Chapter 1681 One More Paternity Test

Kelly called Alison to him after entertaining them.

"Alison, come, let me introduce you. This is your aunt, Ebby."

Kelly introduced Alison to the leader of the group that had just returned, who was a nurse from the Military Command Hospital in the war zone where Nicole was, and the leader of the twelve.

Alison stepped forward and took a look at Ebby. She was a beauty, but unfortunately, she seemed to harbor some evil intentions.

"Auntie!"

Alison restrained herself and called out in a low voice, but without much emotion.

Ebby looked at Alison as she frowned.

"Dad, this is the child that my brother lost more than twenty years ago?"

Kelly smiled and said, "Yes, we fled Country Z in a hurry at that time, and we lost Alison. Now we've managed to get her back. Your brother is very happy. And Alison is retired now. Isn't she great?"

Ebby, however, looked at Alison suspiciously and said, "You've done a paternity test?"

"This is the paternity test report. Take a look."

Kelly gave the paternity test report to Ebby.

Ebby looked at the data on it, and then at Alison's face, and felt that she really looked quite similar to her brother. Then she said in a low voice, "Don't blame me for being cautious. After all, the Close family is in danger. How about this? Let's do another paternity test?"

"Ebby!"

Chapter 1682 How Come He Didn't Look For Her?

What did the descendants of the Close family have to do with her?

What did the unity of the Close family have to do with her?

All these years, if it wasn't for Chad, if it wasn't for the country, and if it wasn't for those people from the military, she would have died in that big earthquake.

It was Chad who pulled her out of the rubble, and it was those soldiers who gave her food and the belief to live. Now her so-called family members actually want to subvert her faith. They were simply dreaming!

Seeing the light under Alison's eyes, Clark couldn't help but feel a little sad.

"Alison, when we lost you back then, your mother and I were sad too."

"Since you were sad, did you guys ever go back to look for me?"

What Alison said instantly made Clark's words stick in his throat.

How come he hadn't looked for her?

But at that time, it was not appropriate for the Close family to go back. He had asked many people to look for her, especially Ebby, but to no avail.

"Alison, back then, your aunt went back to the country many times to look for you. Do you know? At that time, she was in such an awkward situation and many people were looking for her. For this reason, she even went to get plastic surgery. Over the years, she has not only traveled around the countries selling arms but has also been asking for news of you. Your aunt felt guilty about you, and the Close family also felt guilty about you. Now you are back. I don't want anything more than for you to stay with the Close family. Even if you do nothing, your mother and I will be happy to see you here with us."

His words made Alison sneer.

"Do nothing? What are you afraid of me doing?"

Clark narrowed his eyes and didn't say anything. But the look in his eyes already said everything.

Alison sneered, "In the end, you still don't believe me. Even if I betrayed Nicole for the Close family, you still don't believe me, do you? There are fathers in this world who don't believe in their daughters. You have really impressed me."

"Alison, that's not true. Your father didn't say that."

Chapter 1683 Do You Have A Misunderstanding About Me

Alison's nose twitched.

She had never cared for being one of the Closes and preferred to be Tracy, the child who grew up in the orphanage and took the surname of the orphanage director. But at this moment, she knew that her cold heart warmed up.

"I'm going to get some water."

Alison turned around in a hurry and took the opportunity to wipe away the tears from the corners of her eyes.

Seeing his daughter like this, Clark didn't feel good either, but that was how the tradition of the Close family was. So many people had worked for the ancestors' teachings of the Close family for their lifetime, and no one would be willing to give up on it.

But Alison was his daughter.

She did not grow up in the Close family, and why should he ask her to carry on the ancestors' teachings of the Close family?

Alison didn't know what was going through Clark's mind right now, but she couldn't stay here any longer. So she hurried out of the room but met Ebby at the door.

"Alison, the results are out."

Ebby said kindly.

Alison didn't feel anything.

After all, it was already an established fact that she was a descendant of the Close family. She could not change her bloodline, so even if Ebby took ten more paternity tests, the result would still be the same.

She took the paternity report from Ebby's hand, but threw it into the trash without looking at it, then walked away.

"What have you been through?"

Ebby felt that she was a little speechless.

In fact, it wasn't that she hadn't thought about what a three-year-old child would go through after being lost. It was only when she saw that Alison was now intact as she stood in front of her that she comforted herself that everything was okay.

Perhaps Alison was lucky, or perhaps the ancestors of the Close family blessed her. Alison had come back safe and sound, right?

For Alison, there were so many things she didn't want to say at first, but now she couldn't help it.

Alison sneered and said, "I was only three years old. I remember very clearly that a bearded man told me that my aunt was waiting for me over there and asked me to come with him. I didn't go, but he simply covered my mouth with a handkerchief. A pungent smell hit me and then I lost consciousness. When I woke up again, I found myself in a mountain. The family was poor and lived in shacks, but they had bought me."

"I thought I finally had a home. I don't care if they are not my real parents or if they are just total strangers. At least I wasn't alone. Can you understand what it's like for a three-year-old to wake up seeing all those strangers and strange surroundings? I was scared, I was afraid, I screamed, but all I got was a brutal beating."

"The woman was so mean looking and hit me so hard with the whip in her hand. I was knocked unconscious and no one cared if I lived or died. When I woke up again, I was thrown on the straw with only cold, hard bread around me. Do you think that was the worst of it? No, it wasn't."

Alison clenched her hands into fists while her eyes were bloodshot and she said, word for word, "That family had a son who was sick. They had no money to cure their son, so they had to go to the mountains and pick herbs. But they were not doctors and did not know what kind of herbs would be useful for their son's illness. So they bought me for the simple purpose of trying out the herbs for her son!"

"Every herb her son took had to be taken by me first. Only when I had no reaction would she feed it to her son. There were many times when I thought I really could not bear so much pain that I vomited and wanted to die immediately, but every time I miraculously survived. Did you ever think at that time that your niece would go through this?"

Chapter 1685 Perhaps She Was Too Heartless

For the first time, Clark was resistant to the ancestors' teachings he had grown up believing in.

Was he not resentful?

How could he not be resentful?

Alison was the only child he had ever had in his life!

When Alison was born, he was very happy. He gave Alison everything he had for those three years and even imagined hiring a tutor for his daughter when she was a little older. But it all ended that summer.

His daughter was lost.

At the time, Old Mrs. Close was going crazy. If it hadn't been for the faith that sustained her, she might have been dead.

His wife and daughter suffered all their lives for the so-called ancestors' teachings of the Close family.

As a husband, as a father, what had he done for these two women in his life?

Clark was devastated, while Old Mrs. Close almost fainted from crying. Only Alison's eyes were red, but she did not shed a single tear.

She had long since passed the age when she would need a mother's love and care.

What she had experienced all those years ago was like a nightmare that always haunted her at the beginning.

She was afraid to sleep at night in the orphanage, and when she closed her eyes, all she could think of was her foster father's ugly face and her foster mother's fierce look.

She was scared, she was upset, she was afraid to be with other children, and she was afraid that people would know her secret. But the more she did this, the more the children bullied her.

Chapter 1686 I Want To Get Married, You Marry Me

Clark's voice carried a hint of supplication.

Alison didn't know how she should reply, so she simply said nothing, and then left Clark's room somewhat awkwardly.

By the time she returned to her room, Alison felt particularly lonely.

It was clear that they were all her family, but she didn't feel the sense of belonging that comes with blood.

She could see the guilt and heartache Old Mrs. Close and Clark felt for her, as well as Kelly's fondness for her, but she could not fit into the family.

Maybe it was because they had different world views, or maybe it was because of the beliefs in her heart. She didn't know, but she felt loneliness like a vine that wrapped itself tightly around her and was getting tighter and tighter, suffocating her.

Alison didn't care what the Close family would find out, but simply took out her phone and made a call. But at the sound of beeping, she hung up again.

What was she going to say?

She had disappeared since the start of Project Laurence and hadn't contacted him for so long. What could she say now that she had suddenly contacted him?

Alison gave a bitter laugh, but her phone rang so violently that Alison almost dropped it in fright.

On the screen was the familiar number she had memorized, but she was afraid to answer it, and her eyes suddenly turned red.

Ernesto hadn't heard from Alison in a long, long time. At this point, she contacted him out of the blue but hung up abruptly, leaving Ernesto with bad feelings.

She couldn't be in some kind of trouble, could she?

The phone kept ringing but there was no answer, and Ernesto's frown grew tighter and tighter.

He solicitously sent a video chat invitation, but Alison hung up quickly.

Ernesto was instantly furious.

"Alison, if you don't fucking answer the phone again, do you believe I'm going to ignore you for the rest of my life?"

He sent a voice message.

At the sound of Ernesto's familiar voice, Alison could no longer hold back her tears as she bit her lower lip.

She hadn't cried talking about the past, and she hadn't cried when she was alone in the Close family, but she had cried when she heard Ernesto's growl.

Ernesto instantly felt full of power.

"I'll wait for you, but you can't just turn your back on me. Alison, you have to be honest. You have to do what you promise me, you know? I'm starting to get things ready for the wedding. What kind of wedding do you like? I'll arrange it."

Ernesto felt like his heart were on a roller coaster today. And he actually felt everything so unreal right now.

Alison, however, said indifferently, "There's nothing in particular I want. In fact, we can just go and get a marriage license."

"How can you do that? The most beautiful time in a woman's life is when she's wearing a wedding dress. I can't let you feel inferior to anyone else. Now Mr. Green has asked me to manage the foreign branch. I'm at least respectable enough to be worthy of you now. Just wait and be Mrs. Orozco."

Hearing what Ernesto said, Alison froze for a moment before responding.

"Your last name is Orozco?"

"Alison, don't tell me you don't know my last name?"

Ernesto was instantly depressed.

Alison, however, smiled and said, "I do not know. They call you Ernesto all the time."

"Alison!"

Ernesto was really angry.

Alison, however, was very cheerful and said, "I'll be your wife when I get back. Ernesto, I'm giving you the rest of my life. You'll have to catch it."

"Yeah. I'll catch you."

Ernesto replied solemnly before he saw the screen go black and Alison had hung up the phone.

Although she couldn't see Ernesto anymore, Alison was still smiling.

Chapter 1688 The Close family Is Very Difficult To Deal With

It was definitely not a coincidence that Ebby had actually come over just when she called.

So Ebby was suspecting her?

Or maybe she was spying on her?

And would Ernesto be spied on?

Thinking of this, Alison quickly checked her bedroom, and sure enough, she found a miniature bug under her bed.

Ebby had only been back for a short while. When had she installed this in her room? Or had it always been here?

Nope!

She had checked the room when she first came back and hadn't found any bugging device. So when had it been installed?

Alison instantly broke out in a cold sweat.

She actually didn't know!

She had simply been too careless.

If that was the case, then there was a good chance that Ernesto would be exposed.

No matter what she said to Ernesto, as long as she contacted Ernesto, the Close family would have investigated Ernesto thoroughly. And since Ernesto was Samuel's man, would the Close family use her connections to do something to Ernesto that would threaten Samuel and Nicole?

Alison was thinking a lot. The more she thought about it, the more she realized that she had done something wrong.

She should never have called Ernesto!

Not only did she get Ernesto into trouble, but she may have gotten Nicole and Samuel into trouble.

If something did happen, she would not be able to escape blame even if she died.

With this in mind, Alison quickly restored the bug to its original state and took out her spare phone. She thought for a moment but didn't turn it on. Instead, she opened the computer and opened up the browser. She clicked on a few pages, all of which were descriptions of tourist projects.

Lucas was perceptive and smart.

He thought about it briefly and understood the meaning behind it.

"You want me to go get Uncle Jacob. And you want me to be isolated there as well, am I right?"

"Yes."

Morty realized that Lucas got what he meant, he then said, "Well, the people who sent Jacob back were working under Steven. Your father and I are brothers, and we never contact Steven. I cannot go in person, and there are not many in the army who know Steven. But, you know him. Not only that you know him, but you guys are also quite close. Hence, you are the most suitable person for it. The isolation area is also quite hidden. We need to jam the signals and block micro searches. You are an expert in this. And with all the reasons I've presented, you are our best choice."

Lucas' brows burrowed even deeper.

"Hey, stop frowning. Frowning at such a young age, you will grow old real fast."

Morty thought that Lucas looked more and more like Samuel.

Lucas answered a bit annoyedly, "Silver Fox can go too."

"He needs to take part in the battle overseas."

"Why?"

Lucas knew that Silver Fox was part of the Sky Group, but Fill didn't bring Silver Fox with him when he went. It meant that they didn't need him. But now, Silver Fox suddenly had to go. This could only mean one thing. The Sky Group was in trouble and Silver Fox had to go to rescue them.

The Sky Group went to the battlefield for his father's sake. Could he assume that his father was in trouble?

Lucas' heart started beating warily.

Morty knew what Lucas was thinking just by looking at his face. He thought that having such a bright child around him wasn't great at all.

He cleared his throat and said, "Your father and Tim went into the battlefield and we lost contact with them. Fill brought a troop with him to go and save them, but we lost contact with Fill as well. That was why Silver Fox was getting worried and wanted to head over. But no news doesn't mean bad news, does it? I know that you're worried, but you should know that you have other responsibilities. Instead of your father and his friends, the casualties are more important right now. It's important for the country and its safety if they have any viruses on them. Otherwise, your mother wouldn't have arranged for them and not look for your father first thing. Lucas, if there is someone in this world who cares more about your father than you, it would be your mother. After all, she didn't go after your father. Doesn't that mean that your father is not in that much danger?"

Lucas never would've thought that the person who always chased after him would change so much. He Could someone's personality change so much after changing their identity?

Lucas was puzzled. He couldn't describe how was he feeling, but he didn't feel too comfortable.

But, oh well. This might be for the best.

He was actually afraid that Yasmeen would bother him while he was working.

Joseph saw Lucas walking back alone, he couldn't help but ask, "What did you say to Yasmeen?"

"Nothing much."

Lucas wasn't in high spirit.

And Joseph was surprised.

He thought that Lucas liked Yasmeen. Did they fight again?

“Lucas, Yasmeen has a very different identity now. You shouldn’t fight with her like before. Dad and Uncle Steven have quite a good relationship, you...”

“Brother, stop nagging. Why should I fight with a girl? Don’t worry, nothing happened between us.”

Lucas went to the monitoring cabin after saying that.

Joseph stared at Lucas as he walked away. He didn’t know if Lucas was saying the truth. But since Lucas said so, he probably didn’t fight with Yasmeen.

Joseph felt reassured when he realized this.

The work coming up was done systematically, but doing checkups for all the casualties would take roughly two days. During this time, Nicole could only wait at the hospital on the battlefield for news.

She was worried and wanted to go look for Samuel, but she also knew that she needed to wait until the medical report for the casualties were out before she could leave. She was also still waiting for Alison’s news.

Lucas and Joseph had been working overtime to do the checkups.
