting himself. He didn't want anyone to see his vulnerability.

All his pride was shattered in front of Nicole, and he didn't want anyone to see him again.

Mandy had experienced a lot. Someone like Allen who came here alone must be hurt by love and did not want to be disturbed, so she quickly took Allen to a remote private room.

"Do you need any special service, Sir?"

Mandy did not forget her job and asked.

"No, get out! No one is allowed to come in without my permission!"

Allen threw the dollars out of his wallet.

Seeing Allen was generous, Mandy hurriedly took the money and went out.

Allen found the decor was nice. It was luxurious but also pleasant.

Spending money to get drunk was the most ridiculous thing he'd ever done in his life, but so what? Who cared?

Nicole now lived happily in the Seapolis City with her son.

The more he thought about it, the more distressed Allen became.

The waiter brought in the wine.

"Here's your drink, Sir, and if you run out of it, we'll send one more. Just ring the bell by hand if you have any need."

George looked at Allen, not realizing that he had taken such a big guy in.

“This way, Mr. Brook, please!”

Allen really didn't want to leave. He even wanted to take Nicole away right now, but he couldn't!

Regardless of whether he could take Nicole on his own right now, even if he could, there were times when he needed to keep a low profile, and Samuel was in the United States now.

Knowing that Samuel didn't have the heart or the energy to bid, he needed to be on his guard.

Allen gave Nicole one last look before turning away.

Nicole was aching all over, but now she didn't care.

She was in America!

And then there was Allen!

Allen seldom came to such a place. It must be the providence of God.

The pain mitigated a bit at the thought that she could get out here and found out where her son was and visited Zoe.

The man looked at Nicole, spat and said, "You're lucky to be liked by such a big shot. I'm telling you; you'd better pray that he does buy you tomorrow, or you'll see what I would do to you."

Nicole was in too much pain to speak now.

She was stuffed into a cabin by traffickers, and after being transferred to several boats did she get here. She had no idea of where she was being sold because her eyes were covered when she got off the boat.

Nicole had no idea why Zama sold her out of the country, but sooner or later she had to settle the things with Zama.

Nicole was safe for the moment, and she didn't want to say anything to the man, so she just closed her eyes and began to have a rest.

The man thought she had fainted, said coldly, "She is really delicate. I hope tomorrow you can sell at a good price."

The man was tired, and went back to rest. The other people were still here.

Thinking of Nicole and Lucas were no longer in S City, Samuel panicked completely.

The world was so big that where he could find them once they left S City.

If it was really as Allen said that Nicole was trafficked to the remote mountains...

Samuel dreaded to think about it.

Jacob was a little shocked, but also a little overwhelmed.

"Mr. Green, what do you mean? You mean your wife and Master Lucas might have been sold out of S City by traffickers?"

"I want you to find it out!"

Samuel roared, and coughed violently.

Jacob agreed quickly, and then hung up.

It sounded like Samuel coughed up a lung.

He finally stopped coughing, but he couldn't calm down.

Impossible!

Nicole would not be sold!

But where was she at this moment?

Where was Lucas?

Samuel had no idea.

He came outside and met a little nurse.

The little nurse liked Samuel very much, but she could see that this man had a lot of worries. Now seeing him sitting on the Samuel left with the man.

Allen quickly took out some money and asked the man nearby, "What's going on?"

When the man saw the money quickly told Allen what had happened.

Hearing that it wasn't for Nicole that the man came here, Allen was relieved.

Was Lucas really dead?

Allen had a slight ache in his heart.

After all, he had seen the child growing up, whom he had called him godfather for four years, but when thinking of Nicole,

Allen decided to ignore the pain and walked away as if he knew nothing.

He only wanted Lucas.

Maybe when Lucas was dead, Nicole would be his.

Didn't Nicole go back because she wanted to give her children a biological father?

Now that Zoe had Samuel donated his kidney to her, there might be a good chance that things would go well for her. Or if the operation didn't work out, Zoe would pass away.

If Lucas and Zoe were gone, why would Nicole want to stay with Samuel?

With this thought in mind, Allen abandoned his conscience and booked the original private room, waiting for the dawn and bidding.

Samuel may as well be taken out. As long as Samuel was not here, and as long as he could bid for Nicole, Nicole would be with him forever.

Allen was still worried. He kept coming out all night to check on Samuel. When he saw that Samuel didn't come back, Allen was relieved.

Samuel had followed the man out of the Fallen Paradise Club, and the man had led him down a side street, which seemed to have some vicious mind.

He didn't care, though in it was in the United States, he was not easy to be knocked down.

Sure enough, deep down the alley, there were four or five men waiting for him, as if they had made an appointment.

The man sneered and said, "Boy, you'd better let go of me and take out the valuable things on your body, or we would do anything to you!"

Samuel snorted, "Where is your fellow countryman?"

Chapter 169: You Had no Chance

Jason heard of the fact that Nicole's DNA didn't match with her birth parents' by accident.

Actually, it had nothing to do with him, while it was concerned with Nicole. He also got involved in it.

"I can make use of some connections to search for Nicole's families with the same DNA by extending the scope of DNA Bank, which might contribute to some clues."

Samuel's eyes were red, which was obviously caused by poor sleep.

Overcoming the jealousy in his heart, Samuel nodded, "Sorry to bother you, Jason."

"It's okay. What I do is also to find Nicole as soon as possible. Have you got any news of her in America?"

Samuel shook his head.

The missing of Nicole and Lucas was like the load of two great mountains resting on his breast.

He couldn't forgive himself.

The Seapolis City was his own domain. However, Nicole's disappearance made Samuel simply want to die by knocking against the wall.

He went out of the police station with Jason.

Dad Bush and Ms. Bush were still in shock, keeping inquiring whether the police had made a mistake. But how could it be a mistake?

Both of them were sending to the Bush Family for the time being, who were bound to be sleepless.

Seeing Samuel droop, Jason suddenly said, "let's go out for a drink?"

Samuel shook his head and said, "I cannot drink. I'm going to fly to America to have an operation in a while."

“What operation?”

Jason thought that something was wrong with Samuel's health.

Samuel whispered, “Never mind. Just a minor operation, don't worry.”

Jason would not acknowledge the fact that he was concerned about Samuel.

He always thought Samuel was a heartless man in the past, for he had never seen Samuel were relatively close to anyone.

His rumored affair with Riley had been spread widely and terribly. Besides, he started making out with Nicole not long after she came back, which also made Jason consider him a capricious man.

However, with the two experiences, Jason figured out that maybe he was wrong to think in this way.

Samuel loved Nicole deeply and this love even surpassed everything. He wouldn't believe that it was merely the love at first sight.

Jason fell for Nicole on their first meeting. But there would be some differences if he were Samuel

Chapter 170: Thank You More Than I Can Say

Samuel was speechless.

What was more depressing than having worked so hard for so many years, but only paving way for others?

What's more, this person was also the closest person he ever thought, and even his mother protected him inexplicably.

He did not understand that even if his mother didn't like Nicole, Lucas was her grandson after all. Why was his mother so calm and indifferent to Lucas' disappearance?

In Samuel's memory, his mother was not a cold-blooded and merciless person. But why was all this?

It seemed that only Zama could give him an answer. But Zama had disappeared and Samuel could find no clues as to the whereabouts of her.

Suddenly, everything seemed to have lost all the clues.

On the surface, the fire five years ago seemed to have been ordered by Riley. There might even be Swift's advice and Zac's execution. But now, it seemed that the truth was far more than what Samuel saw on the surface.

Zac was brought back from the orphanage by Samuel when he was a child. Samuel trained with him and they grew up together. They were like brothers. Zac had never disobeyed Samuel. But why did he betray Samuel in Nicole's affairs?

Samuel remembered when Zac was with him, Zama would make Zac and Petty something to eat sometimes.

At that time, Samuel only thought that Zama was kind-hearted and could treat orphans so kindly. But now, when he thought about it, Samuel guessed that Zama was courting them by this way.

But Riley not only escaped, but also took Lucas and Joseph, and even planned to make use of Lucas to retaliate Nicole. But when Nicole arrived here, the building was empty. Don't you think it's strange? Will a woman who wishes you die give up the chance of revenge? Will she be softhearted temporarily and let go of Nicole?
