Chapter 102: I Don 't Want to See You Again

Without a doubt, Bella Thompson was sure Daniel Marshall had a hand in it.

She was determined to get rid of Daniel Marshall. "Orion Smith, I understand now. I'm going back to Yonder Group." "Alright, I'm hanging up now. Thanks, sis!"

After the call, Bella Thompson continued to grip her phone tightly. Her face had turned frighteningly grim, her eyes burning with uncontainable rage.

With red-rimmed eyes, she headed to Daniel's office to submit her resignation letter.

Without any hesitation, Daniel signed her resignation acceptance, saying nonchalantly: "Transfer your HR duties to the department manager. I'll have Finance settle with you. You don't need to come in this afternoon."

She had been with him at Marshall Corporation since he started. She had worked tirelessly, fought for him, and did it all without expecting him to be so ruthless. He didn't even attempt to make her stay.

He turned a blind eye to the injuries she sustained and the red mark on her face, not even bothering to show a hint of concern.

She had already fallen so low, yet he never gave her a proper look. She never really existed in his heart...

Remembering all these injustices, she felt a heartache too profound to describe, and began to feel despair rising within her.

In an instant, tears welled up in her eyes.

Trying to hold back, she blinked hard, trying not to let the tears fall.

“Daniel, you will regret this!”

Daniel slowly looked up at her, his eyes filled with disdain.

His voice was low, but carried a commanding power, “Get out!”

Her eyes filled with resentment, she glared at Daniel, all the while, revenge was brewing in her heart.

Before leaving, she decided to stir the pot.

“Olivia Jenkins doesn’t really love you. She’s still in love with her ex-boyfriend. She’s still with him, Daniel, do you enjoy being a cuckold? For a woman, who doesn’t have you in her heart, are you willing to degrade yourself?”

“If Charmy Bennett sees you now, she would be heartbroken, she would be uneasy, she...”

Unexpectedly, Daniel glared back at her with a vicious and ominous look in his eyes, yelling, “Get out!”

Suddenly startled, she froze, her voice caught in her throat mid-sentence.

Fear filled her eyes, her unshed tears spilling over.

Daniel exuded a chilling aura, his voice commanding, “People like you, who are full of themselves, do not have the right to mention Charmy Bennett. My wife isn’t someone you can casually gossip about. Until now, you still don’t understand where you went wrong? Did a donkey kick you in the head?”

“Both Charmy Bennett and my wife are not as selfish as you are. You brought your present predicament upon yourself.”

“I don’t know what the Marshall family promised you, but I won’t fulfill it here.

Nobody can manipulate me, and I won’t tolerate others scheming against me.”

“Olivia Jenkins is my only wife, and will continue to be! Since the day we got married, I have never considered divorce.”

“I advise you not to mess with my wife. You’re no match for her, and I won’t tolerate your mischief any longer. I don’t want to see you again. Take care of yourself.”

It was as though her throat was being squeezed, she was too choked up to say a word.

She sobbed uncontrollably, hating Daniel Marshall and Olivia Jenkins intensely.

With her fists clenched tight, trembling with suppressed fury, her knuckles were turning white.

Showing no mercy, Daniel picked up the internal line, asking his secretary to escort her out.

Through gritted teeth, she snarled: “You won’t be happy, Daniel! No woman who is with you will ever have a good end.. Charmy Bennett is the perfect example! “
