Chapter 1811 What The Hell Are You Up To Again?

Yasmeen hastily pinched Lucas, while the doubt in her eyes made Lucas laugh.

"You want them to come in and see me like this?"

Yasmeen looked at Lucas's firm pecs and subconsciously shook her head.

She didn't want anyone to see Lucas like this.

Lucas was hers!

Seeing Yasmeen shake her head, Lucas smiled and said, "Bring my clothes. There are in the cupboard."

Joseph had gotten someone to buy Lucas some clothes earlier, otherwise, he wouldn't really be able to handle it with the speed at which his wounds stuck to his clothes.

Yasmeen hurriedly went and found some clothes for Lucas to put on.

Lucas went out like that and opened the door to his room without fastening the buttons.

Outside were the man from the military district with his team. Seeing Lucas' pale face and taking a look at his upper body, the man asked nervously, "Mr. Lucas, are you injured? Was it from being injured earlier?"

"No. It was my father-in-law who hit me. It was a wedding expedition."

Lucas's comment made Yasmeen feel a little awkward.

The man, obviously not expecting Lucas to bring up something so shameless and with a smug look on his face, froze in his tracks.

The others also looked at him with varying expressions.

Lucas was a celebrity in the military district and had become a god to many people because of the many military medals he had earned.

Now this high and mighty god had become so ordinary that he also had to endure his father-in-law's harshness and tests in order to get a wife. They instantly felt that Lucas was very close to them.

A few of the bold ones even asked, "Mr. Lucas, will you send us invitations when you get married?"

"You guys probably won't be able to go even if I send them. But when the time comes, I'll be sure to send the wedding candy to the military district so that each of you can eat it. Here, take a look. This is your future sister-in-law."

With that, Lucas pushed Yasmeen to the front.

Yasmeen's face instantly turned as red as an apple, and she was even more a little nervous.

"Lucas, forget it."

Yasmeen grabbed Lucas's arm.

Looking at Yasmeen's worried look, a hint of tenderness crossed Lucas' eyes and he whispered, "I can't just let it go. This is the kidney I found for you, and no one has the right to take it away. Just wait for me to come back."

"I'm coming with you."

Yasmeen was worried and scared. She knew Lucas was capable, but she just couldn't help but worry about him.

If it was before, Lucas would never have refused. But Yasmeen's health was poor now, even though she was trying to hide it.

Lucas stroked her head and whispered, "Listen to me! Just wait here for me to come back."

When he finished, Yasmeen knew what his decision was. A flash of disappointment crossed her eyes.

She hadn't been able to keep up with Lucas, and she wasn't sure if she was considered a burden to Lucas now. But Yasmeen knew that if she had the chance to choose again, she would still make the same choice without hesitation. Because loving him had become a habit for her.

"Okay, you need to be safe. I'll wait for you to come back."

Yasmeen did not continue to plead with him.

Since Lucas didn't think it was appropriate for her to go with him, she would wait here quietly, even if she was anxious and worried a lot.

Lucas knew that Yasmeen was feeling bad, but at this time, he had to be more sensible. Because he knew the risk Yasmeen was taking by going out was one he could not afford to take.

He looked deeply at Yasmeen and then walked away, while Joseph followed him out of the room.

Joseph frowned at Lucas's quick pace and said, "Are you sure you don't want to take her? She's actually in good health."

"I don't want any eventuality for her. I don't need to worry about her safety with the military here, the Bradford family, and her mother and brother protecting her. Brother, where did that man go?"

Lucas walked to the door and glanced back at Joseph.

"What?"

Joseph struggled to avoid Lucas's gaze. Although he kept strong and calm, the frequency with which he drank water nevertheless made it clear that he was a little nervous.

Lucas walked over step by step, looked at Joseph, and took the cup from his hand. He looked Joseph straight in the eye and asked, "Why are you doing this? Do you know the man who came to steal the kidney?"

"Yes."

Joseph finally looked at Lucas.

There was regret and distress in his eyes, but he never avoided him again.

"Why? Give me a reason."

Lucas didn't think Joseph would be a terrorist, much less help an outsider to harm his own family.

He was his brother. Joseph had done a lot of things over the years for his younger siblings, and even for him. He didn't talk about it but Lucas knew all about it.

One could not be so perfect in disguise, nor could one hide for so many years. Joseph was a member of the Green Family and his affection for them was clear for all to see. If anyone had said that Joseph had colluded with the terrorists, he would not have believed them. But at this moment, he desperately needed a reason.

Joseph pushed his glasses up his nose and whispered, "I owe her my life, and I have to repay that favor. I know I shouldn't involve you and Yasmeen in my own affairs, but she begged me, and I couldn't help it."

Lucas said nothing more. He placed the glass on the table and got up to leave.

Joseph suddenly became a little uneasy.

"Lucas, you can scold me, or hit me. What do you mean by being so quiet?"

"It means nothing. I'm going to check on Yasmeen."

Lucas didn't look back or even turn around, but just walked out. But if one looked closely, he could see Lucas's body trembling slightly.

Joseph wanted to chase him out, but when he got up, he found that he had neither the position nor the face to do so.

Lucas left Joseph's office and leaned against the wall in the corridor. He suddenly felt that his strength had been drained from his body. If he hadn't held on so strongly just now, he might well have collapsed in front of Joseph.

Joseph looked at Lucas, gave him the spoon directly in his hand, and said indifferently, "Do it. I know what you can do. Even with just this spoon, you'll be able to kill me."

"You're my brother!"

Lucas suppressed and held back his emotions, but his low growl sounded like a wounded beast. He struggled and was angry, but helpless to do anything about it.

Joseph suddenly got a little sad.

He turned his head and looked out at the weather. It was bright and sunny, but now he felt like he was in an abyss.

Lucas was very protective of his family. Even because he was not Samuel and Nicole's biological son, each of them could not wait to give him all their heart.

But what had he done?

Joseph despised himself.

"I will find a kidney that matches Yasmeeen and ship it over as quickly as possible. No delay in her surgery, I promise."

Lucas bit his lower lip and whispered, "I never doubted your abilities or connections. You know that's not what I want to hear."

"You want to know about what happened between me and Nichole?"

Joseph's words made Lucas understand that Joseph had already known about the things he had done.

The two had grown up together and both knew quite well what each other was like. So Lucas didn't hide it from him and nodded straight away when he heard Joseph say so.

"Yes, I want to know what Nichole is to you. Aren't you with Kylie? Don't you like her? And now you can turn your back on your family's bottom line to help Nichole, so she's the one you love?"

Joseph shook his head. He had wanted to use nicotine to numb himself, but he could never get used to the choking taste. He had to take the gum out of his pocket and chew on it bit by bit.

Seeing that Lucas had passed out, Joseph simply snapped his fingers and someone came out from inside the private room and said to Joseph respectfully, "Mr. Joseph."

"Take my brother to the place I have designated and inject him with drugs to put him to sleep for the time I have set. No one is to harm him."

Joseph's voice was cold as hell and the men around him obeyed.

Several men stepped forward and took Lucas away.

Joseph looked at the coffee Lucas had drunk in front of him and poured the rest straight away, then disposed of the cup.

He stood up and looked out at the traffic, and a meaningful glint crossed his eyes.

Yasmeen hadn't heard from Lucas and was walking back and forth anxiously, making Patrick's head spin.

"Yasmeen, don't go away. Lucas is so powerful. Nothing will happen."

"What do you know? Just because he's powerful, so nothing will happen? Why do you all think so? If being powerful meant he wouldn't get hurt, how did he get the serious injury six months ago?"

Yasmeen shuddered at the thought of seeing Lucas lying lifeless on a hospital bed six months ago.

She knew she might have fallen into a psychological trap, and she didn't dare to sleep with her eyes closed for days, fearing that if she closed them, she would see Lucas' lifeless face.

Now Lucas was out chasing the terrorist and she was so worried, and she couldn't tell anyone about this feeling, which was why she was so anxious.

After being lectured by Yasmeen, Patrick rubbed his nose a bit bored and said, "Since you're so worried about him, I'll go out and ask others about his situation for you."

"Go now."

Yasmeen pushed Patrick out as soon as she could.

Patrick looked at the closed door of the room and was a bit speechless.

Yasmeen had a boyfriend and forgot about her family, it was really ...

He thought of a few words in his mind but bit back when he thought that she was his own sister.

When Yasmeen was left alone in the room, she became even more frightened. After walking back and forth a few times, she opened the door straight away to go out but met Joseph at the door.

"Joseph? Lucas is back?"

"Where did you get Lucas? Joseph, you know that Lucas is the one we want."

As soon as Nichole finished speaking, she noticed Joseph glaring at her.

He said indifferently, "If you don't want me to operate on that man anymore, then keep asking about Lucas. I don't care, but I'm afraid that person can't wait."

Nichole didn't dare to speak at once.

Joseph didn't care what she thought. He went to the dressing room inside alone, changed into a set of clothes, and came out, then directly burned the original clothes in front of Nichole.

"What are you doing?"

"I have Lucas' scent and fingerprints on me."

Joseph's words made Nichole look at him a few more times.

The more she spent time with Joseph, the more she felt that Joseph was a cautious and careful man. If she could be pampered by such a man, she would be a happy woman for life.

Nichole was tempted to lean over, but Joseph stopped her in her tracks with a cold look.

She smiled awkwardly, but Joseph didn't have a nice look on his face.

"Get out when you have nothing more to do. Don't come to my place again. Even as an ordinary person, I don't want to see you again, or I might not do well in surgery."

"You!"

Nichole bit her lower lip and looked like crap.

Joseph was simply too hateful!

But his background, his ability, and his influence in the medical world could not allow her to be reckless.

Nichole snorted coldly and walked away in a huff.

When she had gone, Joseph took out his phone and gave his assistant an order.

"Get someone to disinfect my office once and for all. Also, leave the windows open for twelve hours before closing them."

The assistant was slightly flabbergasted and couldn't help saying, "Dr. Joseph, twelve hours means leaving the windows open at night. It's not good for the cold air to get in that way."

"Do as I say."

The incident hit Lucas hard. He even had the thought that he was dreaming and it was a nightmare.

He closed his eyes fiercely, hoping that he would still be in the hospital when he opened them again, that his brother was still his brother and that nothing had changed.

But when Lucas opened his eyes again, he was utterly disappointed.

He couldn't help but smile bitterly.

When had he actually believed this?

It turned out that when a person was in the presence of a truth that he desperately did not want to admit, no matter what he had been, no matter what he had studied and how mentally strong he was, he could eventually find his own reason to escape.

But now he couldn't avoid it.

Lucas untied the ropes and rose gently, not alerting anyone.

He surveyed the whole room. Almost nothing was missing, everything was prepared, and it definitely did not look like a place to imprison people.

Lucas couldn't help but feel a little distressed by Joseph's final kindness.

Wait!

Nothing was missing?

Lucas suddenly saw the laptop on top of the desk.

No one knew Lucas's computer skills better than Joseph. No matter what environment Lucas was in, there was nothing he couldn't do if he was given a computer.

Why would Joseph put a laptop in here if he was intent on keeping him prisoner?

Was it an ornament?

Lucas walked over to the computer and turned it on, then found that there was no internet. He tapped his long fingers quickly on the keyboard and it didn't take long for a line to appear on the screen.

"Find a way to get online."

The caption flashed for two seconds and then disappeared.

The atmosphere turned cold at once.

"Dr. Green, don't you push me!"

Mr. Frye was exasperated by Joseph.

In all these years, no one had ever dared to speak to him like that. If his grandson hadn't needed Joseph to operate on him, he really would have wanted to kill Joseph immediately.

Joseph naturally knew how Mr. Frye was feeling, but as if he hadn't irritated him enough, he said, "Don't you dare harm my master! You don't seem to know whose turf you're standing on. Well, the Green Family would have no problem killing you. The reason I haven't alerted my family is that I don't want to make a big deal out of it. I just want my master to be safe and my family to be well. But that doesn't mean I'm afraid of you. Now you are the one who is begging me, so you should have the attitude of a beggar."

"What attitude do you want?"

Mr. Frye struggled to suppress his anger.

A man suddenly walked in outside and he gave a little start at the sight of Joseph.

"Lucas?"

Lucas, who had seen the man on the screen, suddenly froze.

Julian?

Julian was actually here?

What was going on?

He listened with bated breath when he heard Joseph say coldly, "You can go see an ophthalmologist if you're blind. I can refer you to a doctor."

Hearing what Joseph had said, Julian instantly came back to his senses.

Naturally, he knew that Joseph and Lucas looked somewhat similar, but he did not expect them to look so much alike. If the two did not have different temperaments, he really might not be able to tell them apart.

When Mr. Frye saw that Julian had arrived, he couldn't help but transfer his anger on him.

“Joseph, what are you doing?”

Julian still had a great expectation of his son without concerning how Mr. Frye treated this child. It was just because that the child was his own son. So, Julian raised him with care. As soon as he entered the room and saw Joseph putting his hand on the child's kidney, he rushed towards Joseph anxiously and wanted to beat him. However, Joseph said coldly, “Stand there if you don't want him to die.”

“Don't move!”

Mr. Frye could only obey Joseph's command. He then scolded Julian after seeing that.

He did not show any respect to Julian at all. He scolded him loudly in front of Joseph even though many bodyguards and subordinates were around. Julian's eyes turned red and were filled with tears. However, he still stopped moving and just watched Joseph pressing on the child's body.

Joseph did not care what Julian thought of him. His face was slightly gloomy after examining the child carefully.

“You guys should be mentally prepared. This child has multiple organ failures. Even if he gets a kidney transplant, he may not be able to survive any longer.”

Mr. Frye was also anxious after hearing that.

“Dr. Green, I will do anything for you as long as you can save my grandson.”

As for Mr. Frye, his grandson was the most important person in his entire life.

Julian also became nervous and looked at Joseph while saying, “Dr. Green, it was my fault just now. Don't take it to heart. You can beat me or scold me if you want to release your anger, but please save the poor child.”

Joseph was a doctor. Although he did not like Mr. Frye and Julian, still he was not that merciless to harm such a young child.”

The child was innocent.

“I want both of you to surrender and explain all those bad things you have done over the years clearly. In this case, I will save the child. Can you do it?”

Joseph said calmly.

Mr. Frye showed an unpleasant look while Julian remained silent.

Chapter 1820 You Have to Help Me

"Boss, are you thinking too much? How can Joseph such a courteous man be in the security bureau? Don't fool around, okay?"

Edison retorted subconsciously but he heard Lucas saying, "Just investigate as I ask you to. Why do you have so many excuses?"

"Fine."

Edison did not say anything else.

Lucas thought of Yasmeen.

She must have been worried about him right now?

She was about to have an operation. If she was in a bad mood, it would affect the quality of the operation.

Lucas said hurriedly as he thought of this, "Help me pass a message to Yasmeen."

"What?"

"Tell her to wait for me to come back. Just relax and go for the operation. I want to stay with her for the rest of my life."

Edison felt so disgusting when he heard Lucas's words. He could not help but say, "Boss, don't be so disgusting. Can't you just send her a message? Why do you need me to pass her a message?"

"If I could, how would I let you hear these words? Did you forget to bring your brain with you recently?"

Edison's mouth twitched again as he heard Lucas teasing him.

He really did not think that much.

If Lucas could do it conveniently, he would not ask him to find out Joseph's information, let alone pass Yasmeen a message. So, Edison was being careless.

However, Edison also noticed something else.

"Boss, you're being monitored?"

"That's why you have to help me."

Lucas did not trust too many people around him. Edison was definitely the one that he could believe in.

Edison became energetic when he heard Lucas's words.

"Boss, how can I help you?"
