Don't Try to Escape, My Wife!

Chapter 501 I Don't Want to Suspect Anything

Looking at the shrewd manager, Samuel couldn't help but sneer and say, "Is that so? But Lionel gave my wife a business card and wants my son to study in this shooting club. Now I want to see how the club is, so you should show me around."

After that, Samuel raised his foot and walked inside.

The manager was very nervous.

"Mr. Green, there's no one here today. They're all out. If you want to visit here, why not take a rain check?"

"I, Samuel, could do everything I want. Another day? No way! Who do you think you are?!"

After hearing what Samuel said, the manager was scared.

"No, that's not what I meant. Mr. Green, wait a moment. I'll have it arranged now."

"No need, I'll just casually take a look."

Samuel pushed the manager away.

Cold sweat oozed out of the manager's forehead. He hurriedly gave a look to hint that the people around him should quickly send a message to Vincent.

It was not that Samuel did not see his small movements, but he pretended not to see them on purpose.

He took people to hang about here, as if he was interested in everything.

The manager couldn't help but mutter in his heart when he saw Samuel walking around so leisurely.

Didn't Vincent say that the two children ran away from home?

Since the children had been missing, why did Samuel still have the mood to wander around the club?

It was so strange!

Could it be that the two children were in his club?

The manager's idea scared himself.

If Samuel really found the two children of the Green family here, how could he explain this?

The more he thought about it, the more uneasy the manager became. He could not wait for Vincent to come over quickly.

When Vincent received the manager's call, he was somewhat surprised.

He never thought that Samuel would go to the shooting club.

Vincent thought a lot. He immediately gave up the idea of searching elsewhere and drove straight to the shooting club.

"Brother, why are you here?"

Vincent's arrival made the manager breathe a sigh of relief.

Although it was just a simple action, and even the manager did it carefully, Samuel still sensed it.

It seemed like this place was really a stronghold of Vincent as Joseph said, so this manager was likely to be someone of Vincent.

Thinking of this, Samuel whispered, "Nothing much. I suddenly remembered that yesterday evening, I brought Lucas to shoot at the amusement park. A coach named Lionel from this club gave us a business card, saying that he wanted Lucas to come over and learn how to shoot. You know, Lucas likes guns very much. Today, I just want to see if Lucas and the others are coming or not. After all, that business card was also lost."

Samuel's words caused Vincent to be slightly stunned.

He then glared at the manager.

The manager knew that his men had got into trouble and said quickly, "Mr. Green, no children have come here alone today, let alone two children."

"How do you know I'm here for the two children?"

Samuel's eyes suddenly narrowed.

Lucas watched helplessly as Samuel left the club. He was very anxious, but couldn't do anything.
The little girl beside him had been crying silently. He didn't know whether it was because of being scared or not.
Lucas had a special desire to protect her.
She was the one who protected him when he first came in. Although Lucas didn't know why she was crying now, he still moved to her side.
He knew it was useless, but that was all he could do.
The little girl apparently did not notice Lucas' actions and had been immersed in her own sorrow.
The guards in the basement finally breathed a sigh of relief.
"He finally left."
"Yeah, let them investigate. The dead child and the taken child have nothing to do with the Green family. What if they find out? We can just say that we don't know."
"Where has that child been sent after being brought to the station?"

"I heard that child was sold to a human trafficker. How would I know exactly where they went?"

"Was the child taken from here?"

"Yeah. That child is sick. Our boss said that we should sell that child out as soon as possible. Don't let that child die here. At least we can earn some money back."

The two guards were chatting as if nobody was around. In their eyes, these children seemed to be like vegetables outside and could be sold randomly.

Lucas found that the little girl beside him cried even more when she heard their words.

Could it be that one of the two children was her family?

But now, Lucas could not ask her directly.

Because of Samuel's departure, the guards naturally relaxed a lot. They untied the children and gave them some food before leaving.

The children were eating mechanically.

For them, no matter what the food was in front of them, as long as they could survive, it would be fine.

As long as they could survive, they would be able to leave this place. Only after leaving this place, would they be able to escape.

Looking at the steamed bun in front of him, Lucas really couldn't eat it. But if he didn't eat, what awaited him was hunger.

He knew that from now on, until he returned to the Green's, he was no longer the Green family's young master. He was just a person who could be tortured to death at any time.

Seeing that the little girl beside him was still crying, Lucas whispered, "What's wrong with you?"

The little girl shook her head and did not intend to say anything.

Lucas broke the steamed bun in his hand into two and gave her half.

"Eat more, you are too thin. No matter what you cry for, whether you want to tell me or not, keep your physical strength first. I promise, I will take you out of here. As long as we go out, we can do what we want."

Nicole and Samuel were shocked.

These words and phrases shocked them greatly.

They knew more than anyone how Joseph came back. But what did Joseph mean by saying like that?

Joseph didn't even look at them and just hid in Mrs. Green's embrace, crying so hard that he couldn't catch his breath.

Seeing that Nicole and Samuel were indifferent, or rather frightened, Mrs. Green couldn't help but roar angrily, "What are you still waiting for? Go find Lucas for me! If Lucas is taken away by traffickers, who knows what will happen? You two can even be so calm?"

Samuel hurriedly reacted and told Nicole, "You stay here with mom. I'll send someone to find Lucas."

As he spoke, he ran out and staggered.

Vincent frowned slightly.

When at the club, Samuel said that children had gone to the club. At that time, he thought that Samuel was lying. Now that he heard Joseph say the same thing, he believed it.

Joseph wouldn't lie, and he didn't dare to lie in front of Vincent. So Joseph was the only one who entered the club and was brought out, while Lucas was kidnapped halfway?

The manager told Vincent that the two kids were both girls, not boys, so Joseph's words were more reliable.

Thinking of Lucas' disappearance, Vincent suddenly became somewhat happy.

No one could be compared to his Joseph in the future.

However, Vincent hid this happiness in his heart, and did not show much expression.

Seeing Mrs. Green so anxious, Nicole whispered, "Mom, don't worry. Samuel has already gone out to find him. I believe he will find Lucas."

"If he can't, we'll notify the police and ask them to help find Lucas."

"No!"

When Vincent heard what Laurel said, he immediately stopped her.

"Mom, you know how many competitors our family has. If they find out that Lucas has disappeared, I'm afraid that Lucas will be in danger before the police find him."

"Then what? Just wait at home? My Lucas is still so young. How could he escape from the hands of traffickers? If he was sold to someone, he would be considered lucky. If he had his limbs cut off or his organs dug up, I, I..."

The more Mrs. Green said, the more uncomfortable she felt. Suddenly, she covered her chest and couldn't breathe.

"Doctor! Call the doctor over!"

Nicole was so scared that her face turned pale.

What Mrs. Green said just now made her heart skip a beat, but now she could not panic.

Didn't Joseph say that Lucas was at the club?

Although she didn't see Samuel bring Lucas back, he shouldn't have fallen into the hands of the traffickers as Mrs. Green said, right?

This was the only way that Nicole could comfort herself.

The family doctor was about to leave when he heard Nicole's call and hurriedly came in to save Mrs. Green.

Vincent looked at Nicole with a surprised expression, and then he apologized, "Blimey! Samuel definitely doesn't want you to worry. I shouldn't have told you this. You just pretend that I didn't say anything."

After that, Vincent turned around and was about to leave.

Nicole grabbed him.

"What's going on? Tell me."

Nicole knew that it might be Vincent's scheme, but now it was related to Lucas. She had no choice but to be cautious.

Vincent said somewhat awkwardly, "Nicole, Samuel didn't even tell you. If I tell you this, I wouldn't be able to afford anything that happens to you."

"What can happen to me? Hurry up and tell me, what happened to Lucas?"

Nicole was extremely anxious.

This was exactly what Vincent wanted.

A trace of cunning flashed past his eyes.

"Nicole, this has not been confirmed. We went to the club and couldn't find Lucas everywhere. Then, someone said that he saw a cleaning woman pushing a garbage truck with two children inside. One was dead, and the police was there. The other was sold to the traffickers by that woman. It is said that the traffickers took the child on a bus, but there were so many buses at the station that no one paid attention to them. We can only search for Lucas one by one. Samuel had already sent his people there in the afternoon, but there was still no news. That's why I came to ask if you need my help. After all, Joseph is back, and Lucas is still missing. I also want to help."

Hearing what Vincent said, Nicole almost couldn't stand.

Lucas was taken on the bus by the traffickers?

Why didn't Samuel say anything?

Seeing Nicole's pale face, Vincent restrained his happiness, but whispered, "Nicole, you don't need to worry. With Samuel's ability, he should be able to find Lucas. Last time, Samuel was missing for eight days, and finally he came back safely? We couldn't get in touch with him and we were afraid that he would be in danger. However, he just came back safe and sound. I see that Samuel doesn't look so good. Is anything wrong with him? If you need my help, just tell me. Samuel and I are brothers. I won't hesitate if I can help."

Nicole felt so panicked that she was slightly shocked when she heard Vincent's question. But she quickly reacted.

"No matter. His phone didn't work during that period of time. And he's not used to the food abroad these days, so he has lost weight."

"Is that so? He has been traveling abroad on business all the time. He is almost a 'flying man'. I really didn't expect that there would be any food that he can't eat."

Vincent said calmly, but it made Nicole become alert.

"Who knows? He doesn't care about his own health. What can I do? Please help Samuel to find Lucas. I need to go in and see how Mom is doing. She's worried about this very much."

"Alright."

Vincent did not say anything else.

When Nicole turned around and left, she could feel the burning gazes on her back.

"Mr. Green, watch out!"

Samuel's people finally arrived.

Seeing such a dangerous scene, they hurriedly reminded Samuel, but Samuel could not hear them at all. He could only see his people saying something with their mouths open.

He frowned and subconsciously sensed the danger behind him. He crouched down and the bullet flew past his ear, leaving a trace of blood.

Samuel touched his ears and his eyes turned cold.

Vincent really wanted him to die!

He rolled on the spot and rolled to the roadside, dodging the shots behind.

Samuel's people started fighting with the other party and soon subdued those people. However, no matter what Samuel asked, they did not say who ordered them do kill him.

Judging from their "loyalty", Samuel knew that he wouldn't get any useful clues.

"I'll leave them to you. I still have to find Lucas."

Samuel wiped his injured ears with handkerchief and drove his own car to catch up.

Samuel repeatedly ordered everyone not to tell Nicole about this accident.

Since Lucas was already missing, why would she need to worry about him anymore?

In the Green's, after Gabrielle came over, she examined Nicole, frowning, "You clearly know that you can't be too emotional."

"I can't control myself. That's my child."

Nicole also knew her physical condition, but she just couldn't remain indifferent.

Gabrielle shook her head and helped Nicole put on intravenous drip.

Zoe had been listless all day in kindergarten. She was very worried about Joseph and Lucas. When she came back and heard that Joseph had returned, she hurriedly ran over to take a look.

Nicole just let her go. Perhaps Joseph could be better with Zoe accompanying him.

After the intravenous drip, Nicole felt a little sleepy.

"Does this medicine contain sleeping ingredients?"

Nicole asked Gabrielle.

Gabrielle whispered, "You know. This medicine will definitely contain sleeping ingredients. Your body doesn't allow you to think about anything. You need to rest, Nicole!"

"I can't rest! To be exact, I can't sleep! At least I can't sleep until Samuel returns!"

Lucas couldn't sleep, neither could Hedy.

She looked at Lucas and gestured to him to ask him.

Lucas smiled and didn't say anything except shaking his head.

They hugged each other and stayed half-asleep all night.

Before six o'clock the next morning, they were awakened by a rude whip.

No one protected Lucas, so he experienced the feeling of being whipped.

It was so hot and painful.

There was a bloodstain on his delicate skin immediately.

Lucas gritted his teeth, with tears in his eyes. But he still held them back.

He would take revenge on these people!

"Get up! Hurry! We're going out!"

The watchman did not treat them as humans in the slightest, but drove them out like cattle.

Lucas followed the children out.

Perhaps because they were afraid that the children would run away, they were tied together in the wrist by a rope.

What Lucas felt when seeing this reminded him of the slaves on TV shows.

He felt he was just like a slave now.

A group of children was taken out.

After leaving the basement, Lucas smelled the air above, but before he could do anything, he was driven into a large room.

It was large, like a training ground, but there weren't many training facilities.

"Go there and move those things. You are not allowed to eat until you finish,"

The watchman commanded as he pointed at those facilities.

Lucas thought that they were brought to the training ground for training.

He was too naïve.

It was a bit difficult even for adults to move those facilities. How could they ask these children to do it?

Lucas paused for a moment, so he was whipped by the watchman.

"Hey, are you dumb? Hurry up! Clean up this place in the morning. You have to train in the afternoon. Don't slack off. If I see someone slacking off, I will kill him,"

The guard cursed. Lucas felt that his whole back was painful.

Damn scoundrel!

He would take revenge on them!

Hedy held Lucas' hand, as if she was comforting him or asking him if he felt pain.

Lucas smiled feebly and then went to move the equipment with them.

Lucas was undoubtedly excited, but the child continued to write, "However, the things inside the small dark room are almost broken. They were thrown in because they were useless. I heard that the room used to be a warehouse. We can't see anything inside, and we don't know what there is. I accidentally touched the transmitter the last time I was locked up, and then I secretly brought it out. But I don't know where it is now."

Lucas frowned slightly but was optimistic.

"It's fine. As long as there's that thing, I have a way to get all of us out of here. But I need a lighter."

He didn't know what in the small dark room met his needs, but it was too dark inside, without any light. So it wasn't easy to find what he wanted.

Because two more children had died recently, the rest were eager to go out. Seeing Lucas' happy look, they had a glimmer of hope.

"I can get a lighter,"

A kid said.

Lucas knew that these children were eager for freedom, just like he was eager to go home.

"Alright! Let's cooperate tomorrow. I'll find a reason to be locked up in the small dark room. The rest of you, don't give yourself away."

Lucas' words made everyone calm down. They seemed a little excited, as well as worried and afraid.

Hedy held Lucas' hand and wrote, "I will go into the small dark room with you."

Recalling Hedy had been coughing for the past few days because of being beaten last time, Lucas hurriedly shook his head.

"No, I can do it myself. You can't be beaten anymore."

She was only two years older than him and Zoe, but she was skinny, which made others feel sorry.

But Hedy insisted.

Lucas whispered, "If you don't obey, I'll go out and tell them my identity now. I will perhaps die."

He didn't know why he wanted to threaten Hedy with his life, but at this moment, he just didn't want to see Hedy get beaten up, not even a bit.

She was probably the first person that he felt sorriest except his family.

Hedy hurriedly shut up, but she was a little angry.

Seeing her like this, Lucas couldn't help but think of Zoe.

He really missed that foodie.

Recalling she called him brother and how happy she was when she ate,

Lucas wanted to go out even more.

When the training started in the afternoon, Lucas deliberately stirred up trouble with the guard and was beaten up.

He covered his important part and bore ferocious fists. He felt extremely painful, but he could only clench his teeth and persevere.

It was a picture of five years ago.

At that time, Riley was beautiful and even enthusiastic towards Vincent.

His eyes were somewhat deep, as if he had sunk into memories.

What kind of woman was Riley?

What Vincent remembered most clearly now was the way she looked at him, warm and affectionate.

He thought that it was love, but later he realized that she was just looking at another person through his face.

Since childhood, it hadn't mattered for Vincent to be his accessory and comparison, anyway. But when he grew up, he became his substitute. Vincent was unable to suppress such humiliation.

Riley was his woman!

They even had a child!

However, Samuel killed Riley.

Although he didn't do it in person, it was because of him and Nicole. They even claimed to be benefactors, raising his son and letting him be grateful for them.

What a joke!

Vincent suddenly closed his pocket watch and placed it on his chest. He looked out coldly and said to himself, "I'll get back what you two owe me sooner or later."

There was a knock on the door.

"Come in!"

Vincent put the pocket watch into his pocket and his face became cold again.

The comer looked around and found there was no outsider here. He smiled, "Mr. Vincent, I'm short of money recently. Can you give me some money?"

The comer was cowardly and skinny.

Vincent looked at him and said coldly, "Ryan, I remember that I have given you some money not long ago. What happened? Did you run out of it so quickly?"

"Mr. Vincent, you know that thing is very expensive. The last time you asked me to do the task, I paid for it myself."

"How dare you mention it?"

Vincent's expression immediately changed.

Ryan trembled in fright, but he didn't dare to speak.

Vincent snorted coldly, "You promised me that Samuel would get addicted after drinking that wine. But look at him now. He is energetic. Does he have the slightest bit of addiction?"

"But I did let Jeannie put the drug in. She refused at first because she said that Samuel was her benefactor. Then I injected it into her, and she gave up. Besides, if Samuel weren't addicted, how could he have disappeared for eight days? I think he should have gone to an addiction treatment center during that period."

Vincent sneered.

Seeing Lucas' smile, Hedy was a little excited, but she soon pulled Lucas to her side and handed the chicken drumstick that she had left to Lucas.

"Where did you get the drumstick?"

Lucas was a little surprised.

He had been here for four days. He rarely ate any meat, not to mention drumsticks. Now he suddenly saw this drumstick, so he was somewhat puzzled.

Hedy gestured to tell him it was Ryan who gave them.

Although he didn't know who Ryan was, he paid heed to this person.

Someone who could be remembered by Samuel was not a good person, and what he gave was not a good thing.

Although Lucas was hungry and wanted to eat the chicken drumstick, he still hesitated.

"Have you eaten it?"

"I don't like it. You can eat it."

Hedy expressed her meaning, but she pursed her lips and looked elsewhere.

It wasn't that she didn't want to eat it, but that she purposely put it away for Lucas.

Lucas was moved.

He put away the drumstick again and whispered, "I'm not hungry yet. Since you don't like it either, we can put it away now, so that we can eat it when we are hungry tomorrow."

Hedy did not expect that Lucas would not eat it, so she was slightly stunned.

Lucas could not tell her his guess, but whispered, "You left this for me. You are not allowed to eat it secretly."

"I won't. I said I don't like it."

Even though Hedy wanted to eat the chicken drumstick, she couldn't do it anymore. She could only smell the drumstick, and then she pulled Lucas to sleep.

Lucas was awake all night.

He woke up early the next day.

He looked outside and found the sun hadn't risen yet.

For the first time, he felt the time here had passed slowly.

Hedy finally woke up. She found Lucas had wakened early and asked uneasily, "Didn't you sleep all night?"

"No. But I woke up early. Tell the other children not to betray our intention and to do what we should do. I promise that we will all leave here today!"

Lucas' words and eyesight with firmness gave Hedy great encouragement.

She hurriedly woke up the other children and told them what Lucas meant.

Lucas looked outside. He seemed so mature and steady now, unlike a child.

When the guard woke up, he found that the children woke up early today and said happily, "You're more and more obedient. Great. If so, you will get fewer beatings, and we will be less likely to get angry. Let's go out for breakfast and start training."

The guard yawned and was off his guard. He felt that the children should have surrendered. He even asked for a cigarette from the man beside him and lighted it.

Jacob did not receive a reply from Tim, so he was a little anxious.

"Are you still listening?"

"You always talk nonsense."

Tim hung up the phone directly, feeling somewhat depressed.

Nicole aside, that brat Lucas was pretty adorable, wasn't he? Though Lucas would often play tricks on him, he was not bad.

Tim sighed and then got up to put on his clothes.

He must have owed Lucas in his previous life. So, in this life that brat came back for it.

With that thought in mind, Tim felt much more comfortable.

If Jacob and Tim were right, something must have happened to the Green family. As for what had happened, Tim couldn't inquire about it, so he had to rescue Lucas without them knowing it.

He was now the successor of the Louis family but he was only a businessman, not very powerful and famous. It would make more sense for the Don family to mobilize the government.

After Tim got up, he went to the Don's to see Jason and sent the message from Lucas to him.

Obviously, Jason was also confused and stunned.

"Something happened to Lucas?"

"Isn't this obvious? If he could call the Greens for help, he would definitely send a message to Samuel. But he didn't. It means that there might be something wrong with the Green family. Now, I can bring the police over directly but it'll stir things up. I'm afraid of alarming them so I'm here to ask you if you can help, Jason."

Jason became worried after hearing what Tim had said.

After all, Lucas was a member of the Don family.

"I'll go to the police station now."

Jason left everything behind, went to the police station with Tim and secretly set up some arrangements. Tim then went to the shooting club to check it.

When the manager of the club saw that Tim was here, he was somewhat surprised.

"Mr. Tim? Why are you here?"

"I heard that there's a shooting club. It's been a long time since I retired. I haven't practiced for so long. How much do you charge here?"

Tim still looked like a shitty guy.

The manager answered smilingly, "Mr. Tim, you can come here to play without any charge. You can choose whatever you want to play."

"What? No, no, no. You run it for money. I'm not a tyrant and I don't lack money to pay for it. Go, get me a VIP card. I'm going to have a good time here today."

Tim threw his bank card in front of the manager.

The manager knew Tim's temper. This roguish young master didn't allow others to refuse him.

The manager hurriedly asked someone to give Tim a VIP card. Of course, he had given Tim a discount.

Tim didn't pay much attention to that. After receiving the VIP card, he walked around and said, "Tell me about here. What else is here besides shooting?"

"What do you want to do for fun, Mr. Tim?"
