Chapter 181: Let's Play a Game

"Laurel, where are you going to take Miss Zoe so late?"

The doctor's arrival had already let Ye know that she might not be able to leave, but she had been living in the Green family for decades, so she was calm. "Zoe is in good spirits," she said with a smile. "I'm going to take her to the backyard.

"No, Laurel, Miss Zoe has never been out after sunset these years, and she is not in good health. Besides, the operation is going to take place tomorrow, so we need to give Miss Zoe an injection to ensure a higher success rate of the operation tomorrow.'

After the doctor said this, three nurses stopped them.

Zoe had a headache about the injection, but she didn't say anything. After all, it was for her own good, but Laurel protected her behind her back.

"It is very late now, wait for my son to come back and give her the injection. The operation is not a trivial matter, and it needs family member to sign on it. So, we need to know what the needle is."

Laurel's behavior made Zoe a little surprised.

She blinked her wide-eyed eyes at the man in front of her, as if she could sense nervousness.

"Grandma, it's all right. I get injections every day. I'm used to it.

Zoe thought that Laurel loved her, so she explained to Laurel quickly, but it made Laurel want to cry.

What a good child she was!

She said that having injection did not hurt.

How could an injection not hurt?

Why would some vicious men want to bully and suppress such a sensible child?

Laurel said to Zoe with a smile, "Silly girl, grandma knows what it's like to have an injection. Why don't we just wait for your dad to come back instead of having an injection today?"

"Good!"

Zoe was happy to hear that she didn't need to take injections today.

When the doctor saw that Laurel insisted on not taking the injection, he looked more or less pale.

"Miss Laurel, this is just a normal injection. If Miss Zoe doesn't do it, she may not sleep well tonight. Miss Zoe has been in our hospital for nearly five years. We are very aware of her health. Please don't stop us, so as not to delay Miss Zoe's treatment."

"With that, several nurses wanted to come forward and pull Laurel away.

In their eyes, Laurel was an old woman, and it was easy to make her go away.

But just then, Laurel took out a pocket-sized pistol from her bosom and pointed it directly at them.

"I wonder who would dare to touch my granddaughter today! In the United States, I'm qualified to carry a gun. Even if I shoot you today, you're dead for nothing. Just come here if you don't be afraid to die! Zoe is the child of the Green family. We have the final say on how to treat our children. Even if you are doctors, you'd have to listen to us, wouldn't you?"

Laurel's strong aura frightened everyone.

Laurel closed the window quickly and turned to look behind her.

The doctor took the nurse to look for Zoe at the first time, but their faces changed when they found she was not in the room.

"Laurel, where's Miss Zoe?"

"Joke! Do I need to tell you where the Green family's granddaughter is going?"

Laurel now completely suppressed her emotions and looked indifferent.

"Oh, Miss Zoe may have run away. Go after her now!"

The doctor's face suddenly became very ugly, and as he said to the nurse, he heard Laurel say, "No one is allowed to go out! I'll shoot and kill whoever goes out today."

Laurel made no joke at all, but installed the pistol with silencer, which made everyone a little scared.

"Laurel, what are you doing? How can Miss Zoe withstand so much trouble? Besides, there will be an operation tomorrow. Won't you be afraid you would ruin Miss Zoe if you do this?"

"This is a matter of the Green family. It has nothing to do with you! No one is going out!"

Laurel's eyes swept coldly over everyone.

Zoe fell down, and her knee bled, but her grandmother was still waiting for her, so she got up and ran on, tears flying in the air.

When she saw Daddy, the game would be over. She must ask her grandma to buy her a lollipop. It was too painful.

Not long after Zoe ran out, she saw Miss Lynn coming. She seemed to have other people behind her.

"Miss Lynn."

Zoe wanted to rush to her, but she remembered what Laurel had said. She quickly hid herself and heard Lynn say, "Mr. Allen said that Miss Zoe should not be allowed to live today on any account. The nurse up there called me and said Zoe has gone. You'd better look around and find her and coax her back as much as you can. We must kill Miss Zoe without anyone noticing. We must not let anyone catch us."

"Yes!"

The people behind Lynn looked fierce, and then went to look for Zoe after they heard Lynn's words.

Zoe was small, but not stupid, and she could understand what 'kill' meant.

She began to tremble.

Mr. Allen was her godfather, and the godfather wanted her to die?

Why?

Was it because of her illness that mommy and brother were in trouble?

Or was she disobedient?

Zoe suddenly covered her mouth and started to tremble, her big, pretty eyes bursting into tears.

She crouched in a corner of the flower-bed, watching the passing footsteps, and did not dare to make a sound.

At that moment, she realized that grandma was not playing games with her.

Someone was really trying to kill her, and Grandma was protecting her.

Chapter 183: It Was Hard to Decide

Laurel was supportive for Zoe's to do re-examination. However, when Samuel told her to have a physical examination, Laurel was somewhat surprised.

"I am just an old woman, why should I have an examination?"

Laurel refused.

Samuel took her hand and said, "Mom, you have been abroad all these years. I don't know how you are. You look fine now, but I still don't feel safe. Just have an examination, OK?"

Laurel actually didn't want to go to the doctor's hospital. But for Zoe, she would never have come back. Seeing Samuel do this, she thought for a moment and asked, "Is there something wrong with me?"

"No, just a routine checkup, Mom. Don't think too much."

Samuel tried to change the subject.

But Laurel was smart.

She looked at Samuel, the pair of eyes were very sharp, which made Samuel somewhat uncomfortable.

"Mom..."

"What's going on?"

Samuel saw that Laurel was very insistent, so he told her the examination results of St. Petersburg hospital.

Laurel's eyes narrowed slightly and she said, "I did take some medicine when I was young, but it wasn't poison. It was Chinese medicine. Your father and I had been married for many years without children, so we went to see a doctor, and the doctor said that our blood types did not match and it would be difficult to have children. I felt like my world was going to fall apart. If a woman can't be a mother all her life, is she still a complete woman? I went around looking for medicine. I took a lot of local remedies, but nothing worked, until I met Zama."

As she said this, Samuel's eyes suddenly narrowed.

"Zama?"

"Right! Don't you always wonder why I am so special to Zama and the Green family is so good to her? It was because she got me pregnant and gave us, the Green family, a baby. Do you know what a great favor this is to us? Once, in order to leave children for the Green family, I even wanted to divorce your father and let him remarry, but your father didn't agree. But luckily, we met Zama."

Samuel frowned slightly.

"What skills did Zama have? Can she make you get pregnant?"

"Her family is famous for its hereditary treatment of infertility. Their family is good at traditional Chinese medicine. However, the prime days of their family have gradually gone, and Zama was framed by some veil people and was homeless on the street. You father and you saved her and she gave us the prescription for gratitude.

Laurel's words made Samuel's brow wrinkle even deeper.

Chapter 184: Everything Will Be All Right Tomorrow

After solving Zoe's problem temporarily, Laurel had finished her examination, but her report had not come out until the next day. Samuel had to wait.

Laurel, however, did not upset at all, as if she did not think there was anything wrong with her body, which made Samuel somewhat doubtful.

When Mike called him, Samuel was having dinner with the children. When he heard Mike asking for him, he greeted Laurel and the children and then went out.

Mike met Samuel at a recreation club.

"Have you come?"

Mike sat in the booth and didn't make much of a fuss about Samuel's arrival, leaving Samuel to pick up whatever he wanted.

People around them knew Samuel's status when they saw Mike's attitude. Mike must be the one who would do anything for Samuel.

"Let me introduce to you. These are my friends who are currently working with the Brook Family. Who do you want to start with?"

Mike waited for Samuel to sit down and then spoke.

Samuel suddenly thought it was nice to have such a good friend. Mike had already guessed something before he had said anything.

"I'll do it myself, but I do need your help. I don't want to owe the others anything."

Samuel walked over to Mike and sat down.

When Mike heard this from Samuel, he dismissed everyone.

When there were only two people left in the room, Mike poured Samuel a glass of wine and said, "I heard you doubt the doctor's diagnosis at our hospital?"

"No, but I do not know how to do, so I simply ask the experts to come and see."

Samuel did have some pressure on this matter.

Michael and Samuel were best friends. Mike was once saved by Samuel on the battlefield. Since they retired, they had been in contact. Samuel originally planned to come to the United States to explore the business, but before the implementation, Nicole was in danger, so he did not have much energy to focus on job and he ran aground.

He didn't expect to need Mike's help this time.

"Time flies. We've been retired for so many years."

Mike missed those days in the army, but he still had to retire.

"Yes, that eventful time has gone forever."

Samuel missed it, too, but he knew that one should go forward and look forward.

After the two of them touched their glasses, Mike asked, "What's wrong with you and Allen? Why did he do that to you?"

"I hate him for taking my wife and wants to kill my child."

Samuel's eyes shone with hate.

"What dd you mean?"

Mike had no ideas of what he said. Samuel told him about Nicole, and by the way, about Zoe's illness over the years.

After hearing what Samuel said, Mike swore fiercely, "What a bastard! What does it matter to a child if there is a feud between adults? How can he target on a child?"

"All I want to do now is to save my wife. I've lost a son. I can't afford to lose my wife."

Samuel now felt sad when he thought of Lucas.

Chapter 185: Someone Came in

Nicole started to ponder how to commit suicide, when thinking about this.

With her hands and feet bound, it was impossible to cut her own wrist. With her mouth gagged, she couldn't commit suicide by biting her tongue. Thus, what else could she do?

Knock her head against the wall?

However, her distance to the wall was not far enough to make it. What's even worse, she couldn't move her body at her own will.

Nicole really thought herself a pathetic one, for she even had no access to death.

Apparently, Allen was the most ruthless.

She had no choice but to stare at the ceiling desperately. However, for a while, she felt a little dizzy. It seemed as if there was someone opening the ceiling.

But how could it be?

This was the basement, so the so-called ceiling was just under the floor.

Nicole blinked her eyes again, only to find the ceiling exactly moving.

She coughed twice to make some noise, even though nobody could hear it.

Nothing more was heard from the outside, which indicated that there was no one outside the door.

She stared at the ceiling without even a blink until that ceramic tile was moved away. When catching sight of a head, she was amazed to keep her eyes wide open. Unexpectedly, Someone actually came in!

Besides, he made it in this way!

She was so surprised and happy, especially when she saw the owner of that head, her eyes were filled with tears suddenly.

It was Samuel!

He showed up !

He was to save her!

Obviously, he found her last time, didn't he?

Samuel had felt a sight following him since he moved the tile away. The view he saw inside almost made him blind, and his heart was so hurt that he almost couldn't breathe.

Allen, that jerk!

How dare he treated Nicole like this?

Samuel was deeply provoked when he observed Nicole's condition that she was tied on the bed in the X-shape, her mouth was gagged, especially when the blood oozed out of her wrists and ankles.

As a matter of fact, he had imagined a variety of scenes when he saw Nicole. However, none of them could have been more stirring than this, and made him so painful. He jumped down quickly.

Nicole fixed her eyes on Samuel without any break, for she was so frightened that the man in front of her would disappear in a time and everything here would change into an illusion.

Chapter 186: She Is Ill

When Samuel wanted to say something to Nicole, she had already passed out.

He was scared that his face lost color. He quickly dried Nicole's body, put on her pajamas and carried her out.

The pajamas on Nicole's body were a little bigger, like a robe, which stimulated Samuel's sight more.

He quickly dried a tear from the corner of his eye and called the doctor over.

The doctor gave Nicole a general examination, and found that she had no other wounds or hidden injuries except for the scars on her body. It was only because she was too weak. Moreover, she suffered gastrointestinal dysfunction and she could not eat too greasy food recently.

Only hearing this from the doctor, Samuel could imagine how much sin Nicole suffered.

How could her gastrointestinal function dysfunction?

Jacob heard that Nicole was back and wanted to come over, but he was blocked out the door by Samuel.

“Go and check out what the people being trafficked eat on the ship?”

Samuel wanted to know everything.

Jacob quickly gave him the answer.

“Manager Green, those people all ate leftovers and rotten food on the ship. They didn't treat these people as human beings, insulted, abused and bullied them at will, and sometimes even forced them to drink urine for fun.

When Jacob heard this, he hesitated whether or not to tell Samuel, but in the end he did.

Samuel's face was terribly unsightly. He turned around and went back to the ward.

Nicole was still sleeping, but she slept very restless. Her hands held her legs tightly and curled up like a shrimp.

Samuel tried to stretch her body, but failed. Nicole in her sleep seemed to be struggling to protect herself with all her strength.

This was a subconscious way of protection, but it made people feel sad.

Samuel took off his shoes and went to bed. He held Nicole tightly in his arms and said in a low voice, “Don't be afraid. I'm by your side. Everything is over. Nicole, relax you. Don't hurt yourself like this. I'm Samuel.”

At the beginning, Nicole couldn't listen to him. She subconsciously resisted and dodged. She even opened her mouth and bit Samuel's wrist and arm. She bit wherever she could.

She was like a night cat, stretching out all her claws in self-defense.

Before long, Samuel's body was scarred, but he didn't feel pain, because his heart was more painful than the injury outside.

The once cheerful girl now became this way, whose fault was it?

It was his fault.

It was because he did not protect her well, making her go through all this.

Samuel let Nicole gnaw, but refused to lose hands.

Finally Nicole bit tired and fell asleep again, but she relaxed a lot.

Samuel made minced pork congee with preserved eggs Nicole liked very much, but when he came in, he didn't find her.

Then he suddenly was in fear.

Did someone take away Nicole again under his nose?

"Nicole, Nicole!"

Samuel was in a panic.

He howled her name and looked for Nicole everywhere, but he heard something in a weak voice in the room.

"I am here."

Samuel was stunned.

He clearly heard about Nicole, but he couldn't see her.

“Nicole, where are you?”

Samuel put the porridge on the table, quietly listening in order to find where Nicole was. But after a long time, he did not hear her reply.

He felt that he must have auditory hallucinations.

Nicole wasn't here. He didn't know who had taken her away.

Samuel wanted to stand up anxiously, but suddenly found that someone grabbed his foot.

He suddenly looked down and saw Nicole was scared under the bed.

Samuel was so shocked that he wanted to pity her.

"What are you doing?" he asked.

He did not blame Nicole, and pulled her out of there.

Nicole sat on the bed like a kid who did something wrong, not knowing where to put her hands.

She did not know how to say to Samuel.

It was very disgusting for him to see who she was, Nicole thought.

Living with Allen, she couldn't hide herself. The happiest thing was when there was no one at night, she was alone, looking at the ceiling all night till dawn every day.

Although it was boring, but it made her feel safe in the night.

But now faced with Samuel like this, Nicole suddenly felt embarrassed.

Nicole was no longer generous and confident. She even didn't know how to tell Samuel about this.

When Nicole was silent, Samuel felt as if a knife were piercing his heart.

"I made your favorite porridge. Just eat it a little, OK?"

Samuel went on over this topic, and he still looked at Nicole tenderly. However, it made Nicole stared down directly.

"Im sorry.' Nicole said.

Jacob left, but Samuel did not come in. He knew that Nicole was in a bad mood. Anyone who encountered this, could not calmly accept. Like her, it was better. At least she was not that depressed.

Samuel comforted himself, but still felt the pain.

He wanted to smoke, but refrained.

When Laurel came in, she saw her son like this and asked in a low voice, "What's wrong with you? Did you quarrel?"

He shook his head and said, "I would rather we had a fight at least so she would not shut herself off."

"Give her time. Any woman going through something like this would be devastated. I will tell Joseph not to bring Zoe here in these days. Let her rest in peace, and that is what the Green family owes her."

Laurel was also a woman and she knew that what a blow it would be for a woman to lose her child and then have something like this happen to her.

"If she is still sad, I will comfort her. Okay?"

Laurel was satisfied with this daughter-in-law.

He shook his head and said, "We can take care of this by ourselves. Mom, don't worry about us. When I get the results of your physical exam, whatever it is, you are going to follow my instruction."

Laurel smiled and shook her head.

"So much has happened to you. Don't worry about me. Let's wait until the results come out.'

After Laurel left, Samuel was left alone at the door again.

He stood here and kept looking in. But it was quiet that he felt uneasy.

"Nicole, are you still here? Nicole?"

Samuel was distracted.

He started knocking, but no one answered him. He was so scared and opened the door, seeing that Nicole was retching on the toilet.

There was a glass of water on the table and some of water stains had spilled. Obviously, she wanted to drink water, but she could not stand vomiting again.

Samuel felt sorry for her.

He quickly stepped forward and patted her back, hoping she would feel better.

"If you really can't stand it, give it up. And don't make things difficult for yourself. The doctor also said that we have to treat this disease with patience. I will ask the doctor to give you some nourishing liquid first. Can we treat it little by little?"

Nicole panted and sat straight down on the floor. She looked at Samuel and said, "How long? A week? A month? A year? I can't let myself go on like this and I have to stand up on my own. I have Zoe and have to find Lucas. Also, I want to stay with you for my whole life. However, I don't want to accompany you in my current state. I have my pride, do you understand?"

There were tears in her eyes.

Chapter 189: He Would Only Be with Nicole in His Life

Although Nicole agreed on it, he was not very happy. He could feel the reluctance in her heart, but she was compromising for him.

That she, like five years ago, she had no sense of self, only relying on Samuel. Once, he enjoyed such a time because he felt loved by a woman was a kind of glory. But now, he also fell in love with her, only to find that it was hopeless and pity for a love of their own to lose themselves.

Samuel didn't move, which surprised Nicole.

"What's wrong?"

"You don't need to care about me. You can do whatever you want to do. I want a wife, a wife with your own personality. You don't need to give you up. Whatever you want to do, I will accompany you.'

Samuel said in low voice with hoarseness, and Nicole was moved.

She suddenly realized that her efforts might not be as great as she thought.

Five years ago, she had been following Samuel and looked at his back, fantasizing when he could stop to look at her, but she never realized that this kind of love was abnormal.

If you want someone to fall in love with you, you have to let him see your virtue but not lose yourself.

She was soulless and thoughtless five years ago. She did everything that was to let Samuel to love her.

Once upon a time, she was the God's favored one in school and the faculty. She was also popular in school. But since she saw Samuel, she fell in love with him and completely lost herself.

In retrospect, there seemed to be few things worth remembering these past eight years.

She didn't actively strengthen herself and was not as powerful as Samuel was. She was just idling her time away humbly.

How could she be the match for Samuel?

As such, how could she be worth of standing by his side and state that she was Samuel's wife?

He was born into a rich family. There were so many women that he could choose. Should he be held responsible for her love just because she loved him?

No!

She did not have any qualification to let Samuel take responsibility for her.

Nicole didn't care whether it was guilt or love? She just knew that it was a chance to stay with him.

No matter how bad she had been, and no matter what she had missed, now she had a great chance to start again with Samuel.

After figuring out everything, she came to realize that she was incompetent before. If she had figured it out earlier, she wouldn't have ended up like this with Samuel.

Chapter 190: First Step Was Difficult

Nicole thought for a long time. Seeing Samuel's calm, she decided to speak out.

Maybe their relationship wasn't strong, and maybe no man could stand it.

Nicole was gambling, but felt that Samuel would not be so shallow. She felt it very tangled.

Seeing Nicole was indecisive, Samuel said in low voice, "Don't force yourself. You can tell me whenever you want to open up to me. I don't need to know immediately. How are you feeling now? Do you need some foods to taste?"

Nicole felt encouraged because of Samuel's words.

"OK."

Samuel smiled and stood up. He made her a bowl of millet gruel in person.

The gruel looked very sweet, but Nicole still felt somewhat disgusted. However, under his gaze, she poured it into her mouth.

She had stuffed the bowl of gruel down her stomach because she had no appetite.

She felt everything she had eaten these days was tasteless, and she thought she had a taste problem, but it turned out to be her own psychology.

She could not overcome it by herself.

Her stomach was upset, but she bore it all the time.

Samuel was worried.

"Don't force yourself. We must go slowly."

"I know. I feel all right now, and I will just take my time."

Nicole slightly smiled, but Samuel knew she bore.

"Nicole..."

He wanted to say something, but the doctor walked in.

"Mr. Green, please come out. I want to discuss Lady Bush's illness."

This "Lady Bush" did not refer to Nicole, but Zoe.

Samuel was nervous.

"Go ahead. I am fine."

Nicole knew Zoe's illness was emergency, and she urged Samuel to come out.

You..."

"I am fine. Even if I don't feel well, I will throw up. Zoe is more important, and I can't go to see her like this. You take good care of her for me so that I can feel at ease."

Nicole was worried. No mother could keep calm when she learned of her daughter's illness, and Nicole was no exception.

It would be a pity that she appeared in front of Zoe like this, and her appearance would be scared Zoe.

Samuel felt Nicole's insistence and softly said, "I will come back quickly. If you feel uncomfortable, call the doctor. You got it?"

"Okay. Take it easy."
