Chapter 247: Caring for Her, Indulging Her

“If you don’t want to talk about business, what else would you want to talk about? Hmm?”

The corners of Daniel Marshall’s sensual lips lifted slightly, transforming him entirely in an instant.

The harsh lines of his face softened considerably, making his cool and handsome face even more attractive and captivating.

At this moment, Daniel’s gentle gaze seemed to be tinged with brandy, making people slightly drunk. Olivia Jenkins only took one look before quickly averting her almond – shaped eyes.

Hmph... she would not fall for his flirting.

With the three billion that her father specifically left for her, she could finally breathe easy and start reorganizing the Jenkins Group, no longer losing sleep over financing like before.

Because she decided to accept the three billion in funds to save the Jenkins Group, she had lost her qualification to request a divorce. She recognized this marriage, so she compromised with Daniel.

Nothing is absolute. She was merely waiting patiently for Daniel to tire of her and propose a divorce himself, which was why she stated requests and additional conditions.

“Fine, it’s decided then. Once the procedures related to the will are completed, we’ll sign an agreement.”

“Once the agreement is signed, there is no turning back.”

“I can hear just fine. I don’t need your reminder.”

Daniel stared at Olivia with his sharp, hawk-like eyes, as if he wanted to say something but held back.

They seemed to have reconciled, but there was still an invisible barrier between them.

Daniel was fully aware of this little woman's thoughts; he was merely going along with them.

Unhappiness stirred within Daniel, leaving him feeling melancholic.

After Olivia accompanied Daniel for all the medical examinations, she returned to the Jenkins Group.

In the afternoon, under the witness of Martin Wallace and Lawyer Hall, both Olivia and Mrs. Jenkins signed to acknowledge Andrew Jenkins' will. Mrs. Jenkins glanced coldly at Olivia, "Additionally, Lawyer Hall has something to announce."

Clearing his throat, Lawyer Hall announced Mrs. Jenkins' decision, "Given my advancing age and declining strength, I hereby entrust Hannah Jenkins to exercise shareholder's legal rights on my behalf."

Once Lawyer Hall finished reading, Mrs. Jenkins justifiably said, "These are my shares, I have the right to dispose of them and don't need anyone else's consent. As of now, Hannah Jenkins will serve as the second largest shareholder of the Jenkins Group on my behalf."

Pressing his lips together, Martin Wallace glanced at Olivia before saying, "There is no issue legally, Mrs. Jenkins does have the right to freely dispose of her shares."

Olivia stared at her grandmother, her bright eyes filled with sharpness, "I respect your right to freely dispose of your shares. However, there is one thing I want to directly ask my grandmother. Did you have a DNA test with dad when MO Seraphina brought Hannah and George Jenkins into the house years ago?"

In a split second, Hannah's pupils slightly changed color, and her hands were tightly clenched together.

She didn't dare to look at Olivia, her heart was tight, and even her breathing slowed down.

Upon hearing Olivia's words, Mrs. Jenkins became upset and stared at Olivia, "I know you are jealous of Hannah, you always try to stir up trouble, and you just can't stand to see this family in peace. You are really cruel. You have already got a major stake, do you have the face to target Hannah? Shameless!" Hannah quickly comforted her grandmother and tried to calm her down.

Hannah also exhibited a very surprised reaction.

"Grandma, I don't wish to be the proxy. I am content just staying by your side.

Why not give the proxy rights to my sister instead? She can lead the Jenkins

Group back to the right path. You need to trust her."

Grabbing Hannah's hand, Mrs. Jenkins defended her fiercely, "Olivia, don't you dare say such things that stir up trouble. The person who did wrong was MO Seraphina, Hannah and George are innocent. I won't let you hurt them.."
